TROUBLE IS FEARED; TROOPS UNDER ARMS

Seriousness of Situation, It Is Believed, Will Be Aggravated Monday Noon When Carriers Begin Recruiting Men to Go Into Shops.

(United Press.)

NEW YORK, July 15.—Seventy-five thousand maintenance of way men, section hands, track walkers and other employes associated with the American Federation of Labor shop crafts will stop "work" Monday morning in the Metropolitan area about New York.

This was announced tonight by John J. Dowd, chairman of the Central strike committee of the shop crafts.

"The men are eager to strike," said Dowd. "We have had reports from locals over the greater New York district today and they all state the men are through waiting. They are going to stop. They were ttired waiting for Grable to issue a call to strike."

In Serious Deadlock.

(International News Service.)

CHICAGO, July 15.—Deadlocked by "fundamental differences," which makes an immediate settlement of the nationwide railroad strike virtually impossible, the country tonight faces the spread of this strike of 100,000 more men who are scheduled to join the walkout on Monday and the additional threatened runaway strike of 400,000 Maintenance of Way employes.

The seriousness of the situation, it is feared, will be aggravated at noon on Monday, when the railroads throughout the country will begin an intensive recruiting effort to substiute the men out on strike.

Trouble is feared and troops in several states are under arms, ready for instantaneous service, backed up by the assurance of Secretary of War Weeks that federal troops will

Strikes Compel Big Steel Mills To Shut Up Shop

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, July 15.—Gradual closedown of the score of steel mills in the Mahoning-Shenandoah valley—the second largest steel manufacturing district in the United States—started late today because of a shortage of coal resulting from the railroad and miners' strikes.

The Republic Iron and Steel company laid off twelve hundred of the 5,000 men employed in the local plant, and closed down two of its three blast furnaces and the Bessemer department.

The workers were told that their services "probably would not be required for some time."

Tonight the Trumbull-Cliffs Furnace company at Warren, Ohio, announced that operation of a six hundred ton blast furnace could hot be continued. Four hundred men of the five hundred men employed there were affected.

ISSUES A WARNING AGAINST DRAFTING RALWAY SHOPMEN

Declared Conscription Will be Followed By Widespread Outbreaks.

Jewell Says No Telling What Will Happen If U. S. Decides to Draft.

(United Press.)

CHICAGO, July 15.—Warning of widespread outbreaks in case the government attempts to draft striking railroad shopmen into service, was issued at union headquarters here tonight.

"The strike has been comparatively peaceful so far, but there is no telling what would happen if an effort was made to conscript 400,000 men," Bert M. Jewell, union president declared.

Both unions and railroads prepared tonight for a long battle.

Employment agencies in all leading cities of the country hired thousands of men to do the work of the strikers.

"The railroads are hiring many unskilled men, merely to show their numbers," Jewell said, "but they will Nation Wide Industrial paralysis Threatens As Result of Two-Fold Tie-up of Railway Shopmen and United Mine Workers.

PROSPECTS OF EARLY SETTLEMENT DIMMER

Harding May Decide to Take Over Two Industries and, It is Said A Conscript Labor to Keep Them Going, if Necessity Demands.

(United Press.)

WASHINGTON, July 15. — The menace of industrial paralysis hung over the United States tonight.

Despite the efforts on the part of government egencies in Washington and Chicago to bring together the leaders of the warriny factions in the breat basic industries of coal and transportation, prospects for an early settlement grew steadily dimmer throughout the day.

Imminent danger of a complete tie-up of all shipping on the Great Lakes as a result of a coal shortage is reported in a dispatch from Cleveland which says only a four-day supply of bunker fuel remains east of Duluth.

At the same time, dispatches from Youngstown declared that unless the great bins of the steel mills are immediately replenished, a shotdown,

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., July 15.—Officials of the San Fe railroad today sent a telegram to Gov. W. D. Stephens charging striking shopmen here with assaulting strikebreakers and railroad guards. The situation was characterized as acute and while no appeal for troops was made, it is reported railroad officials contemplate such a request in the event of further disorders.

PASTOR OBJECTS TO EXTRADITION

Fears Facing Members of Church More Than He Does His Family.

Girl Says She Will Marry Culp and Be Mother to His Nine Children.

PORT HURON, Mich., July 15. — Doubt tonight entered the mind of Rev. William W. Culor, whether he would waive requisition to Ohio in answer of a charge of wife desertion, growing out of his elopement from there several weeks ago.

Sheriff John Maines told newspapermen he had received the first intimation tonight that the pastor objected to going back to Spring Valley to face his congregation as he had first announced.

The pastor said he feared to face the church members and farmers more than his family, the sheriff stated.

Ready to Marry Culp.

PORT HURON, Mich., July 15. — "These many-made mis-marriages are all wrong and some day the world will admit that we are right," sobbed 19-year-old Miss Esther Hughes, as she stood in the county jail here tonight offering to marry her affinity, the Rev. W. W. Culp and accept his nine children as her own, if his wife would divorce him.

"God told us to do what we have done, and I know it is all right with the All Powerful Lord."

Miss Hughes, a music teacher, and the pastor eloped and came to Tashmoo Park, here they were arrested and are being held for violation of the Mann act.

"I went to help him stay on the right track," said Miss Hughes. "He only took about $330 from the church and if they had left us alone we would have paid that back."

The Rev. Culp said:

"I have hundreds of times thought of suicide as the most easy means of getting rid of my troubles, and now I wish I were dead."

Tears ran down his cheeks.

STRAIN TELLS ON SLAYER'S HUSBAND

Phillips Declares, However, He Will Stand By His Wife Until End.

Says Merciful Providence Guards People From Knowing Future.

(United Press.)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 15. — The same thing that has happened to me might happen to any of us, it is a Merciful Providence that guards from us all knowledge of the future."

A. L. Phillips, husband of the alleged slayer in the hammer murder, was in a philosophical mood tonight, with drawn face and bloodshot eyes, he considered in retrospect the nerve frazzling events into which the last three days have plunged him.

Carefully chaperoned by Deputy Sheriff Frank De War, Phillips spent today winding up his business affairs and now stands ready to devote his undivided attention during the coming months to his wife's defense.

He has not altered his original intention to "stand by her" when Mrs. Phillips goes on trial for the murder of Mrs. Alberta Meadows, whom Mrs. Phillips is accused of having slain with the weapon as in the wild fury of the stone age.

In spite of his protests that he has slept well the last two nights, Phillips is plainly o the ragged edge of collapse. He tilts nervously backward in his chair, demands cigarets, smokes them with quick, short puffs and strains to seem at ease.

The husband is little more than a boy and his youthfulness is accentuated by a Texan drawl. He's rather good looking with heavy hair, blue eyes with a glint in them and evidences of birth and breeding above the average.

Denver Attorney Is Out For Governor

PROMISES 64 TRUCKS

Public Works Secretary Johnson Informs Federal Government Nebraska Has That Many Ready For Use in Hauling Mail.

INQUIRY IS SENT OUT BY BUREAU

Vehicles Available Here Part of the 440 Army Trucks Donated to This State In Post-War Distribution.

"How many serviceable motor trucks can you turn over to the department immediately to be used by the postoffice department for the transportation of mail?"

The foregoing official inquiry from the division of war materials in the federal bureau of public roads at Washington reached Public Works Secretary Johnson on Saturday afternoon, following the receipt of press dispatches saying the government was preparing to handle mails overland by means of automobile trucks in case the strike should be extended so as to interfere seriously with train operation.

There are sixty-four trucks on hand in the Lincoln yards of the state highways bureau, which are in shape for use, and Secretary Johnson at once wired back that these would be placed at the disposal of the federal government whenever they are needed. Half a dozen others are in the yards, but not in serviceable condition.

These are what remains of the 440 army trucks which were donated to the state of Nebraska in the post-war distribution made three years ago to aid the different states in constructing federal and state aid highways. The remainder have been turned over to county boards and the state no longer has control ofer them.

Whenever oJhnson gets word from Washington that the trucks here are wanted for hauling mails, he will deliver them to whomever the Washington authorities designate. It is expected that most of the Nebraska trucks will be used to carry mails within this state, or between its principal cities and those of neighboring states. Some trucks can doubtless be secured in the same way in every state.

Two government men who were in Lincoln during the week told Secretary Johnson that in all probability the bureau of war materials, which originally had charge of the army trucks and other left-over war supplies, would be reorganized temporarily as an auxiliary of the post-office department and would be charged with the duty of moving mails by means of motor trucks.

It will be necessary, however, for congress to adopt a resolution authorizing the former army trucks to be utilized in this way, as they were turned over to the states under a resolution expressly limiting their use to state highway construction and maintenance. Congress will undoubtedly take this action if President Harding requests it.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Weather predictions for the week beginning Monday are:

Upper Mississippi and Lower Missouri Valleys: Generally fair weather but with a probability of widely scattered thundershowers; temperature near or somewhat above normal.

BRITISH LABOR GROWING UNEASY

Threaten to Plunge Nation Into General Strike If House Bill Passes.

(International News Service)

LONDON, July 15.—Serious labor troubles loom threateningly upon the British horizon tonight. Britain is watching the strike troubles of the United States from under a cloud of her own. The house of commons is considering a bill limiting the rights of trades unions. Laborites are bitterly hostile to this measure and threaten to plunge the nation into a general strike of unionized workers if it is enacted into law.

Executives of the British coal miners' union will meet soon to consider the wage question and grave fears already exist that these discussions will lead to a walkout in the coal fields. Already several local strikes have been called in the Welsh coal fields.

The British railroad commission handed down decisions today affecting the wages of railroad shopmen. The shopmen claim that the decisions are unsatisfactory and are threatening to strike.

Dock workers are also restive and are threatening trouble.

British dairy workers have been ordered by their union to strike, but the order has not yet been obeyed. If they quit, London will be menaced with a milk famine.

Only the very rich can afford to patronize the cafes and cabarets of the Russian capital, where living is more expensive than any other city in the world.

Hundreds of big business houses and dwellings have been repainted and new shops are being opened up.

Burns, wealthy shoe merchant was predicted today by attorneys for the widow, Mrs. Adeline Lew Burns, who is combatting efforts of Burns' blood delatives to prove he was of unsound mind when he devised his $100,000 estate to her.

Defense counsel added they thought it unlikely they would call as a witness, Gloria Swanson, film actress, and Mrs. Burns' daughter by a previous marriage as had been expected earlier in the trial.

CAMPAIGN NEARS END

Political Pot Sizzles As Voters Prepare to Go to the Polls Tuesday — Senatorial and Gubernational Races Most Interesting.

TOTAL VOTE EXPECTED TO BE UNDER 200,000

Tuesday Will Witness Nebraska's First Midsummer Primary—Spirited Contest in Lancaster for County Offices.

Nebraska's first midsummer primary occuring in the month of July comes next Tuesday, when the men and women of the state will decide by their ballots who shall be the nominees of the respective political parties for states, congressional, legislative and county offices, and on the nonpolitical ticket for supreme court judges and university regents in certain districts and for state superintendent and county superintendents.

Chief interest centers in the choice of candidates for United States senator and governor on the republican, democrattic and progressive tickets. The race for these offices has been keen and results are admittedly uncertain except in the case of Senator Hitchcock, who is assured of renomination in tthe democratic primary.

In Lancaster and other counties there are spirited contests for local offices like sheriff, county attorney and county commissioners or super supervisors, which will contribute to the activities of primary day and to general interest in the outcome of the voting.

Heretofore, the state primaries have been held in August, a month later than the present time, but under the new law the date is shifted ahead, while the state conventions of the different parties will

TRACKMEN DECIDE STRIKE QUESTION NEXT WEDNESDAY

Final Decision Will Be Made At Meeting Called For Detroit, Mich.

Every Indication Points to Decision Favoring Order for Walkout.

(International News Service.)

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Decision whether 400,000 Maintenance of Way men will join the big railroad strike will be made at Detroit next Wednesday or Thursday, E. F. Grable, president of the Maintenance of Way brotherhood, announced tonight.

Grable called a meeting of the executive committee of his union following a two hour conference with President Harding.

Every indication, it was admitted, is that the men will strike.

Grable in the longest conference granted by President Harding in many months, told the president that the railroad strike is spreading rapidly and warned it would continue to spread.

While the executive committee of the maintenance of way may not sanction a strike, according to Grable his men will soon be forced to join the striking shopmen.

"Ultimately," Grable said tonight, "the Maintenance of Way men will be driven to suspend work by the attitude of some railroads which are forcing them to do strikers' work."

Out of Grable's long talk with the president, it was intimated, may come fruit from a suggestion that the only way to settle the railroad strike is for the president to demand that the railroad executives and railroad employes meet in a joint conference. Harding, according to Grable, declared he would take the suggestion under consideration, but asserted he would use his powers "to the limit to force an end to the strike."

In labor circles it was admitted that if the Maintenance of Way men join the strikers quick victory for the workers will result.

"No man can say now whether we shall strike or not," Grable said. "There is a large demand for strike and decision will be made at the Detroit meeting."

JURY PROBE OF HERRIN MURDER

Brundage Says Work Will Begin As Soon As Community Cools Down.

(International News Service.)

CHICAGO July 15.—Grand jury action to fix responsibility for the srecent coal mine war fare near Herrin, Ill., will begin as soon as the community has had a chance to cool down, Attorney General E. J. Brundage of Illinois, declared here today upon his return from a personal trip of invesugation in Williamson county.

Brundage said that "it looks as though the mine owners were indiscreet in their display of armed strength." He declared that mine guards were accustomed to terrorize the community.

"The residents of the county are apathetic," Brundage said, referring to their attitude towards the recent tragedy. "They take the attitude that the murders have been committed and that they can't be undone, so why do anything.

"We have some information that we can bring before the grand jury, but we are not going to call a grand jury until the community cools down and we can do so with some assurance that indictments will be forthcoming."

Brundage declared he had investigated the report that the bodies of those killed in the fighting had been mutilated and found no evidence to support it.

Mrs. Edith Clemow, chief operator, answered the call.

"Send help quick—a little boy has been killed at Collins avenue and Twelfth street," said an excited voice.

Mrs. Clemow went through the routine of her work, notifying the proper station and calling the coroner.

A few minutes later another report arrived:

Burlington's Claim Held Up.—The state capitol commission has not allowed the Burlington railroad's bil for over $6,000 on account of materials furnished by it to build the spur tracks on H street and Capitol square, now being used for transportation of materials in connection with the new capitol project. The Burlington originally agreed to build the H street line without cost to the state, but backed out when the city council refused to permit the operation of steam locomotives over that line. Thereupon the capitol commission itself took hold and had the track laid. It takes the position that the Burlington was bound by its original agreement to do no less than furnish materials without charge.

MOTHER-IN-LAW SUED FOR $15.000

Linderman Claims Mrs. Burkholder Alienated Wife's Affections.

Charles D. Linderman filed a petition in district court here Saturday against his mother-in-law, Mrs. Alise Burkholder, charging her with having alienated the affections of his wife. He demands judgment for $15.00.

Linderman married Mrs Burkholder's daughter Nora Cameron, in Belmont, December 24, last. They lived at the Burkholder home from the time of their marriage until February 3, when he left. Two days later Mrs. Burkholder swore out a peace warrant against her son-in-law. He was arrested and imprisoned and later brought suit against Mrs. Burkholder for $10,000 for alleged false arrest and imprisonment. That action was recently tried and a verdict of $1 was returned in favor of Mr. Linderman. He has anounced that the case will be appealed to the supreme court.

Mr. Linderman also brought suit against his wife several weeks ago for divorce, charging that she denies him her society and companionship. Mrs. Linderman filed a cross-petition demanding that a divorce be awarded to her on grounds of extreme cruelty. Mrs. Linderman declared she had no peace of mind since their marriage. Mrs. Linderman is about middle-aged and her husband is past the half-century mark.

In the last suit Mr. Linderman alleges his mother-in-law during his residence in the Burkholder home purseud a course of upbraiding and abuse of the plaintiff, attacking his character and ordering him from the house and persuaded her daughter to cease her affection for Linderman. She made false statements about him to his wife and still harbors Mrs. Linderman in her home it is declared.

Linderman alleges he has spent more than $1,000 in an attempt to recover his wife and "bring Mrs. Burkholder to justice"

State's Cash Pile Shows Big Slump

In the first two weeks of July, the cash balance in tthe state treasury of Nebraska has decreased by nearly $800,000 due to the falling off in receipts while disbursements continue heavy. The balance on June 30, which was near the high water mark for the year, stood at $4,373,300, but it has now declined to $3,591,500 and will drop still further during the remainder of July.

The state school apportionment of about $600,000 is now being paid, and over $300,000 of treasury cash is being used to purchase bonds as investments of the American Legion relief fund. Current expenditures for general purposes are also running about the same as heretofore.

There will be comparatively little additional revenue from taxes until next December, and during the five months intervening it is expected that the treasury balance will again be depleted almost to the vanishing point, as it was last year.

Sutton Girls Asks Supreme Court to Annul Her Marriage

Having failed to secure a decree from the district court of Clay county, annulling her marriage to Grover C. Baker on November 5 last year, Lydia E. Baker, of Sutton, whose maiden name was Rath, has appealed to the state supreme court. She claims that Baker, who was 29 years old at the time of the marriage, exercised an undue influence over her and misrepresented her age as 19, when in fact she was not quite 18 and therefore not legally qualified to wed without her parents' consent.

The couple went from Sutton to Saronville and were married there. Baker, in his answer to her petition, stated that they came to Lincoln and remainde here for two days. When they went back to Sutton to ask forgiveness, her mother refused to let them enter the house, he says.

Mrs. Baker's suit is brought in the name of John Rath, jr., as guardian.

ACCIDENT VICTIM MAY NOT RECOVER

Mrs. Chris J. Spellman Received Internal Injuries In Crash.

Husband Offers $100 For the Arrest of Driver of Speeding Car.

Following a decided turn to the worse Saturday afternoon in the condition of Mrs. Chris J. Spellman, 2000 L street, driver of the Ford touring car which was sideswiped by a racing car on South Fourteenth street road late Friday evening, Mr. Spellman offered a reward of $100 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the driver of the big, speeding machine, who was responsible for the accident and who raced off in a cloud of dust after the crash. Mrs. Spellman and Mrs. E. J. Kipling, 343 South Twentieth street, and her one year old son were injured in the accident.

According to Dr. J. W. Carothers, who is attending Mrs. Spellman, she received internal injuries

"It is doubtful yet whether Mrs. Spellman will recover," Dr. Carothers said Saturday evening. "It is impossible to make any predictions as yet. She has a good chance for recovery if complications do not set in, but she is in a serious condition."

Mrs. Kipling and her son were able to leave St. Elizabeth's hospital early Saturday morning, but are both still suffering from cuts and bruises received in the accident.

Mr. Spellman aided by police officers, spent all day Saturday following different clues. He said Saturday that he would extend his investigation to Omaha.

EVERY FARMER WORTH $6,826

Stuhr's Bulletin Shows Nebraska Second in Per Capita Farm Wealth.

State Leads in Wild Hay Production—Ranks High in Agriculture.

Despite low prices for farm products and unfavorable financial conditions affecting agriculture during the past two years, the farmers of Nebraska are not by any means a poverty-stricken class if federal census figures on agricultural wealth of this and other states furnish a reliable criterion.

A bulletin recently prepared by State Agriculture Secretary Stuhr, based on these statistics, places Nebraska second in per capita wealth of its farm population, with Iowa in first place. An average of $6,826 in value of property owned is credited to every man, woman and child living on farms in this state. The average value of Nebraska farms, including live stock and equipment is placed at $33,771.

Cereals, vegetables and fruits produced on the fertile soil of Nebraska amount in value to $519,729,000 per year, while livestock and its products including poultry, butter and eggs, are lumped at $387,869,000 a year.

Leads in Hay Production.

In its production of wild hay and alfalfa, Nebraska outranks all other states, Newport, Rock county, is said to be the largest shipping station of wild hay in the world, loading out about 2,600 cars annually. The annual value of the wild hay crop is about $29,500,000.

For forty years, alfalfa has been popular in the state, the first fields being sown in the early eighties. The average annual production of this crop is 2,926,285 tons, valued at $44,411,000.

In acreage and production of corn, Nebraska ranks third. The total annual value of the corn crop, based on the 1917-1921 averages, is $156,856,800 To this very important crop, the livestock industry is largely indebted. Due to the abundance of this feed, about 300,000 steers, 200,000 sheep and 3,500,000 hogs are raised and fattened annually.

Other important crops are wheat, valued at $90,688,700 in which the state ranks fifth in production and sugar beets, in which it ranks second in yield per acre and fifth in production.

The state holds a high rank in the number of purebred livestock. With 112,502 head of purebred hogs and 74,174 purebred cattle of the beef breeds, it is excelled by only four states. The dairy and poultry industries are rapidly coming to the front, and annually add about $65,000,000 to the farmer's income.

Good Soil and Climate.

The state is mostly covered with a deep, mellow, loam soil which needs no commercial fertilizer, these essentials being added by the use of legumes in rotation, and the return to the soil of barnyard manures.

The water supply of the state is plentiful and is supplied by springs, wells, lakes and streams. Nearly the whole state is underlaid with artesian water. There is immense water power in the state waiting for development.

The average annual temperature for the state is 48.1 degrees. The length of the growing season ranges from 130 to 160 days. Most of the 23.64 inches of rainfall is precipitated during the growing season.

"Considered as a whole, Nebraskas climatic conditions are healthful and agreeable to a high degree, and well adapted to the furtherance of her apparent destiny to always be one of the nation's most productive agricultural areas," the bulletin says.

NEBRASKA ANTI PICKETING LAW NOW OF INTEREST

"Right-to-Work" Act Suspended by Referendum Petition to be Voted on Soon.

Manufacturers' Association Says Bill Violates no Man's Lawful Rights.

Imminence of a general railroad strike, occasional interference by strikers with men at work, the murderous mob outbreak at Herrin, Ill., and federal court injunctions in Nebraska to restrict picketing around railroad shops and yards have combined to center public attention in this state on the anti-picketing, or "right to work," law which is to be voted upon in a popular referendum next November.

This law, enacted by the legislature of 1921, was suspended by referendum petitions which the non partisan league and other organizations circulated and filed a year ago. The farm bureau federation, which joined in the referendum on three other measures, did not take part in this one

The Nebraska maunfacturers' association, which was primarily responsible for the passage of the "right to work" law, as its advocates term it, has filed with the secretary of state a lengthy argument to be included in the referendum pamphlet which will be mailed out to 325,000 voters of the state in September. Counter arguments will be filed by opponents of the law within the next week.

Plea by Law's Supporters.

Here are some extracts from the manufacturers' association argument submitted by Commissioner Otto H. Zumwinkel of that organization.

"Do you believe that every law abiding man and woman has the right to work unmolested at whatever lawful occupation or business he or she may desire to engage in?

"Do you believe that in free America even labor disputes should be conducted in the American way,—without violence, intimidation, or other infringement of the rights of American citizenship?

"Do you believe in law and order?

"If you do, you will vote for this 'right to work law.'

"Your state legislature enacted this law, after giving it long and careful consideration, because it was convinced that the time had come when the great state of Nebraska should express itself on this subject and make clear by statute what acts constitute a violation of the fundamental right to work or to engage in lawful occupation of business, so that workers, strikers, employers and public officers might all know and understand their rights and duties in industrial controversies and be governed thereby. A number of states already have such a law.

No Lawful Right Taken Away.

"By a careful reading of the law you will readily see that no lawful right of any man, group, or class has been taken away.

"Workers may still have their unions, collective bargaining, and other aims and no limitation is placed upon the right to strike, but this law does endeavor to remove from strikes and industrial controversies in Nebraska, the personal violence, destruction of property, force, terrorism, coercion and intimidation, which under the guise of 'picketing' have always been associatel with such controversies everywhere and always.

"The supreme court of the United States in a case decided last December (American Steel Foundries vs. Tri-City Central Trades Council) clearly supports the Nebraska law on this point.

Not "Peaceful" Persuasion.

"The second answer to this 'peaceful' picketing argument is that long experience with strikes everywhere has taught there is no such thing as 'peaceful' picketing, if that term is applied to the facts. Why? Because it never stops there. Chief Justice Taft said 'the name "picket" indicates indicated a militant purpose inconsistent with peaceful persuasion.'

"In practically every strike, actual violence sooner or later follows, 'peaceful picketing:' and intimidation by presence of numbers, threats and vile names is always present from the beginning. Not every man who runs the picket line is assaulted, but enough are to put fear into the breast of every man who remains at work, so that the mere presence of pickets constitutes intimidation.

"So-called 'peaceful' picketing was carried on in Nebraska City during the packing house strike last winter, and yet so many men were beaten up that it became necessary for the state of Nebraska to send troops to preserve order, at an expense of many thousands of dollars to the tax payers of the state.

Quotes Newspaper Reports.

"In the Omaha papers, each morning walkouts;' 'Pepper is thrown into appeared notices as follows: 'Babe hit as shots fired into packer worker's home;' 'Worker is beaten unconscious by five men Wednesday;' 'Street fighting is most vicious during walkouts;' 'Pepper is thrown into policemen's eyes by pickets;' 'Strikers charge cops with bricks;' 'A crowd of 15 men terrorized Mrs. — when they threatened to burn the house, because her husband, a foreman at the Swift plant, refused to strike;' 'Mobs of pickets surround packing houses and attack workers.'

"During this strike hundreds of men and women were ready and willing to work, but were intimidated by so-called 'peaceful' picketing, with the result that the packing industry of this state was crippled for weeks, and stockgrowers throughout the state were interfered with in their business.

"No relief is afforded the man or woman who is assaulted and injured because the assailant later be punished therefor, or because, after much violence has occured, a court may enjoin further acts of violence. This law is intended to do away with the causes of violence, before the harm is done. If picketing had been stopped in the coal strike at Herrin, Ill., the horrible massacre of human beings desiring to work would probably have been averted."

When Is a Widow Not a Widow?

A good many years ago a man drew his own Will and by its terms provided that certain real estate should go to his wife "in fee simple so long as she remains my widow." A number of years after his death the widow wished to borrow some money, giving the real estate as security.

Did this woman have in reality more than a life estate in the land? At the moment it seemed to be hers in fee simple; but at any time she might marry again and defeat the title she seemed to have.

The attorney who examined the title found that the word "widow" is of Sanskrit derivation and literally means a woman deprived of a man or without a man. "A woman whose husband is dead (Com. v. Powell, 51 Pa. St., 438) "A woman who has lost her husband by death" (Cole v. Mayne, 122 Fed. 836) are two leading definitions.

But will remarriage to another man change her status of "widow"? "A woman, although the wife of another, is still the widow of her former husband" is held in Matter of Ray, 13 Misc. (N. Y.) 480; and in McGill v. Deming, 44 Ohio St. 645. So that even if she did marry again she would still be the widow of her first husband, and owner of the land in fee simple.

However, that did not end the search. It was found in Green v. Hewitt, 97 Ill. 113, that "so long as she remains my widow" implies a continuance of the estate during widowhood and no longer; and that a devise or bequest to a wife "during her widowhood" is a gift for life only which may be terminated by a second marriage. And that meant that her title was in reality only a life estate.

An endless amount of litigation has found records in the law reports, much of which arose over the careless or inexact use of words, and very often over home-made Wills. It is wiser to have your lawyer draw your Will. And our Trust Officers will gladly advise with you regarding contemplated provisions.

JEFFERIS CLOSES UNIQUE CAMPAIGN

Meets Many Voters But Makes Only Three Speeches.

Urges Electors To Vote For Best Qualified Candidates.

(Special to The Star)

BLAIR, Neb., July 15.—"Let the best man win," is the way Congressman Jefferis closed his campaign here for United States senator. He urged republicans to vote on Tuesday for candidates best qualified to command the support of a united party. Jefferis' campaign has been unique, he having no campaign manager and no headquarters. He visited nearly every county in the state, but made only three speeches, all of these upon solicitation.

He returned tonight to Omaha. In his address here tonight he said in part:

"It is not within the range of possibility for a citizen to be fully informed on all legislation pending before congress. One has neither the time nor the material to acquaint himself with the vast amount of data compiled on each important measure. The farmer and his wife, the laboring man and woman, the employer and the employe, the members of the various professions are occupied with their daily tasks and glean most of their information from the press, much of which of necessity is brief and cannot discuss hte myriad details which go to make up legislation. Thefathers of the republic saw this and provided for it through representative government, by which the people select candidates in whom they have confidence to represent them in legislative and executive halls. It is imperative then, that the voters know something of the qualities and qualifications of the men for whom they are asked to vote. For the past month, I have visited many counties in our state, meeting thousands of people, getting their views and giving mine. I adopt this method for two reasons, namely—that the people may meet me face to face, hand to hand, and that I may know their trend of thought. In this way I have learned much that will prove of value on my return to Washington.

Wants People's Views

"Campaigns are too often a sort of flying circus, the candidate expounding his views from the rear of a high powered automobile, then hastening pell-mell to the next town. Such procedure makes for many speeches and consequently notoriety, but to my mind it fails to reach the heart of the people and is not conducive to an understanding of the public needs. I have therefore come to Blair, not to ask votes as a candidate for United States senator ,but rather that we may meet together in common council. I want your views, that as your representative I may correctly and faithfully interpret them in congress. Let us understand each other.

"Slightly over sixtee'n months ago, the republican party, headed by President Harding, took the reins of national government. World war wreckage and Wilsonism plus reckless investments and wanton extravagances on the part of many people, had plunged us into a maelstrom of debt, governmental expenses had trebled and we were owing thirty billions of dollars. It was a colossal task, but as in the dark days following the Civil war, the republican elephant put its huge bulk to the task, and notwithstanding the kicking, biting and squealing democratic mule, we have gone forward. This is evidenced by the headline, "Nation Striding Toward Prosperity in Industry," which appeared not in a republican newspaper, but in the leading democratic organ of the state, the World-Herald, under date of July 9. The article which followed stated that industrial prosperity was dawning, unemployment was decreasing rapidly and that hundreds of men were demanded at Lincoln, Hastings and Syracuse, Nebraska. A recent dispatch state that the funding commission appointed by congress had reported that Great Britain would soon pay the interest on its debt. This but indicates that the republican administration is clearing the tracks so that the prosperity special may continue on its way. Shall we halt the march of progress, unhitch the faithful elephant and once more try to make the grade with the balky, recalcitrant donkey? The answer is obvious.

"Now that the new era is dawning, we shall not forget those who by constructive and persistent effort hastened the better day. Let the republicans in this state unite on Tuesday to choose a candidate best qualified to carry our banner to certain victory in the fall. I shall cheerfully abide by the result."

School Districts Contracting For Several Buildings

(Special to The Star.)

SUPERIOR, Neb., July 15.—Unusual building activity is being noted upon the part of school districts in this vicinity. The Valley Home district has let the contract to Ambersom Bros., to erect a new school house at a cost of $3,300 and the Gard disirict has since contracted for the erection of a $5,000 building. This district in which the cement plant is located is receiving bids for a $5,000 building.

The Superior school board met last week and decided that the new school house building where the tennis courts are now located. Architect Hulso of Hutchison, Kan., met with the board and submitted plans. In a few days the blueprint will be completed.

PAWNEE CITY, Neb., July 15.—Since the recent death of W. M. Johnson, pioneer banker of this section, and former cashier of the Bank of Burchard, the directors of that institution have elected Miss Cora E. Johnson, his daughter, to succeed her father. Ellsworth Hart will become assistant cashier.

AMERICAN LEGION HAS CELEBRATION

Furnas County Service Men Have Full Day of Rare Sport.

(Special to The Star.)

CAMBRIDGE, Neb., July 15.—The American Legion of Furnas county held its annual convention and celebration in this city Thursday, the crowd in attendance being estimated at from 4,000 to 5,000. The forenoon was given over to business and in the afternoon the business men of Cambridge entertained the visitors. A short program of cowboy sports started the fun. After which State Commander Ritchie spoke for an hour, explaining the aims and objects of the Legion, both local and national.

The ball game which followed the address was won by Cambridge from Holbrook by a score of 10 to 1. After which picked teams from the Legion posts of the county put on a competitive drill, Cambridge carrying away the cup. During the big parade of Legion posts and bands, as the column reached the main part of town all stood at attention while the bugler, L. Moore, sounded retreat and the flag was lowered. The procession then led to the park, where a great barbecue had been prepared.

Two roast beeves were put away by more than 4,000 hungry celebrants. Music for the day was furnished by bands from Arapahoe, Oxford and Cambridge, a feature of the evening being a delightful concert by the Arapahoe musicians under the leadership of director Ruble. The festivities ended with a big dance in Thorndike hall, free to all men in uniform.

NATIONAL HISTORY PAGEANT SUBJECT

Superior People Making Elaborate Preparations For Spectacle.

(Special to The Star)

SUPERIOR, Neb., July 15.—The pageant for 1922 which is being written by Attorney J. H. Agee entitled, "The Melting Pot," at once naturally suggests the history of America and American ideals as the theme. Into the pageant will be woven the national characteristics of not only the Indians and Puritans, but also the French, Spaniards, Russians, Italians, Scotch, and all other nations which have sent immigrants here in large numbers. The theme will be represented in five acts which cover the great period of early development, the trend of civilization westward, the Civil war period, the world war period and the era of industrial development and prosperity.

Among the scenes which stand out because of their magnitude are the Indian attack on prairie schooners following the Oregon trail, the attack upon Fort Sumpter, and the battle between the forces of liberty and despotism. The wedding of John Alden and Priscilla Mullins will be a scene of quaint beauty. The erection of sod houses in the pioneer days of our western prairies will be instructive and soul stirring, while the final scene representing the happy days of prosperity will be perhaps the most beautiful. The music throughout will be an important feature as the band this year will be larger and better than ever before.

Methodist Church At Cambridge To Have New Edifice

(Special to The Star.)

CAMBRIDGE, Neb. July 15.—The Methodists of Cambridge will hold special services Sunday in connection with the laying of the cornerstone for their new house of worship, which is to cost $30,000. Chancellor Schreckengast of the Nebraska Wesleyan university will deliver the principal address.

Burlington Pushes Its Block System

(Special to The Star.)

PAWNEE CITY, Neb., July 15.—Work is well under way on the new block signal system on the Burlington railroad which is being built from Napier, Mo., to this city. With the completion of this project, the signal system will be complete from Saint Louis to Pawnee City. The management expects to continue it to Denver eventually.

Iowa Girl Picked Up by Police on Lower 5th Avenue

NEW YORK, July 15.—Helen Sinnett, 25, of Muscatine, Ia. said to be the daughter of Charles Sinnett, merchant of that city, was picked up on Lower Fifth avenue today by a police woman and imprisoned in Belevue hospital for vagrancy. The father, notified, asked that his daughter be held until he could reach New York, saying the girl had been missing more than a year, police declared.

J. N. NORTON

for Governor

To the Democrats of Nebraska:

We, the undersigned, members of the Democratic Party, believe that the success of our party in November depends upon the nomination for Governor of J. N. Norton.

We are a minority party. We have been so for nearly thirty-five years. But we need not always remain so. If this year we shall nominate for Governor a man who has the confidence of the level-headed farmers of the State and who understands the importance to all business of a prosperous agriculture, then the Democratic Party can and will become the major party. Elections in Nebraska are decided largely by the powerful farmer independent vote. We can only win by placing in nomination candidates who are entitled by experience and training to that vote.

It is a matter of congratulation to the Democrats that the farmers have filed their candidate for Governor on our ticket. If we nominate Mr. Norton, our party becomes the instrument through which the farmers will seek to obtain relief from high taxes and better their condition. Our party then becomes the major party.

Mr. Reddig says:--

"As you know there are 13 candidates for the office of County Sheriff, but I am the only one to publicly announce my platform.

I STAND FOR—

1—Strict enforcement of all laws within the jurisdiction of the Sheriff's office.

2—No prejudice or discrimination, a square and fair deal to everybody.

3—I will attempt to cut down the expenditures of tax payers' money by avoiding wasteful methods and extravagance in doing my duty.

4—I will discourage the offering of reward money, as I believe that the county is amply paying the sheriff to do his duty.

5—My deputies will be men of absolute integrity, their records must be clean and they will be compelled to work for their salary.

He is an excellent speaker, just in his prime, and is well known over his district."—Lincoln Evening State Journal at the close of the Senate Session in 1917.

"After a careful review of the gubernatorial situation this paper is of the opinion that Adam McMullen should be nominated by the Republicans of the state at the primary next Tuesday and elected governor by the people in November. The Journal is for Adam McMullen for governor because we believe that he has the courage and qualifications to see that state taxes are reduced by careful expenditure and by the elimination of useless and duplicated agencies. He is our choice because we believe he could render signal service to the state."—Journal, Falls City, July 11, 1922.

ISSUE APPEAL FOR BRYAN NOMINATION

Prominent Democrats Unite in Urging Harmony and Unity of Action.

Declare Their Party can Win if Hitchcock and Bryan Are Named.

The following open letter on behalf of Charles W. Bryan, candidate for democratic nomination for governor, has been made public over the names of more than fifty prominent democrats.

To the democratic voters of Nebraska:

If the conflicting interests in the democratic party can be harmonized, a democratic ticket can, and will be elected. The republican party has failed in state and nation to give the relief promised and we appeal to the democratic men and women of this state now, that the party is in a position to be of real service to the tax payers, to fall in line under a united leadership and nominate Charles W. Bryan for governor, and Gilbert M. Hitchcock for senator.

The questions that have heretofore divided the party, have been settled, as if the rank and file of the party will unite on these candidates, the party can again come into power and give to the tax payer the help which every tax payer knows he needs, and which the present republican state administration has failed to give. The democratic party made a splendid record when in charge of the state government. The expense to the tax payers under democratic rule in this state was less than half of what it is today. Every farmer, wage earner, and citizen is groaning under the burden of excessive taxation. There is no relief in sight from the continuation of a republican administration.

We cannot appeal to the voters of our party to unite under the leadership of Charles W. Bryan and Senator Hitchcock, and thereby harmonize all of the conflicting elements in the party. The democratic party needs a victory! The state needs a democratic victory!

We, the undersigned most heartily endorse the effort that has been made to harmonize the democratic party in Nebraska and to that end we urge the renomination of Senator Hitchcock and the nomination of Charles W. Bryan in the primaries next Tuesday.

LINCOLNSHIRE'S FUTURE ASSURED

Directors Decide to Operate Club on Business Basis.

The reorganization of the Lincolnshire club is progressing faster than was expected, and the directors are confident that its continuation is now assured, according to S. H. Burnham, a member of the board. Most of the members have already paid the first half of the $15 yearly dues, July 20 being the time limit set for this payment.

The club will hereafter be run on a strictly business basis. The board has carefully scrutinized all items of expense and made substantial reductions. In this they were assisted by Miss Eva Thompson and Miss Barnes, who have been in charge recently. Both the directors and managers feel that the Lincolnshire is a necessity to the community and can be operated successfully.

SAYS ROADS NOT HIRING MANY MEN

Havelock Strikers' Spokesman Declares Public is Being Deluded.

Asserts Run Down Equipment May Bring About Bad Catastrophe.

Railroad officials statements in regard to the number of men they are hiring to replace the shopmen are absurd, and are being made for the purpose of deluding the public and discouraging the strikers, says G. H. Abel, publicity chairman of the Havelock shopmen, in a statement, issued Saturday afternoon. The equipment of the roads has been allowed to deterioate until there is great danger of a serious catastrophe, declares Mr. Abel.

His statement follows:

Says Claims Absurd.

HAVELOCK, Nebr., July 15.—"Statements given out by railroad officials, regarding number of men they are hiring to take the places of the striking shopmen, are absurd and would be unworthy of consideration were it not for the fact that the public is being deluded by these statements into a false sense of security.

"As a matter of fact they are hiring no skilled mechanics, and not nearly so many unskilled men as they claim.

"These claims are being made for the purpose of discouraging the men on strike. Railroad officials realize that their only hope of breaking this strike is by inducing some of the strikers to drift back to their old jobs. In this they are doomed to disappointment.

"When the strikers go back to work they will go back in a body—just as they came out, and that will be when they receive decent working conditions and a wage commensurate with their skill and the hazards of their occupation. The equipment on the railroads of the country, never in the best of condition, has been allowed to deterioate in the past eighteen months to the very minimum that would pass the federal inspectors.

"Since the shopmen's strike, federal inspectors have disappeared entirely and locomotives and cars are being used that are a menace to "the lives of passengers. These are facts that should be in possession of the public in order that they may protect themselves, and not wait until some catastrophe awakens them with a long list of the victims of corporataion greed. Hot air and injunctions may have their legitimate place in the operation of a railroad, but they are poor substitutes for competent mechanics at a time when the public safety is in jeopardy."

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE

Republican Primaries, July 18, 1922

To the DRY VOTERS Of Nebraska

The voters, who believe in the perpetuation and enforcement of prohibition should support candidates, who are not only promising enforcement, but who by their record of performances have demonstrated that they are heart and soul for prohibition.

Such a candidate is Attorney General Clarence A. Davis, candidate for United States Senator.

During the past four years Mr. Davis has borne a large share of the burden of prohibition enforcement in this state; he has successfully prosecuted more than two thousand prohibition cases.

He drafted the present prohibition law of Nebraska, increasing penalties for law violators, urged its passage through the legislature and successfully defended it from attack in the courts.

He has removed sheriffs, county attorneys, police magistrates and other local officials, who were not enforcing prohibition. He has stood steadfastly for law enforcement and clean government. He is the only candidate who has actually gone into the courts of Nebraska and fought and won for the cause of Prohibition, Clean Business and Law Enforcement.

Prohibition enforcement can never succeed unless dry voters steadfastly support with all their energy those public officers, who fight for prohibition.

As a candidate for United States Senator Mr. Davis opposes any amendment weakening the Volstead Act. He favors adequate appropriations to make federal law enforcement possible. His wide experience as a law-enforcement officer will be a factor in the drafting of further legislation to make prohibition effective.

Knowing Mr. Davis to be dry, not only by political promise but by personal habit and official record, knowing his splendid service to the people of this state for four years, we urge all dry voters to unite in the support of Clarence A. Davis for United State Senator.

ved to be an effort on the part organized labor to force the dis-lution of the United States rail-ad labor board, which in Jewell's ated opinion is the cause of the tion-wide strike.

Jewell in his statement, charged at the labor board, had exceeded legal rights, and had deliberate-violated the transportation act.
rom another excellent source, it s learned that organized labor in ashington will soon start a drive congress urging the abolishment the labor board.

Almost simultaneously with Jewl's broadside, came reports from ashington that Senator Cummins, thor of the transportation act, ll urge its repeal of revision con-ding that the present strike dis-oses that it is weak in many ints.

Farmers Register Kick.

One of the first serious com-aints from farmers who are feel-g the ttwin coal and rail strikes, came known today when Chair-an Hooper of the labor board aditted that he had received a tele-ram from United States Senator araway of Arkansas, stating that illions of dollars' worth of perhable goods will be destroyed in s state as well as throughout the uthwest unless the railroad strike brought to an early end.

Hooper declined to comment on e telegram stating that i t is to expected that when there is a ss of freight transportation perhable goods may perish. Hooper so declined to comment upon nator Cummins' statement that e transportattion act needs re-sion.

Troops were reported under arms a number of states awaiting or-rs to move instantly in the ent of further rioting, though the sturbances which marked the sec-d week of the railroad strike leted down during the past few ys.

Serious disorders, however, are ared next week beginning at on on Monday. At tthis hour, e railroads warned their striking mployes, all seniority and pension ghts will be forfeited unless they port back to work. At the same me the roads will open their shops new recruits who will be fur-shed municipal, state and federal otion.

Quiet at Denison.

In Denison, Tex., where the most rious rioting took place, reports night stated that all was quiet nce the arrival of Adjutant Gener-Thomas D. Barton and Tom ickman, captain of the state angers.

What the government will do in e event the strike seriously ham-ers mail-transportation is shown the government's prompt action using mail trucks in Indiana, hen a road had to curtain its rvice. That the government will se a whole fleet of trucks to ansport mail, if necessary is the rediction in well informed circles.

Meantime, instead of an early set-ement, the railroad strike is as-uming more serious proportions. B.
. Jewell and Chairman Hooper of e labor board, after informal conrences during the past few days ave found it hard to meet on common ground because fundamental ifferences, as Hooper stated.

The railroads are proceeding in eir intensive effort to recruit en to take the strikers' places and ecuring injunctions against any inerference from the strikers. Four ore injunctions were issued in vaious parts of the country during e day and night, in preparation

occur after the primaries, instead of before. These conventions are fixed by law on the third Tuesday in August.

Lengthy List of Candidates.

Eleven candidates for United States senator, ten for governor, and a correspondingly large number for most of the other offices are in the field to be voted for on the republican, democratic and progressive tickets. Each of these parties is t choose between two or more candidates for senator and governor The prohibition party is the only other one, and its ticket is mostly blank, No socialist candidates filed, and no ballot has been printed for that party.

For senator on the republican ticket, the choice lies among national Committeeman R. B. Howell and Congressman A. W. Jefferis of Omaha, Attorney General Clarence A. Davis of Holdrege and C. H. Gustafson of Lincoln. Two others have filed, but their chances of winning the nomination are considered negligible. Davis, Howell and Jefferis have all made extensive campaigns, but Gustafson has not done so. His support will be mainly in the rural districts.

An effort has been made by Howells backers to inject the wet and dry issue into tthe senatorial fight, for his benefit; but many of tthe drys have not warmed up to Howell, who did not become converted to the prohibition cause until the fight was over and the battle won. They are more favorably inclined to Attorney General Davis on account of his activity in matters of law enforcement during the past three and a half years.

Jefferis has made his campaign as a stalwart republican who has never wavered in his allegiance to the "grand old party." His opponents have charged that he favors a modification of the Volstead law to permit the sale of light wines and beer. A great many of the old line republicans are for Jefferis, regardless of the prohibition question.

The Gubernatorial Competition.

Adam McMullen of Beatrice, A. H. Byrum of Bloomington, and C. H. Randall of Randolph are tthe principal republican contenders for nomination to the governor's office. McMullen was first to file and has been campaigning longer than either of his competitors, but their friends claim they are at no disadvantage on tthis acconu .t

Byrum is the only one of tthe trio who has declared himself against the code system of government under the sole control of the governor. Randall voted in tthe legislature for the code bill and is regarded as tis defender. McMullen's was a pronounced critic of the code law two years ago, but has had little to say about it this year. Most of Governor McKelvie's code secretaries are said to oe supporting Randall for the nomination.

On the democratic side, there is another three-cornered race with J. N. Norton of Polk, City Commissioner Charles W. Bryan of Lincoln and City Commissioner Dan B. Butler of Omaha as the competing candidates. Bryan and Butler favor the repeal of the code law. Norton criticises the method of its enactment and suggests a referendum to determine whether or not it shall be retained.

The formation of a number of "harmony clubs" tthroughout the state, advocating the nominattion of Hitchcock for senator and Bryan for governor, has led to some warm exchanges back and forth among democratic leaders and candidates. The movement seems to have started with a group of younger democrats who want to discard the old time party feuds. Arthur Mullen, former national committeeman, has come out for Norton on the eve of the primaries. What effect tthis will have remains to be seen.

C. H. MOORE

Better known as "Captain Moore" was elevated from patrolman to Captain of Police by Howard H. Antles at that time Chief of Police in Lincoln, Nebraska. He served as Captain of Police in Lincoln for years and has since that time served his county, state and government as Deputy Sheriff, Deputy State Sheriff and Federal Prohibition Agent. He is an able efficient and courteous officer whose record as a man and as an officer is exemplary. He has conducted a personal campaign without the aid of City and County political backing.

His name was omitted from the Sample Ballot published in one of the papers last Sunday and many voters were misled as to his candidacy. He is a candidate for office of County Sheriff on the Republican ticket and your vote cast for Captain C. H. Moore will be a vote of approval of courtesy, efficiency and ability in a public officer and for a real sheriff. As a citizen and parent he has reared a family of children, three daughters now grown. As sheriff of his county he will have a father's interest in the boys and girls unfortunate enough to require a sheriff's attention.

Your support is respectfully solicited at the Primaries July 18, 1922.

tween candidates for governor and senator who stand for the "middle of the road" policy and those favorable to fusion. The nomination for governor lies between Norton, who is also running as a democrat, and W. J. Taylor of Merna, who spurs an alliance with any other party.

A similar contest is on for senator between A. H. Bigslow of Omaha, midroad candidate ,and Arthur G. Wray of York, who helped to bring out Norton for governor. It is generally understood that if Wray is nominated on the progressive ticket and Howell on the republican, he will withdraw in the latter's favor; but if Howell loses then Wray will stay in the field.

In most of the congressional districts there are contests for the nomination of one or both the parties. Six candidates are after tthe g. o. p. nomination in the First, among whom one, Paul Manhart of Auburn, is running on a platform favoring light wines and beer. There are ttwo democratic candidates, but ex-Governor John H. Morehead of Falls City is regarded as certain to get the nomination. A short term nomination is also to be decided.

There is another interesting contest in the Sixth district, with five republican and two democratic candidates for th regular terms and several others for the short unexpired term.

It is doubtful whether the total vote in the state primaries will reach 200,000, as farmers are busy harvesting and threshing. In the presidential election two years ago, 384,000 votes were cast.

PARALYSIS OF INDUSTRY LOOMS

throwing thousands of men out of work, is inevitable.

The United tSates geographical survey declares the shop strike last week has already cut the limited production of coal and car loading to one of the lowest points since the coal strike began.

Congressmen from the northwestern states, which would be among the first to feel the pinch of winter, are strongly with President Harding in his determination to force an end of both strikes and are ready to back him up should he decide to take over the mines and railroads. Reports that Harding favors conscription of labor to run these industries were widely discussed today, btu at the white house it was stated the executive is not contemplating the drafting of labor, although he believes the draft justified in event of grave national emergency. Congressional authority would be necessary before the draft power could be used, in the opinion of government legal experts.

Settlement Is Necessary.

Settlement of both the railroad and mine strikes is necessary to save the country from serious effects this winter as fuel shipments are so far behind now theer would be no hope of catching up with the demand if the nation's transportation arteries were clogged by broken down rolling stock.

Suggestions of nationalization of the mining and railroad industries by the government were coldly received by the coal and rail executives and the leaders of the striking unionists.

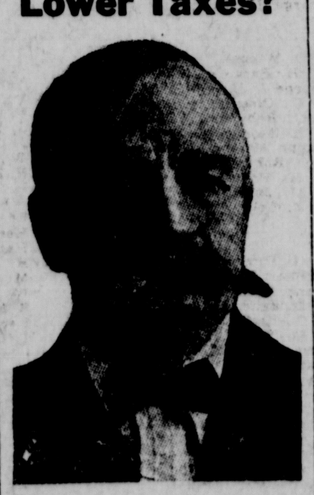

Harding was in conference with Maintenance of Way union leaders here today and informed them the decisions of the railway labor board must be upheld. The shopmen's strike was called in revolt against wage cuts ordered by the board. The Maintenance of Way men are considering a strike, but have called it off temporarily at the request of the rail board.

At the same time, Ben W. Hooper, chairman of the railway labor board in Chicago, was continuing his efforts to brisg about peace, but without success and Chicago dispatches said both sides were settling down to a long fight.

The United Mine Workers policy committee after a session in Washington this afternoon at which rejection of Harding's project for settlement of the strike was advocated, Primaries July 18, 1922.

I am a candidate for the office of County Commissioner because I believe the people of Lancaster County are tired of the high cost of government and I am confident that I can save them money.

I have been a resident of this county for forty-one years, fifteen of which I was a road supervisor. My policy, if elected, will be one of strict economy and I will devote my entire time to the interests of the taxpayers, regarding myself as a public servant.

I believe every office holder should be held responsible for his own duties and I pledge myself against any practice which might be described as "passing the buck."

went to the white house to give him their decision.

The area of highest tension in the industrial strife shifted to Ohio today, wheer Colonel Robert Haubrich took command of state troops ordered mobilized in three cities, to be ready for instant action. The troops included one battalion of infantry, a machine gun company, and two motor transport companies.

Meanwhile the postoffice department rushed plans to mobilize thousands of motor trucks and squadrons of aircraft to keep the mails moving in event of a complete breakdown of rail transportation.

not be able to do the work of the strikers."

Jewell insisted the strikers are not interfering with the operation of mail trains.

"The unskilled men hired by the railroads who are unable to repair equipment properly are the direct cause of interference with the United States mail." he stated.

Warned Off Trains.

A warning was issued by the union officials that the public should keep off the trains as much as possible.

"There is danger of defective equipment causing wrecks," the statement said.

Few men returned to work during recent peace negotiations in order to save their seniority rights, union officials stated.

"Any man who goes back will be branded for the rest of his life with a mark more visible than that which Cain carried after murdering his brother," one union official said.

Jewell bitterly denounced the railroad labor board.

"Twenty-five bankers and railroad directors of New York controlling eighty-two and one-half per cent of the railroads of the country are responsible for and govern the activitise of the railroad labor board." he charged.

"These men are the ones who insisted on the reecnt wage reductions. They knew they could not get rates increased so they planned to dig into the pockets of their disillusioned employes.

"This strike cannot be settled by the labor board.

"I feel, however, that an agreement could be reached if the railroad executives will agree to meet with the union leaders."

Railroads reported continued improvement in traffic conditions and planned to throw their shops open on a larger scale.

LOUISVILLE CASE STILL A MYSTERY

No New Light Thrown on the Murder of Mrs. George Lutz.

Hyers Visits Home of Poison Victim—No Finger-prints Found.

Very little in the way of definite clues to the murderer of Mrs. G. Lutz resulted from the visit of State Sheriff Gus Hyers to Louisville Saturday. Finger prnt Expert Hans Nielson had previously made a thorough search of the house for finger prints or other identifying features which he could photograph, but he found nothing. Deputy Karl Schmitt, Gus Miller of the reformatory and Lincoln newspaper men, who accompanied Hyers to Louisville.

H. G. Meier, a Louisville garage owner, partially identified one of two men who talked to him on the day of the murder, as Charles Mewhorter, who escaped from the state reformatory last Saturday night. The strangers were looking for another man and came to the garage to inquire if Meier had seen the third party. Afterward they apparently left town. The time of their visit to the garage does not fit in with the supposed time of the brutal attack on Mrs. Lutz.

Questioning of neighbors Saturday developed the fact that no one had seen the assailant, either coming or going from the house or in the town. Mrs. Lutz was supposed to have $800 which she had received from her husband in monthly payments of $50 She was to make a payment on a house later in the day. A hundred dollars, placed under her hat was not touched. The $700 remaining disappeared.

Mrs. Lutz died in an Omaha hospital from the effect of poison poured down her throat by a salesman who entered her home Tuesday afternoon.

"Developments have proven that the one necessary step was protection for the men who remained at work. Wherever injunction against unlawful interference with workers have been issued there has been an immediate increase of men at work.

The committee declared it stood ready and willing to attend any hearing before the United States railroad labor board with a view of effecting a settlement that would not nullify any of the board's rulings.

Despite the fact that hopeof peace had apparently disappeared acts of violence were reported.

Maintenance of Way men in a few shops had walked out in sympathy with the shopmen.

Additional injunctions were asked by several railroads.

Why Bryan?

Let the Home Folks Tell You Why Charles W. Bryan Should be Nominated and Elected Governor.

Mr. Bryan does things, and Nebraska needs a governor of that kind now.

With Mr. Bryan as governor the code bill will be repealed. All unnecessary employes will be fired and joy-riding at the people's expense will stop.

Mr. Bryan says to reduce the cost of government. That means that your taxes will be reduced.

With Mr. Bryan as governor there will be no graft, no padded contracts and no running up of appropriations in building the new capitol.

With Mr. Bryan as governor confirmed criminals will not be turned out of the penitentiary to prey on the public until their sentences have been served.

Mr. Bryan favors reduction of license tax on automobiles to correspond with the reduction of incomes of the farmers and common people. This means a saving of from $5 to $10 for each family.

With Mr. Bryan as governor the appropriations will be kept in bounds and the state's business put on a business basis.

No special interest is big enough to bluff Bryan, and no corporation can throw dirt in his eyes and get away with it.

His word is good, and he stands hitched. No political boss can dictate to him. He does not pussyfoot, and if elected governor, he will be the governor.

Mr. Bryan has led the fight for the farmers and wage-earners.

Mr. Bryan favors water power development.

Mr. Bryan favors co-operative marketing, municipal public markets, municipal slaughter houses, municipal coal yards to cut the middle men and bring the farmer and town people together for their mutual interest.

Mr. Bryan broke the coal combine in Lincoln and saved the coal consumers $150,000 last winter and made it possible for the common people to keep their children warm.

Mr. Bryan as mayor has demonstrated his administrative and legislative ability, which produces results.

Mr. Bryan stands for law enforcement and is a platform in himself.

Mr. Bryan's candidacy is endorsed by all women of practically all the well known Democratic families of Lincoln. His candidacy is endorsed by all the leading Democratic men of Lincoln representing all elements of all factions. His candidacy has been endorsed by the representatives of twelve labor organizations in Lincoln on account of what he has done for the wage-earners.

Mr. Bryan's nomination will unite the Democratic party, men and women, and make it an irresistible force.

Mr. Bryan carries Lincoln not withstanding its large Republican majority.

Mr. Bryan carries Lincoln in spite of all the combinations of big business that can be put together against him.

Mr. Bryan as the Democratic candidate for governor will sweep the state. His motto is "Look at your tax receipt and turn the rascals out."

If you want your taxes reduced, if you want the fads, the fancies, the duplications and unnecessary commissions, inspectors and other tax-eaters cut out, vote for Mr. Bryan.

My Dear Judge:-

Your favor of recent date, advising me of your candidacy for the office of Attorney General was received in due time, and I want to assure you that it gives me great pleasure to find that one of your experience and ability is willing to become a candidate for an office to which there is so much work and responsibility attached, and that from a financial stand point is so unremunerative.

The office of Attorney General of this State I regard as one of the most important offices, if not the most important office, in the State. Your experience as a practicing Court and special Prosecutor for the Attorney General in the Supreme Court and trial of the District Court, Commissioner of the Supreme Court, and special counsel for the Attorney General in the preparation and trial of the indictments returned by the Grand Jury in this County last October against stock promoters for the sale of worthless securities qualifies you for this high office as few men are qualified.

I had an opportunity to observe the manner in which you handled the State's litigation in the cases you have been conducting in this County, and I think it is due you that I should express my appreciation of the able, vigorous manner in which you have discharged your duties.

If elected, as I trust you will be, I shall feel that the people of the State are to be congratulated.

CITY'S STORM SEWER SYSTEM TO BE EXTENDED

Bates Takes Step to Eliminate Flood Dangers in South Lincoln.

Runs From Ninth and Park to Eleventh and Harrison Streets.

Another portion of the city's storm sewer system will be built in the near future and plans and specifications for the same will be presented to the city commission for acceptance at the regular session Monday afternoon. This sewer will extend from Ninth and Park streets to Eleventh and Harrison streets and will cost approximately $14,700.

The new part of the storm sewer will drain one of the sections of the city which was the most badly flooded two weeks ago during the heavy rain, and will make one additional link in the system of storm sewers which City Engineer Bates insists the city still must have to prevent future damage from high water.

The matter has been delayed pending arrangements with property owners in that vicinity to agree to pay for a part of the cost of the sewer. From one-fourth to one-third of the total must be paid by the property owners benefitted, the balance to be furnished by the city.

Other improvement projects which will be before the council Monday afternoon include alley paving district 97, between D and E and Twelfth and Thirteenth an ordinance creating a paving district on Thirty-first street from Randolph to D, an ordinance creating a paving district on Twenty-eighth street from R to T and an ordinance creating a water district from Seventh to Ninth on Washington and an ordinance creating a paving district on Thirtieth street from T to Vine.

A request was filed asking the council to form an alley paving district between C and D streets and between Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, on Saturday.

SEND CLOTHES TO VOLGA SUFFERERS

Two Carloads Worth $50,000 Sent Saturday by Relief Society.

People Not Starving Now —Rev. Wagner to Return Soon.

Two large freight cars filled with clothing for the German colonists in the Saratov district of Russia, were shipped from Lincoln Saturday by the Central States Volga relief society. The shipment was sent to the American Friends Service committee at Philadelphia, which will ship it to Moscow. The local society will again assume responsibility there and transfer the clothing to the people along the Volga river.

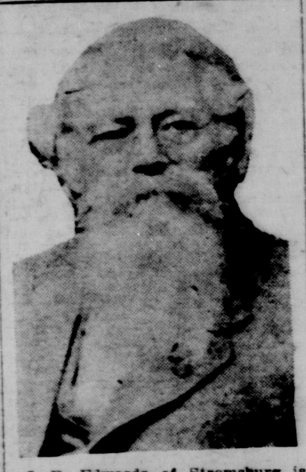

The shipment is valued at $50,000 and consists mostly of new material cloth, ready made garments, shoes, needles, thread and other similar articles. Jacob Volz of York will leave this week, planning to arrive at Philadelphia at the same time as the shipment, which he will accompany to Russia and aid in distributing, under permission of the American Relief Administration. Rev. Jacob Wagner, of Lincoln, who now represents the society in Russia, will return to Nebraska on the arrival of Mr. Volz.

Dr. H. P. Wekesser, president of the Central States Volga Relief committee, has received a letter from Mr. Page of the American Relief Administration, in which he says:

"In the Volga the famine is over. Of course the people are destitute and it is going to be some time before they are back on their feet, but no more of the German colonists are dying of hunger. In addition it seems that particularly the German colonists have taken hold with a wonderful determination to pull themselves out of their economic misery.

"They have planted all the seed they had and the crop promise is good. The A. R. A. is certain to discontinue the feeding of adults on September 15. The question of how much child feeding we will do after that time is still to be decided, as is the question of when we will discontinue the food remittances."

Mr. Edwards joined the Masonic lodge at Fairfield, Ia., in April, 1855. He demitted from this lodge in 1874, joining Oliver lodge No. 38 at Seward, Neb. FRIEND, Neb., July 15.—Laborers are so scarce in this part of the country that the retired farmers who reside in town and can be found most any day sitting in the parks talking politics, are now driving teams hauling wheat from the threshing machines to the elevators for the farmers.

IF ANNESS WINS, THE PEOPLE WIN

Wilber Anness Makes Last Appeal to First District—AND LINCOLN — to Nominate Him—Looks Good For Him.

LINCOLN, Neb., July 15, 1922.—ANNESS FOR CONGRESS: HEADQUARTERS, LINDELL HOTEL.—To the Men and Women Voters of The First District. I am your candidate for Congress, Republican ticket, First District, to succeed my old friend, Frank Reavis, for whom I have the fondest remembrances and esteem.

I am appealing to you, the men and women voters, to be nominated and elected, and I feel you are entitled to know before, not after, what I might think, perform and do, if successful.

I have only had One Shoulder in this campaign to carry stuff around on, and I have tried to conduct an honorable campaign, as the people know. If I cannot win, clean and fair, I'll NEVER go to Congress. But if I do win, THE PEOPE WIN.

I am for the Volstead Bloc, the Farm Bloc, the Square Deal for Labor Bloc, the People's Bloc, the Soldier Gratitude (I hate that word "Bonus") Bloc, and any other "Bloc" that stands for the betterment of mankind, the prosperity and happiness of the homes and people and children of my District and country.

I am a Presbyterian, An Elk, a Mason, but I do not mention this to secure votes, and have never sat in an Elks or Masonic lodge room during the campaign, but just ONCE, AND THAT JUST HAPPENED. I don't campaign this way.

More than one-third of the vote in the First district is in Lincoln—Lancaster county—it is the legitimate battle ground for all candidates, congressional or state—and I have a right to appeal to the unselfish side of Lincoln people to help me GET THAT NOMINATION This time.

Beaver City, Neb., was my boyhood home town—and I have a right to appeal to everybody from Furnas County, who lives in Lincoln. I live at Dunbar Neb., Otoe County, where I first went in 1898, twenty-five years ago, and I have a right to APPEAL to Every Person from my Home County of Otoe, who lives in Lincoln. In the years that are gone I have lived and "clerked" and did "newspaper work" in Gage county, at Liberty; in Harlan County, at Alma and Orleans; in Saunders County, at Malmo; in Chase County, at Palisade and Imperial; at Wakefield, in Dixon county, and at Elmwood, in Cass County, AND I HAVE A RIGHT To ask the People From These Counties, Who Live in Lincoln, to REMEMBER ME and Vote For Me, and THEY ARE GOING TO DO IT, TOO, By Jimbo.

And now I close. Whether in defeat or Victory, it will still be my ambition and privilege, to stand for those things in private life that I might favor in public life. Sincerely yours,

WILBER W. ANNESS,
Republican Candidate For Congress, First District.

TO THE VOTERS OF LANCASTER COUNTY FROM FORMER SHERIFF H. V. HOAGLAND.

Clyde B. Zellars, one of the candidates for the Republican nomination for sheriff of this county, was one of my deputies when I held the office of sheriff of Lancaster County from 1908-1912. Mr. Zellars was always faithful and painstaking in his duties and discharged the duties of his office without any fear or favoritism.

I can assure the voters of this county that Mr. Zellars, if nominated and elected, will make an ideal sheriff, one who can always be depended upon as strictly faithful to the duties of his office, and in my opinion I know of no one better qualified for the office of sheriff than Mr. Zellars.

3. That the County Attorney is the attorney for the tax payers and their interests. The interests of LANCASTER COUNTY must be protected and can be, only when given exclusive attention by the County attorney. He can not serve two clients with conflicting interests.
4. That everybody having business with the County attorney's office will receive courteous, polite and a fair hearing.

Why Not a Successful Business Man for Governor?

The Business Affairs of Nebraska require the steady hand of a tried executive like

of Randolph, Republican Candidate

His Knowledge of Business and Agriculture Gained in a Successful Banking Experience & Active Management and Development of Farm Lands.

His Knowledge of State and Economic Affairs Gained in Two Terms in Nebraska Senate and Member Nebraska Loan Committee of War Finance Corporation.

Read What Senator Randall's Neighbor Think of Him.

The neighbors of Chas H. Randall, who have known intimately of his career from the time he landed in Randolph in 1888 with empty hands and a spirit of invincible industry, unite in recommending him to the people of Nebraska as a full-sized candidate for Governor.

His knowledge of agriculture, gained as a farm hand and owner; his knowledge of business, gained in a successful banking experience; his knowledge of economic and political affairs, gained as council member, school officer, mayor and state senator; his native ability, his untiring energy and his fine personal character make it certain that the executive affairs of Nebraska can be safely placed in his hands.

We recommend him to those voting citizens who think the executive affairs of the state important enough to be entrusted to one who has successfully conducted his own business affairs and won and kept the esteem of all his fellows.

NEBRASKA BOY IS HERO OF UNIQUE TRIP IN TURKEY

Ted Gannaway of Stuart Pilots 229 Children Over Mountains.

Created Own Conveyances for 140 Mile Journey Through the Wilderness.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Trekking with 229 children through the mountain wilderness of Asia Minor on a ten days' journey to the Mediterranean coast, fell to the lot of a Near East worker last June Letters received from W. T. Gannaway, the young man in question, indicate that he got away successfully with this difficult job, notwithstanding water-shortage, sun-sickness among the children, and the constant menace of marauding Kurds, and delivered his sizable orphanage-family to the Near East Relief authorities at Aleppo, none of them the worse for their 140-mile trip.

"Ted" Gannaway, who formerly lived at Stuart, Neb., had put in seven months work with the Near East Relief at the Turkish nationalist town of Marash, when he received orders to evacuate the orphans there to the Beirut area. The step was part of a general policy of concentration and economy. Gannaway writes:

Creates Own Transportation.

"Just how I was to transport 229 children over the mountains, while lacking motor-cars and railroads, was not mentioned in my orders. None of the children could stride a horse, and many of them were too small to keep their seat on donkey-back. So I had to create. I believe I turned out something in the way of equipage which presented the funniest sight since Noah and his outfit marched into the ark. I got a Near East Relief industrial department to build fifty or sixty good-sized boxes. These I hitched in pairs across the backs of ninety mules, and into these panniers I loaded the children, two to each box. Behind each mule, thus loaded, came a second animal, bearing the food and bedding for the kid-quartette, just ahead of him. Off started this Near East Relief bestibuled Pullman, down the mountain while the Americans waved me good luck from the personnel house windows."

No cooking was done throughout the trip, the rations consisting of bread, nuts and raisins. Camp would be pitched by the side of the mountain-trail, each child sleeping rolled up in blankets, upon the ground. The natural water-supply was dangerously short, and sometimes eight hours would be passed without a sign of moisture along the route. Whenever a water-hole was found, it was the signal for a halt, when 229 canteens, made in Near East Relief workshops from gasoline tins, would be filled.

Bandits Scared by Guards' Rifles.

"Fortunately," writes Gannaway, "I had taken the precaution of arranging for a guard of Kemalist soldiers, who accompanied us through to Aleppo. The countryside, as it turned out, was swarming with Kurdish chettehs. A chettch, or bandit, is usually some young Kurd who gets tired of sheep-tending, and so steals a gun and a horse and joins up with one of the local bands of marauders. On our first night out we encamped on the banks of the Ak Su, in company with a large donkey-caravan. Hardly had the latter left us, next morning, when it was set upon by chettehs who killed five of the party and led away the loaded animals to their mountain stronghold. Two days later we were stopped by five well-known chettehs, but the sight of our guards' rifles warned them off. Meanwhile seven of our children were down with sun-sickness. We had no medicines with us, and I was beginning to feel a bit nervous about their safety when the welcome sight of Near East Relief motor trucks appeared on the Aleppo road. These had been sent out to meet us, and I can tell you that I was grateful to have the responsibility for 229 youngsters off my mind at last."

Christian Population Much Less.

Gannaway says that, whereas the pre-war population of Marash consisted of an equal number of Moslems and Christians, the latter are now reduced to one-quarter of the former strength and consist mainly of women and children. Industries are dead, and the town is filled with destitute refugees who will most certainly perish if the Near East Relief withdraws its aid.

Gannaway is the son of Dr. and Mrs. C. R. Gannaway, of Stuart, who are also engaged in Near East relief work overseas.

DREW LITTLE FOR TRAVELING BILLS

Statement Made In Regard to Charges Against Landis and Cutter.

Said to Be Error In Biennial Report Made to the Governor.

In explanation of travelling expense bills of State University Regent Harry D. Landis and Dean Cutter of Omaha, which have been given some atention in the campaign, a letter has been written by the financial secretary of the University of Nebraska, as follows:

LINCOLN, Neb., July 15.—Hon. H. D. Landis, president board of regents. Seward, Neb., Dear Sir:—In accordance with your request I herewith submit the following account of the traveling expenses of the University of Nebraska, for the two year period, December 1, 1918 to November, 30, 1920

Administration and operat'n	$ 6,945.17
Instructional deparement,
Lincoln	14,230.53.
Instructional Dept. medical college, Omaha	787.60
Curtis Agricultural school..	695.23
Total	$22 658.53
Agricultural experiment station	$ 1,850.28
Athletics	26,868.83
Agricultural extension	32,988.92
Commercial activities	497.13
Special activities	7,489.39

This account includes, transportation, meals, lodging and not one mileage book has been purchased or used during this period.

It is to be noted that $26,868.83 expended for athletics comes from the receipts of the games, that the $32,-988.92 for Agricultural extension is federal money, and that the $7,489.39 is for services that are not under the control of the university.

This leaves only an average expenditure for all departments of the university of $11,329.26 per year.

There is an error in the biennial report to the governor for the years December 1, 1918 to November 30, 1920, as follows: The $1,118.88 charged to Dean Irving S. Cutter of the Medical school, Omaha as traveling expenses should read, traveling expenses $530.23; reimbursement for refunds to students, and the purchase of small animals for the laboratories at Omaha, $588.65. This expenditure for travelings is for twenty-four trips to Lincoln, three to Chicago and one to Atlantic City, and for a period of two years

The records in this office show that you received for this two years period $809.05. This includes sixty-four trips to Lincoln, amounting to $547.94 and one trip to Chicago, Columbus, Ann Arbor, New York, Boston, Providence, to inspect other universities in regard to building programs.

Very truly yours,
L. E. GUNDERSON,
Finance secretary.

Supt. E. H. Burroughs, '21, has been attending the summer school at Wesleyan for work in education. He was located last year at Denton.

PITTSBURGH LAD WINS NATIONAL OPEN GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

PITTSBURGH LAD WINS GOLF TITLE

Gene Sarazen Flashes Surprise in Capturing Cup in Open Championship.

Noses Out Black and Bobby Jones By Margin of One Stroke.

OLD GUARD BROKEN.

SKOKIE COUNTRY CLUB, GLENCOE, Ill., July 15.—United Press—"This marks a new day in golf—the old guard is broken."

This comment was on the lips of every golf fan here tonight for with Sarazen, Jones, Black and Melhorn all finishing ahead of Hagen, Hutchison, Barnes, Evans, Duncan, Mitchell and McDonald, the biggest upset in the history of the open championship had been achieved.

(International News Service.)

SKOKIE COUNTRY CLUB, GLENCOE, Ill., July 15.—A sun-bronzed youth of 27—Gene Sarazen—of Pittsburgh, Pa., is tonight the undisputed golf champion of the country.

Sarazen wrote golf history here today when he won the national open title in competition with more than 300 of the greatest golfers in the world, including a galaxy of famous foreign stars.

The former caddy on the links around New York captured the title by an eye-lash. He completed the finals, seventy-two holes in all, with the astounding low score of 288, winning by a single stroke.

Jones and Black Tie.

Bobby Jones, the youthful amateur phenom of Atlanta, Ga., and John Black, the much feared "dark horse" of Oakland, Calif., finished in a tie for second place—both with scores of 289. Both Jones and Black made valiant efforts to capture the championship.

Jones played superb golf in his characteristic lightning like style, registering 143 for the thirty-six holes today, which was three strokes better than he recorded for the same distance yesterday. His feature performance was a par 70 for the first eighteen holes of the afternoon round today.

Other leading scores, besides Sarazen's 288 and the 289 of Jones and Black, follow:

William C. Mehlhorn	144-146—290
Walter Hagen	145-146—291
George Duncan	149-147—296
Leo Diegel	158-144—297
John Golden	150-148—298
Jock Hutchison	152-146—298
Mike Brady	148-150—298
John J. Farrell	149-150—299
Laurie Ayton	148-151—299
Joe Kirkwood	151-149—300
Robert G. McDonald	149-151—300

The cool, deliberate Black lost his chance to win or tie at the seventeenth hole of his final round, just as the sun was descending and the great crowd gathered at the home green were waiting in acute suspense for his finish.

At the fatal seventeenth Black ran into two traps and took a six. He made a herculean effort at the home hole, going to the far edge of the green; 417o yards, on his second. The putt was too difficult to negotiate and the hope of the golden west was down in four for 37 against a par of 36.

Sarazen Is "Tickled."

Sarazen, who went into the tournament as "north and south champion" was so pleased with his victory that he could not talk. Noted golfers rushed to shake hands and it was with great difficulty that he managed to break away from the wild cheering throng.

"I just don't know what to say," he gasped repeatedly.

The youthful Pittsburgher won his high honor in a garrison finish in the last eighteen holes with a perfectly turned card of 68, with which the 220 strokes he had compiled for the previous 54 holes left him with a total of 288.

Sarazen was one of the first in the field to finish. When he holed out his last putt on the home green there still were a half dozen dangerous contenders shooting on the links. His score at that time appeared good enough to win, but victory was not a certainty by any means and the crowd of more than 10,000 wildly excited fans breathlessly awaited the outcome.

Finished Like Whirlwind.

The victory had come like a whirlwind in his final round. He had been well up among the leaders all week, but at no time had he been given the attention accorded a player who leads the field. He started the final round with a 220, a comfortable fourth place, and went out with a burst which carried him over the last round in 68, two below par, and within one stroke of the lowest round which had been turned in during the entire tournament.

Throughout the round, witnessed by a large and excited gallery, Sarazen's golf was almost perfect. Only one the 530-yard fifth, where his approach was short and he took a six against a par five was he in much trouble.

He was out in 33, one stroke under par, medal play, and on this round had birdies on the third, fourth, and seventh holes, losing the second and fifth to par and halving the others.

Ends With Birdie.

His work on the incoming nine was equally brilliant. He was over par in the tenth hole only, but had birdies on the twelfth and eighteenth and finished with a 35. On the last green, he missed a thirty foot putt for an eagle by inches.

When Sarazen started his final round, he was followed by only a fair sized gallery, but as he continued making thrilling shots, the news flashed around the links that the young Pittsburgher was shooting into the lead. Soon he was followed by a large crowd which was steadily augmented to the finish.

Coming to the home green the eyes of all golfdom were on the ex-caddy. The boy drove from the tee like a mad man. This hole is a par five, and measures 470 yards. His tee shot rolled within 125 yards of the cup, a drive of about 350 yards. He placed his second shot within thirty feet of the pin and he tried desperately for an eagle three. The sphere, however, stopped within inches of the cup and the gallery by this time nerve-frayed and pulling hard for the boy, emmitted a groan. He sank his putt for a birdie four.

BY J. L. O'SULLIVAN.

(United Press.)

SOKIE COUNTRY CLUB, GLENCOE, Ill., July 15.—In the most sensational "whipping finish" ever seen in the history of the open golf championship tournament classic, Gene Sarazen, Pittsburgh, won premier honors here today. Sarazen had a medal score of 288.

One stroke behind were Bobby Jones, Atlanta, Ga., amateur and John Black, the Pacific coast "dark horse" tied for second with 289. Bill Melhorn, Shreveport and Walter Hagen, British open champion, were third and fourth with 290 and 291.

While the flashy young Pittsburgh ex-caddy played marvelous golf and deserved his victory, only heart-breaking luck kept both Jones and Black from beating him.

Thousands of spectators, banked in colorful masses about every green watched Jones fighting with all the wizardry at his command, come into the home stretch just two holes away from the home green needing but par golf to tie Sarazen and one birdie to win.

Jones Slices Drive.

Jones missed the championship by a sliced drive on the seventeenth green, when he had to shoot out from under a tree. Still fighting desperately, he recovered beautifully, and he reached the edge of the green in 3. He needed a fifteen foot putt to get the birdie that meant the championship.

Putting carefully he edged his ball towards the cup. Within a foot—six inches—three—two—the ball stopped on the rim of the cup and Bobby Jones had lost the chance for which he had fought like a tiger—to be the open champion. He finished with a par four, just one stroke behind Sarazen.

But John Black, the silent Scotchman, had passed the turn with a 33 and needed but a 36 to beat Sarazen. He started the round with a five but picking up played par golf, within two holes of the finish. Here, like Jones, needing but two par fours to win, he met his fate, as did Jones.

Black Hits Hard Luck.

His drive went out of bounds, for the first time in the tournament. His second was in a trap, and his third rolled off the green. A heart-breaking six was his portion and with it most of his championship hopes.

But the eighteenth was still to be played. it is a par five and Black needed an eagle three. His drive sang down the fairway like a bullet. The great mob of spectators, dashing ahead of the players in a frenzy of excitement forgot the quiet of golf gallery conduct and begged Black to "lay it up there." He did—within ten feet of the pin, but ft rolled off the edge. Using a mashie, Black tried desperately to hole this almost impossible chance. He chopped and the ball rose and fell—within a foot of the cup.

It was over.

Gene Sarazen was the champion—a stocky little fellow with a flashing smile, sparkling black eyes and the matinee idol profile, who had gone out earlier in the day without the hordes of golf-mad enthusiasts in his wake and whipped around at the dizzy rate of 75-68.

Sarazen finished at noon with 220, standing fifth behind Jones, Melhorn, Black and Hagen.

Willie Kamm, Sold to White Sox, Announces His "Retirement."

SAN FRANCISCO, July 15. — Willie Kamm, San Francisco third sacker, recently purchased by Charles A. Comiskey of the Chicago White Sox for $100,000 and two players, today announced his retirement from the game, effective Sunday.

Kamm's retirement may be only temporary. He believes he is entitled to cut in on the $100,000 purchase price. Dr. Charles Strub, president of the San Francisco club, agrees that he is entitled to some of the money, but stated that he could not give him anything without breaking a law Judge Landis put into effect last winter.

This rule stipulates that ball players cannot begiven emoluments of any description beyond their salaries.

Suggestions to Golfers

BY HALE CLARK.

Antelope Club Professional.

(Concluded.)

At the top of the back swing the left arm is very straight, the right arm is close to the body and the the start of the back swing. The left knee is bent out several inches towards the ball and slightly inward to the right, the right knee being nearly straight and serving as a head is in about the same position as it was at brace. The bending of the left knee straight towards the ball and slightly inward is essential to keeping the weight distributed on both feet. Most golf novices fail to bend their left knee far enough towards the ball, but pull their weight back to the right with their left knee bent towards their right knee.

The turn of the body has placed the line of vision to the ball just in front of the left shoulder. The grip is firmer in both hands with the mashie than with the driver or brassie. The right forearm is directly under the shaft and in line with the hip.

The downward swing of the club is now started with both arms close to the body and the elbows close together. At this point the hands drop rapidly in advance of the club head and in unison with the turn of the body. As the club reaches a horizontal position on the down ward swing the right hand starts to throw the head of the club into the shot while the left hand is cooperating with all its power. The speed of the club increases very rapidly from the horizontal position to impact, principally from the action of the right wrist. The left arm is still very straight and the right arm is about straight at the bottom of the downward swing. At impact the maximum amount of force is exerted, and for this reason the club should be gripped very tightly with both hands. At this stage most novices make the mistake of relaxing their hold on the club, and looking up.

After the ball is struck the club must be permitted to follow through close to the ground taking a straight line for several inches from the ball toward the hole. This right arm being straight at impact and pushing out towards the hole helps to make the follow through.

The stroke is now supported on the left leg. Afte, the ball is hit the arms reach out after the ball as far as they can and the weight goes forward to the left foot.

A card of 88 or better landed the player in the championship flight. The second flight included scores of 89 to 92 inclusive. Scores of 92 to 95 inclusive landed the holder in the third flight while 97 strokes placed the player in the fourth and last flight.

Willard Folsom of the Lincoln Country club won the first annual city tourney and is again the favorite. Competition, however, promises to be keener this year. Last August Phil Aitken ran Folsome close in the semi-final match.

Members of the championship flight last year were R. Hollingsworth, W. B. Griswold, I. M. Raymond, H. C. Hopewell, E. E. Henkle, Ray Elliott, Bert Griffiths, E. Slattery, S. R. McKelvie, C. B. Copeland, L. O. Paine, Don Chapin, Phil Aitken, H. Hayne, H. C. Gardner.

PAIGE

During the first six months of this year, the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company manufactured and sold fifty per cent more automobiles than were produced during the entire year of 1921.

There could be no more substantial tribute to the worth and outstanding value of the Paige and the Jewett. Such a sales record proves conclusively that these two great motor cars have been accepted as leaders in their respective fields.

he south particularly has come kwith a great increase, sales in section being 113 per cent greater than last year. The total increase the south is 406 per cent.

he central division shows an in- ase of 405 per cent and this in- des two localities where the in- ase is particularly significant, se are the Toledo district and Detroit district. Toledo is the e of Willys-Overland and Detroit he home of most of Willys-Over- d competitors. In these two locali- s Willys-Overland sales have wn extraordinarily high percent- of increase this year.

Willys-Overland officials attribute tremendous growth in Willys- rland sales this spring to the ex- ordinary economy of the Willys- ght Overland cars and the ex- me care used to make every car ned out as nearly as possible a fect automobile.

ood Conditions In Auto Trade In Coast Cities

. H. McDuffee, assistant general nager of the Cole Motor Car com- y, has just returned to Indian- lis after a six weeks trip on the cific coast.

"Conditions on the coast are most isfactory," is the report made by . McDuffee.

"So far as the automobile business concerned," said Mr. McDuffee, e coast has recovered just as ongly at the east, although it was general impression that business uld not take the upgrade with any preciable momentum until next r.

"Official figures which have been en out show that there has been very perceptible gain every month the sale of motor cars.

"During the first four months of 1 there were 3,766 passenger car gistrations in Southern California. 1922, during the same period, there re 21,653 cars entered or a gain of 87 cars.

Paige Output Doubled Over Last Year Total

Before the first six months of 1922 had come to a close the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company had built and sold 50 per cent more cars than it produced during the entire calendar year of 1921. Comparing the first six months of 1922 with the same period of 1921 the increase is approximately 225 per cent, according to the figures issued by factory officials.

"When we reflect that we were well up among the leaders of the industry during the early part of 1921 this record is particularly significant," said Harry M. Jewett, president of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car company in discussing the figures. "In this highly competitive selling season it seems to us that this tremendous increase in our business means that the public recognizes that Paige and Jewett automobiles are outstanding values.

"We did not carry a bit of high-priced inventory into the current year. We took all our losses last year, reduced everything to current replacement prices and entered the new year on a rock bottom basis. Then we planned our production with utmost efficiency on a volume basis and were able to offer a really improved product at greatly reduced prices. Thus we were able to offer the public what it wanted and needed at a price it recognized as reasonable."

Motorists no Longer Seek Tire Guarantee

"Did you ever reflect," said a Goodrich representative the other day "that the motorist no longer asks for a guarantee on his tires?"

"And do you realize," he continued, "that this fact proves beyond a shadow of doubt that tire making has passed the experimental stage?

"In the old days (and not so long ago, either) we heard a great deal of talk about guarantee and adjustments, but now the buyer does not even think of these things when he buys a standard make of tire.

"I remember when car salesmen would lose sales to farmers, because they had a blow-out while demonstrating the car. The farmer was 'off' the car when he thought he might buy tire trouble with his car. And any car driver knows that up to within a few years ago, one always drove with the fear of a blow-out, marring their pleasure.

"But in the language of the cartoonist, 'them days is gone forever.' Motorists buy tires with confidence, assured they will get more miles than any guarantee figures. Eight, ten or even fifteen thousand miles are expected, whereas the old time motorist was surprised if he exceeded 3,500 or 5,000 miles."

LARGEST FILLING STATION IN STATE

Now Under Construction at Sixteenth and N Streets.

Speaking of filling stations, where we drive in to get gasoline and lubricating oil for our flivvers, Lincoln is soon to have in operation the largest pump capacity station in the state. It is now under construction at Sixteenth aand N street.

It is said by those who are supposed to know all about filling stations that this will be the best equipped plant of its kind between Kansas City and Denver. It will have six of the latest model visible pumps in a row and they will handle twelve cars, thus avoiding delays in service. Every modern convenience for handling the business of supplying the needs of the automobile owner in the line of gasoline and lubricating oils is to be installed in order that service can be quick and snappy.

The foundataion of the station and piers will be of light colored brick, and the building of glazed finish white stucco. There is to be an awning on each side of the main canopy paralleling the latter, covering the entire row of pumps, which in itself will be something entirely new in station construction. Easy approaches will be afforded from the different angles so that traffic cannot possibly be congested, at the same time making it possible to serve the greatest number of customers in the shortest time.

Completion of the station is promised by the contractors for the formal opening on August 1.

It is to be known as the White Rock Oil company, an independent organization composed of local men, John Klinker, well and favorably known to almost everybody in Lincoln, having lived here and has been identified with the Lincoln Wholesale Drug company for thirty years, being one of the financial backers of the enterprise.

MOTORS AND THEIR CARE

Practical Suggestions for Insuring Longevity of the Car.

Traffic Accidents.

Among the causes of traffic accidents are careless driving, children playing in the streets, poor parking accommodations, insufficient playgrounds, bad street lighting, lack of signs, narrow street limits, inadequate police force and unintelligent traffic regulations.

Vibration Causes Trouble.

If a motor is subject to considerable vibration there is danger of the bolts coming loose at the base. A wrench should be applied occasionally to make sure that everything is tight. If this is not attended to, almost anything may happen, from oil leakage to a wrecked engine.

Use Oil Freely.

Oil is the only remedy for squeaks in the car. Friction between the body and the frame, mud guards, springs and spring clips, tire carrier, hood, radiator supports and many other places will cause noise. squirt oil into all likely places and most of the unlikely places, and the annoying "birds" will be finally suppressed.

Blow Your Horn.

When backing the car.

Overcharged Battery.

Automobile operators who feel uneasy concerning the condition of the battery caused by long runs and minimum use of the electrical system can wire the field circuit of the generator to a conveniently located switch, leaving the switch open on long daylight runs, thus stopping charging, and keeping it closed during short drives.

Brakes.

The running brakes of a car, otherwise known as the service brakes, are the brakes operated by a foot pedal. The hand brake lever controls the emergency brake. Both are usually located at the rear wheels and also usually operate on the same brake drums, one set being the inner expanding and the other outer contracting.

Brushes for Cleaning Parts.

While cleaning the gear set or differential, a long-handled paint brush will be found useful for reaching grease and dirt which have stuck to the sides of the case and are not reached by the kerosene. Get what the painters call a sash tool. It can be used in cleaning dust and dirt out of corners, around the springs and other places.

Valve Grinding Tip.

When grinding valves, be careful not to let particles of emery get into the cylinders. These particles are harder than cast iron, and if some of the emery is caught between the cylinder walls and the piston, they never stop grinding. When completing the job, carefully wipe all emery from the valve and seat and finish with kerosene or gasoline on a cloth as an extra precaution.

A Rust Preventative.

Metal parts beneath the hood and fenders are prevented from rusting by painting with black enamel. Clean the parts well with a wire bdush and apply the enamel with a stiff varnish brush. Parts that may be enameled to advantage includes steel fan blades, pully arms, brackets and elbows, nuts that are not often disturbed, exposed pieces of shafting, piano wheel centers, operating rods, collars, etc. Even a cylinder casting may be so treated, as a good enamel will stand heat without blistering.

Be sure the jacket is quite secure before taking off the rim or wheel.

Inspect every part of the car at regular intervals; there is no part that cannot give trouble if neglected.

A slipping clutch causes constant waste power and fuel, besides imposing an unnecessary train on the motor.

Glycerine applied to the windshield with a piece of cotton or waste, will help keep the glass clean when driving.

The new Six-40 is not a so-called "little six," but a husky, man-size car of distinctive appearance and at a price within the reach of the average pocketbook.
Only such genius as that evolved through fifty patient years' experience in fine coach building could have achieved so complete and satisfying a result. It embodies only standard units of proved quality, each the product of the world's foremost specialists.
Continental, Timken, Delco, Borg & Beck, Spicer, Stromberg, Fedders, etc.—an array of skill not found in any single organization.

SCRAPPER WILLS DODGES JACKSON?

Fight Fans Declare Dusky Challenger Not Eager For Early Bout.

BY DAVIS J. WALSH.
(International News Service.)

NEW YORK, July 15.—Seemingly they are tarred with the same stick, these strong, manly exponents of the buisness of fisticuffing.

Harry Wills has just concluded his solo in plaintive lyric tenor concerning Jack Dempsey's marked distaste for anything the brunette Mr. Wills may have to offer by way of fistic expression and now along comes "Tut" Jackson, another negro.

"Tut" through Billy McCarney, his manager, has already signed a contract to meet Wills at Ebbets field, Brooklyn, August 7. Wills is alleged to have immediately signed up to push some near-beer opponent on the chest at Dykeman Oval, New York, the same week. Having done which, Paddy Mullins left for parts unknown.

McCarney now wishes to intimate that Wills either is avoiding his man, or he, McCarney, doesn't know the difference between cold slaw and rat poison.

Of course, Wills may not be avoiding this Tut Jackson party. He even may be seeking him, night and day, as he walks the streets, staring inquiringly and hopefully into each dark countenance he passes. Perhaps, however, we might let one of Wills' friend explain the difficulty. The later walked into Jack Kearns' office some days ago while the boys were waiting for Mullins to grasp a fountain pen firmly between thumb and forefinger and sign those papers for the Dempsey match.

Give "Tut" the Go-by.

The vistor introduced himelf as the employer of Harry Wills and declared Wills deserved the match not only because of his record in the ring, but also because of his exemplary conduct when out of it. Wills, he declared, would make a great champion.

"Champion?" queried an aggrieved voice in the rear.

"Sure champion; he'll make a monkey out of Dempsey," was the reply. 'Wills has waited long enough for his chance. Besides, he needs the money."

It was then suggested Wills could baffle the poorhouse temporarily by taking on "Tut" Jackson in a bout that would pack the house.

"He would be a fool to meet Jackson now that Dempsey is ready to denfed his title," was the scattering reply, spoken in a tone of flat finality.

Nazzaro Wins in Strasbourg Grind

STRASSBOURG, July 15.—Felix Nazzaro, of Italy, won the eighth grand prix automobile race here today. His time for the distance, a fraction under 500 miles, was 6 hours, 17 minutes, 2 seconds and his average 127.7 kilometers per hour, breaking the grand prix record.

The record of 125.7 kilometers an hour was established by Jimmy Murphy, winner of last year's race. Nazzaro drove a Fiat car.

PULLS BIG JEST ON BOXING FANS

New York Commish Shown Up by Menke as Bunch of Merry Jokers.

BY FRANK G. MENKE
(Copyright 1922 by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Haw, haw! Didja read what ol' Billy Muldoon said when Phil Glassman, manager of Lew Tendler, appeared before the New York state athletic commission? This is it:

"There is one thing this boxing commission will not stand for, and that is permitting any promoter or boxing manager to commercialize the sport."

No seriously intended remark in all history ever was funnier.

Nothing ever was more commercialized than boxing of this era. There isn't a drop of sporting blood in the veins of any man connected with the fighting, the managerial or promotional end of the fistic game today. Everyone in it is money mad—money frenzied. Every word they utter is money. The sport of boxing means nothing—never did mean anything to the men there. Sportsmanship means nothing to them because they never knew the meaning of it.

And now Muldoon says that he will not permit the sport to become commercialized.

Bunch of Dollar Chasers

Whether Billy Muldoon is aware of it or not, that sordid commercialism which has killed boxing as a sport, has been fostered largely during the era that Muldoon has been head of the boxing commission. It has grown to its present nauseating proportions while the same Muldoon looked on and made no outcry.

If Muldoon, who with brave but bunk statements, now is trying to hide the fact that he consciously or unconsciously has been an amazing help to the commercializing of boxing, really had the interest of boxing as a sport in mind, he could have halted the whole proceeding; quite easily could he have stifled its growth.

It is within the province of the commission, which is autocratically bossed by Muldoon, to chop admission prices at boxing shows to one-half or one-third what they are today. But Muldoon did nothing of the sort. And the result is simply this:

Take All the Law Allows

Promoters, with the consent of the commission, can assess New York audiences up to $25 for admission tickets—tnd never do they overlook the chance to assess them as heavily as the lay allows. The fighter knows what the average "gates" should yield—and he demands a "bit" in keeping with the prospective receipts. It has become a money-mad merry-go-round, with the promoter macing the public to the limit and the fighter in turn, clubbing the promoter.

And all the time the public, whose public servant Muldoon really is, and whom Muldon should protect beyond all others, gets it where Mollie wears the imitation pearl necklace.

If Muldon had the public's interest, and the good of sportdom completely at heart, how simple it would have been to accomplish a different result in boxing!

It was necessary only for him to chop the maximum ticket price down to $10 for championship fights—and prices correspondingly low for the non-titular offairs. Then the fighters would have been forced to battle for purses in keeping with the decreased intake— or not at all.

They'd have battled—no fear on that point. If they were unable to get over $2500 or $3000 for the same fights which Muldoon's commission rules now permit them $10,000 or $15,000, they'd have taken it—and been glad to get it. They used to fight for such money in a none too recent era; in the one prior to Muldoon's advent as a boxing commission ruler. And they'd have gladly fought for it again.

But Muldoon has permitted the existence of high prices; permitted the consistent slugging of the New York public for the known benefit of none others than fighters, managers, and promoters, whom he now attempts to condemn.

What a jester Billy Muldoon has turned out to be?

FIERY TIMES IN NATIONAL GAMES

Fur Did Some Tall Flying When Spiders Clashed With Orioles.

"Baseball was a bit different in the olden days—yes, a little bit different," remarked Wilbert Robinson, manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, lapsing into a reminiscent mood. "And how life has changed for an umpire. Now he's a respected, revered citizen. But once upon a time he took his life into his hands every time he wandered onto the ball field.

"Through the years I've seen many exhibitions of courage on the part of umpires; times when arbitrators took a chance on being mobbed in the making of a ruling which, though perfectly fair was against the home team. But the greatest display I ever witnessed was back in the 90s, with the late Tim Hurst playing the stellar role.

"The old Baltimore Orioles, of which I was a member, jaunted along to Cleveland to play the Spiders. It was a toss-up in those days as to which club was fiercer on a ball field. We had Keeler then, McGraw, filled with peppery, fiery youth, Kid Gleason, and a half dozen others who were born battlers. And Cleveland had in its lineup Patsy Tebeau, Kid McKean, Cupid Childs Jack O'Connor, and some other fellows who were as tough as cast iron.

"On this particular afternoon the ordinary ill feeling between the teams had reached a fever pitch. Each of us fought every inch of the way, snapping and snarling at the other, razzing, riding, and threatening with personal violence. It was all that the umpire could do to keep the boys from forgetting baseball temporarily and making it a free-for-all fight.

"Along came the last half of the ninth. The score was tied at 2-2. After two men were out, Childs reached first on a fluke bounder and then stole second. That brought up Tebeau, who, all day, had been at the mercy of Hoffer's slow ball pitching.

"Hoffer shot up a slow one and it came along in tantalizing fashion. Patsy jumped forward and tried to meet the ball before it reached the plate. He missed it. Hurst thereupon cautioned Patsy about jumping out of the box and Patsy simply cussed back some reply. Then it happened—on the next ball pitched.

"As catcher I signalled to Hoffer to send up another one of those slow curves to Patsy. The Cleveland leader saw it coming and, with a mighty leap went about five feet forward, met the ball and sent it crashing over the infield for a hit which scored Childs with the winning run—or, at least with what was supposed to be the victorious tally.

"But the minute Patsy hit that ball, Hurst chased after him and headed him off as he was nearing second.

"'You're out,' he yelled. 'You're out for jumping out of the batter's box.'

"The most fortunate happening of Tim Hurst's life was that the club officials, anticipating that some sort of riot might take place, had stationed nearly two dozen policemen inside the park. For when Hurst's ruling seeped into Tebeau's head, and was passed along to the other Spiders, and also to the crowd which was swarming onto the field there was a concerted dash by maddened ball players and frenzied rooters for the umpire.

Police Came In a Hurry.

"Some of our boys quickly formed a cordon around Hurst. The mob was breaking through to get at Tim when the policemen arrived. It took those officers nearly 20 minutes to get Hurst to a place of temporary safety and about twenty minutes more to clear the field. It seemed a dozen different times as if the police would have to use their revolvers as well as their clubs.

"Finally the field was cleared and the game was renewed. We won out in the twelfth. The Spiders made an effort to tie the score in thir half of the twelfth but they failed. And when the last man out, the crowd jumped out of the stands, onto the field and made a wild rush for Hurst. His ruling not only had cost the Spiders a game, which meant the possible loss of the championship, but it had cost the Cleveland rooters heavily in bets.

"But the police beat the mob to Hurst—by an eyelash. With a double cordon of officers around him, Hurst was escorted off the field and under escort of four policemen was taken down town to his hotel because more than a hundred of the fans followed him out of the park and tried to deal out violence to him there.

"Those weer the days—but not for the umpires!"

CADILLAC

A woman's confidence in her Cadillac is reflected in her deep peace of mind. She approaches the car each day absolutely certain that it is the same ready and reliable Cadillac it was the day before.

As one owner happily phrases it, the Cadillac is the car that one can think in and not about. The beauty, the comfort, the unparalleled gliding-smoothness of the Cadillac will ever rank high in the appreciation of the owner. But we believe these traits are surpassed in her esteem, and their own charm heightened, by her car's sure reliability.

The Cadillac owner achieves the highest form of motoring enjoyment because she is enabled to forget utterly about the mechanism of her car.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

NEW YORK, July 15.

Conflicting movements of a few of the leading industrials and oils furnished the only diverting features of today's brief and dull stock market. Equipments were strong at extreme gains of 1 to 4 points for Baldwin, American and Lima Locomotive, Pullman, Pressed Steel Car, Railway Steel Spring and New York Airbrake. Domestic oils were heavy, presumably as a result of cuts in Crude Products in the middle west and Pacific coast states. Standard Oil of California, Pacific Oil and several of the Mexican group forfeited 1 to 2½ points. Specialties were firm to strong, particularly Corn Products, Sears-Roebuck, International Paper and American Woolen. The closing was irregular. Sales approximated 325,000 shares.

The trend of prices at the opening of today's stock market was mainly upward, suggesting the usual week-end settlement of speculative accounts. Baldwin Locomotive was one of the noteworthy features, scoring 1¾ points. Higher prices also ruled for American Woolen, Coca Cola, Sears-Roebuck, American Smelting, People's Gas and various miscellaneous issues. Railways were inclined to react although an exception was shown by Western Pacific preferred, which rose 1½ points. A decline of 1½ points in Pacific Oil was accompanied by news of a cut in price of crude oil products on the Pacific coast. Leading foreign exchanges were better on the improvement in the German situation.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Dun's today will say:

Seasonable restraints on business are reflected by labor troubles. Activities have not abated in all lines, but strikes have impeded the revival in some industries and the general rate of progress is lower. Congestion in transportation due to the railroad controversy is not widespread, but evidence of delayed merchandise movements is not lacking and the difficulty of obtaining fuel is intensified. With this condition, the recovery in steel output which has been pronounced during recent months, has been checked, some producers reporting reduced running schedules. Against the unsatisfactory phases resulting from industrial disputes, however, there are the unmistakable signs of improvement in various quarters of a stronger sentiment than prevailed early in the year, and of a disposition to operate ahead more confidently. Weekly bank clearings, $6,916,163,924.

GRAIN MARKETS.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 15.

WHEAT—Wheat prices during the early dealings were governed largely by the strength in Liverpool. Short covering was much in evidence at the start and the local sentiment was mixed. The government report on Missouri telling of damage by chinch bugs, said to be more menacing than at any time during the past 25 years, that section, also acted as a factor. After opening unchanged to ⅛c higher, with September $1.13⅝@1.14 and December $1.16⅜@1.16⅝, the wheat market held near to the initial range.

Later moderate gains were scored all around because of apprehension of rapid development of black rust in the spring wheat territory, caused by the higher temperatures. At the close prices varied from unchanged figures to ⅜c higher; September $1.14⅛@1.14¼ and December $1.16⅛@1.16¼.

CORN—Corn and oats were governed by the action in wheat. Trade in coarse grains was only fair. There was some buying of corn futures which was attributed to cash interests. The opening, which ranged from unchanged figures to ⅛ to ¼c higher, with September 65¼c, was followed by a slight gain all around.

Corn showed a firm undertone due mainly to scattered buying by cash houses presumably against further sales to the seaboard for export. At the finish prices were unchanged to ⅛c lower, with September 67⅞@68c.

OATS—Oats started unchanged to ⅛c up, September 37c, and then scored a slight further advance.

PROVISIONS—Higher quotations for hogs tended to lift provisions.

Maggi's Opposition To Code Law Causes Warm Primary Scrap

Probably the warmest legislative fight in Lancaster county this year is the primary contest in the Thirty-second house district, where adherents of the state administration are out to defeat E. G. Maggi for the republican nomination because of his flat-footed declaration against the code law. Maggi is fighting back and has issued the following statement addressed to the voters of his district:

"I am a candidate for the republican nomination to the legislature from the 32nd district, in which you reside. It will be impossible for me to meet or talk to all the voters of the district; therefore, in submitting my candidacy for your consideration, I frankly state my position as to what I shall endeavor to do if elected:

"1st. As a taxpayer I like all others, have felt the excessive burden of an edtravagant state administration, and if eletced I pledge myself to the most rigid economy in matters of appropriations.

"2nd. I favor and will vote for the repeal of the administrative code law, and a return to common sense administration of public business.

"3d. State Bureaus and state inspectors under the code law have wasted the taxpayers' money. They should be abolished.

"4. The taxpayers should be relieved of the army of surplus help at the state house. Their names should be stricken from the state's pay roll.

"5. I favor a revision of the revenue law to the end that all property be more equally assessed. To this end I pledge my efforts and vote."

City Briefs

Saw a Prowler.—Officers made a hasty trip to the home of Mrs. R. E. Peckham 847 South Thirtieth street shortly after 11 p. m. Saturday, when Mrs. Peckham notified the police that a strange man had peered into her kitchen window and later tried to enter through the back door. The officers searched the neighborhood but found no trace of the prowler.

Charge of Speeding.—Frank Pickard, of Havelock, was arrested Saturday afternoon on a charge of speeding. He is to appear in police court Monday morning.

Two Taken by Police.—Charles Barker, 33, was arrested at 7 p. m. Saturday on a charge of drunkenness. At 9:20 p. m. Saturday the officers arrested W. J. Donaldson, 29, living at 1348 High street, on a charge of drunkenness. Both men will face the police judge Monday morning.

Boy Slightly Hurt.—Jacob Singer, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Singer, living at 331 South Twenty-first street, was slightly bruised about the body at 9:30 p. m., Saturday at Thirteenth and O streets, when his bicycle collided with an automobile driven by J. E. Murray, 430 North Twenty-sixth street. The bicycle was badly damaged. According to Mr. Murrey, the boy tried to pass his car, and when he got just in front of it, the bicycle wheels skidded on the streetcar tracks.

Hold Meeting to Form New Party

NEW YORK, July 15.—Several hundred delegates of socialist, labor and farmer organizations met here today to form another political party.

Leaders in the movement represent several hundred thousand workers, socialists and farmers and predicted that a third major political power would grow out of the meeting. The so-called "workers" party was excluded from today's sessions.

Denies Plea For Rehearing of Case

CHICAGO, July 15.—Judge K. M. Landis, baseball commissioner, today denied the petition of William Klapper and James R. Brewster, former owners of the Seattle club of the Pacific coast league, for a re-hearing in the case of Bill Kenworthy, transferred from Seattle to Portland after the close of 1921 season. Judge Landis had previously suspended Brewster, Klepper and Kenworthy for long terms because of irregularities in connection with Kenworthy's transfer.

The decision today said no cause has been shown for modification of the suspension order.

Judge Landis also ruled today that Pitcher Ernie Shore reverts to the Vernon club of the Pacific coast league. Shore was sent to the San Francisco club on trial and when his services were found unsatisfactory San Francisco sought to return him, but Vernon refused to accept the player.

The claims of the Coffeyville, Kan., club against the New York Yankees for $1,000 for Player Ed. S. Neusel was allowed.

MOTOR CAR A BIG FACTOR IN MAILS

Rural Deliveries Have Been Speeded Up Since Automobiles Are Used.

"Former Postmaster General Hays stated a short time ago that the motor vehicle will be recognized as one of the vital factors in the development of civilization," remarks E. E. Mockett, local "good Maxwell" dealer.

"Mr. Hays was thinking of the great aid which the motor has been to the postal department in speeding and facilitating communication, and communication is the factor upon which the progress of civilization is, of course, largely dependent.

"The city dweller, with a mail delivery serving him every few hours, perhaps has failed to notice that delivery has been speeded in the last ten years, just as he has given little attention to the fact that about 300 postoffices in the country's larger cities have been saved thousands of dollars through the use of the motor in their transport service.

"The motor has not only effected a saving in time and dollars but as well, has made it possible for the postal department to handle millions of additional pieces of mail.

"The rural citizen is fully aware of what the motor has done for him in hastening the delivery of his mail. The R. F. D. carrier of today uses a swift moving automobile on his route today in place of the reliable but somewhat leisurely horse of some few years back. The farmer gets his mail, in some cases, six to eight hours earlier than before.

"Of course, a reliable car is needed for this work,—one that is sure to get there and back day after day, capable of negotiating all kinds of weather,—and at low cost.

"Tom Iams, rural carrier of Wood River, Neb., has found his good Maxwell admirably suited to the needs and rigors of R. F. D. service.

"In six months work he has covered his route in this car every week day without missing a trip. He has travelled 5500 miles with a total repair expense of $1.25. He has averaged 18.4 miles per gallon of fuel, which is remarkable when it is considered that his route calls for 78 stops. His cost of maintenance,—gas, oil and so forth has been less than two cents per mile."

NEW GOODYEAR AGENCY OPENS

To Handle Increase in Tire Sales and Tire Service for Lincoln.

The Master Tire Service company is now open for business at 1625 O street with a complete line of Goodyear passenger car and truck tires, and is also fully equipped for all kinds of tire service.

The manager, W. E. Jennings is an old Lincoln resident and his many friends will be glad to know of his return and re-entering into business.

During the past five years Mr. Jennings has been engaged in the tire business in Kansas City, and was formerly associated with his brother, the late Herbert C. Jennings in the building and investment business in Lincoln.

Coincident with the opening of this new Goodyear store the factory at Akron turned out the forty-five millionth tire, which is said to be the largest tire production in the world.

Nebraska Road Conditions

Nebraska highways are in excellent condition today, according to the weekly report of the Lincoln Automobile club. After the heavy rains of the past week most of the roads of the state have been dragged, however there are a few places that remain rough.

Following is the report:

D. L. D.: Lincoln to Omaha, good to Ashland, detour after crossing Ashland bridge, rough. Detour Gretna to Melia, marked slightly rough. Detour at Millard on account of paving. Detours are dry but choppy in places. East O street to Union, thence north to Plattsmouth and Omaha good.

D. L. D.: Lincoln to Hastings, fine. Hastings to Oxford good. Rough just this side of Minden, due to lack of work. Oxford to Edison, one bad bridge, but easy to get by. Roads are put in shape after each rain, and will be found in very good condition. Rough in places between Palisade and Wauneta. Imperial to Chase, a little rough. Sterling reports roads good. Use the D. L. D. from Sterling into Denver.

Cornhusker highway: Good to Beatrice, rough in places to Oklahoma City but dry. Lincoln to Fremont fine, Fremont to Sioux City, rough in stretches.

Bee line: Fremont to Blair, good. Ferry is in operation at Blair. This is a good optional route for tourists enroute to Minnesota, following the Lincoln highway from Missouri Valley to Denison, thence north.

Overland trail: Lincoln to Nebraska City. Detour at Thirty-third and O street. Marked. Roads fine with exception of a slight detour out of Syracuse. (Detour one mile north from Main street of Syracuse, then east into Dunbar).

S. Y. A.: To Grand Island, excellent. Lincoln highway, Omaha to Fremont, detour eleven miles south of Omaha, one mile north then west to Elkhorn. Roads fair to good to Schuyler, rough in stretches to Grand Island. Detour Kearney to Overton, balance of road to Cheyenne, fairly good, with few rough places. One bad ten-mile strip between Julesburg and Big Springs. Cheyenne, Granite canon Buford good. Bosler to Lookout good. Ft. Steel to Greenville rough then excellent to Wamsutter. Rock Springs to Green River very good. Roads in Utah and Nevada, very rough.

College View-Cheney-Bennet road, good in Lancaster county, fair to good in Tecumseh.

L. C. D. to Crete in fine condition. Crete south to Wilber and DeWitt, rough in places, due to lack of dragging.

Lincoln to David City fine. David City to Columbus good. Columbus to Fairmont good in places, Fairmont to Bellville, good.

Rains were reported through Iowa Saturday morning, in the vicinity of Iowa City and Des Moines.

LINCOLN HAS NEW MOON CAR AGENCY

Made the Distributing Point for Time Tried Automobile.

Five Moon Cars Sold Last Week—Have Eleven Body Types.

The newest automobile distributors in Lincoln are J. L. Kennard, G. C. King, W. C. Schaus and E. J. Schaus, jr., who handle the Moon car at 1512 N street.

This distributing agency has been in Lincoln for two weeks and during the last week have sold five Moon automobiles within a fifty mile radius of Lincoln. The Moon distributors and salesmen claim that they have a high grade car at a very moderate price and a car that can be placed among the leading automobiles on the market. The Moon car has been on the market since 1907 and its record has been one of service throughout.

W. C. Schaus has recently returned from a trip to the Moon factory at St. Louis, Mo., where he made a thorough study of the car and the qualifities of the car can be placed before the buyer as they should be represented. The Moon factory allows no mechanic nor apprentices to take part in the construction and manufacture of the car unless he has had ten years of experience in automobile manufacturing, and by following this rule a high class car nearly mechanically perfect in every detail has been placed upon the market.

The Moon factory turns out three different model cars with eleven different body styles, including various sport bodies, sedans and coupes. The small model engine in the five passenger car is rated at and develops fifty horsepower while the large model engine is rated at sixty-eight horse power.

Mr. Schaus who returned from a selling trip Saturay from Beatrice and Fairbury visited close to fifty Moon owners who have been so pleased with the qualities of the car that many of them are buying new cars of the smake make.

Have Service Shop.

A service shop is run in connection with the local distributors operated by high class mechanics and repairs of all kinds for the car are kept on hand and it is not necessary to send the car to factory headquarters for engine work.

The firm has contracted for a show room at the state fair grounds and during the fair models and body styles of every design will be demonstrated to interested visitors.

The demand for the Moon car has grown so rapidly within the past year that it has become necessary to establish distributing plants and dealers in various parts of the country. There are now two in Nebraska, one in Lincoln and one in Hastings and others are yet to be established in new territories.

Nash Averages 25 Miles to Each Gallon on Trip

Of interest, from the standpoint of economy, to the automobile owner who is planning a cross country tour this summer is the experience of William Milenz and his wife who have just arrived in Kenosha after an over land trip from Los Angeles in their Nash Four.

"Our total gasoline expense for the entire trip of 2,800 miles, including detours was exactly $34.34, even with gasoline at certain filling stations in the west as high as 45 cents a gallon," said Mr. Milenz. "Our cost for oil was an even seven dollars, thus making the total cost of our transportation $41.74, or $20.87 apiece."

From a complete log of the trip made by Mr. Milenz it is shown that the average cost of gasoline was 31 cents a gallon and that a total of 112 gallons were used, thus making an average, including necessary mountain climbs of 25 miles to the gallon. The car arrived in Chicago with the same air in its tires that was put in at Los Angeles and the same water in the radiator put in at Albequerque. In addition to the two passengers the car carried 1,000 pounds of luggage, including a camping outfit.

Although the roads for the most part were good, they were rough in sections, including one stretch of 200 miles over what Mr. Milenz describes as ragged rock. "But," said Mr. Milenz "just look at my tires; they are exactly like new, if the casings are worn at all it is barely noticeable. No punctures, no trouble of any kind whatsoever on that entire 2,800 miles. We're going back in a week or two on those same tires and I really believe we will experience no trouble whatever on our return trip either."

Both Mr. and Mrs. Milenz were enthusiastic over the tourist camp system introduced by various towns for the benefit of automobile travelers.

"They are just splendid," says Mrs. Milenz. "Most of the camps provide every convenience imaginable. There are facilities for cooking, provisions may be had at reasonable prices and excellent supervision over all arrangements is exercised."

Mr. and Mrs. Milenz came east over the southern route to Kansas City and then on the Jefferson and Lincoln Highways to Chicago.

Automobile is Leading People to the Suburbs

One of the most striking utterances of recent times is the warning of Roger Bason to buy suburban real estate, according to Lynn McNaughton, general sales manager of the Cadillac Motor Car company.

"It is not the statement itself," explains Mr. McNaughton, "but the underlying thought, expressed and unexpressed, that accompanied that statement, that is tremendously interesting to the automobile industry.

"It signifies that there is a reverse movement to the suburban home following the crowding to the cities during the last decade. This movement to the country is prophesied as being the greatest shifting in population since the institution of the railroad.

"This movement has been brought about mainly by the automobile and fostered by the high rents of the city. People now figure out that it is cheaper to purchase an automobile and live in the open spaces far from the city than pay the city rents and live in congested quarters.

"At the present time there is approximately an average of one automobile to every ten persons. These automobiles have brought better roads and have opened up millions of acres of land. These automobiles have torn down the barriers around the cities. They will tear them down even more in the future.

"According to statistics of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce 135,000 suburban homes in 50 cities depend on motor transportation. The automobiles carried nearly six times as many passengers as the steam railroads. There are nearly 309,000 automobiles on the farms alone.

"These facts are significant in showing the absolute dependence of our people on the automobile and also indicates why there must be a continuing large production of automobiles for years to come."

"In developing the suburban community from homes of hundreds to homes of thousands the automobile is simply exhibiting another way in which it is a boon to humanity in its potentialities for happiness and beautiful home sites," said Mr. McNaughton.

A rubber tire will decay just by standing idle. Occasional use of a piece of cotton or waste will help.

Love Letters of the Early Sixties Might Prove Models for Young Cavaliers of Today Who Would Put Their Views of Marriage on Paper—Same Old Story in Different Words

BY LULU MAE COE.

Spontaneous, frank, easy as are the letters of today, it was a treat to come upon some model correspondence of more than half a century ago. Possibly the "good old days" were the best, but the writer of the circumlocutory epistle given below could not accomplish as much in a day in 1864 as he could in 1922, for so much verbiage could never be tucked in between a golf game and a conference.

If you were a young lady living in Salt Basin, when Indians whooped in the back yard and received the following letter, would you have known exactly what the composer wanted—and how would you have enjoyed the dissertation on wealth?

Was It Always Thus?

You who would be a model in your love letters examine this one:

"Miss Sophia: It is a general reflection against the manners of the present age, that marriage is only considered one of the methods by which avarice may be satisfied, and poverty averted; that neither the character nor accomplishments of the woman are much regarded, her merit being estimated by the thousands of her fortune. I acknowledge that the accusation is too true, and to that may be ascribed the many unhappy matches we daily meet with; for how is it possible that those should ever have the same affection for each other, who were forced to comply with terms for which they had the utmost aversion, as if they had been allowed to consult their own inclinations and give their hands where they have engaged their hearts? For my own part, I have always determined to consult my inclinations where there is the least appearance of happiness, and having an easy independency, am not anxious about increasing it; being convinced that in all states the middle one is best, I mean neither poverty nor riches; which leads me to the discovery of a passion for you, which I have long endeavored to conceal.

"The opportunities which I have had of conversing with you at Mrs. Baker's have at last convinced me that merit and riches are far from being connected, and that a woman may have those qualifications necessary to adorn her sex, although adverse fortune has denied her money. I am sure all those virtues necessary to make me happy in the marriage state are centered in you, and whatever objections you may have to my person, yet I hope there can be none to my character; and if you will consent to be mine, it shall be my constant study to make your life agreeable. I shall expect your answer as soon as possible, for I wait for it with the utmost impatience.

"I am your affectionate lover."

Cost of Loving Nothing.

The high cost of loving was as nothing to them for one Jack announces in his letter that:

"I am well settled in my work, and my wages are eight dollars a week. You and I can live on that and I shall bring it home untouched on Saturday evening. I will not go to any tavern, but as soon as my work is done, return home to my dearly beloved Sally."

Sally has looked upon the world, from her reply, and knows that men are deceivers ever. She takes a very calm view of what life may bring her, however—but oh, what would a regular woman's right, twentieth century woman think of the ending?

"Dear Jack: "I received your very kind letter, but I do not know what to say in answer. Although I would be very glad to marry you, yet you men are so deceiving, that there is no such thing as trusting you. There is Tom Timber, the carpenter, and Jack Brown, the smith, who have not been married above six months, and every night come home drunk and beat their wives. What a miserable life is that, Jack, and how do I know but you may be as bad to me? How do I know but you like them may get drunk every night, and beat me black and blue before morning! I do assure you, Jack, if I thought that would be the case, I would scrub floors and scour sauce pans as long as I live. But possibly you may not be so bad; for there is Will Cooper, the brasier, and Oliver Smith, the painter, who are both very happy with their wives; they are home-bringing husbands, and have every day a hot joint of meat. I know not yet what I shall do, but I will meet you on Sunday, and then we will talk of the matter.

"I am, dear Jack,

Your most humble Servant."

And Pope once penned these lines:

Heaven first taught letters for some wretch's aid,
Some banished lover, or some captive maid;
They live! they breathe! they speak what love inspires!
Warm from the heart, and faithful to its fires!

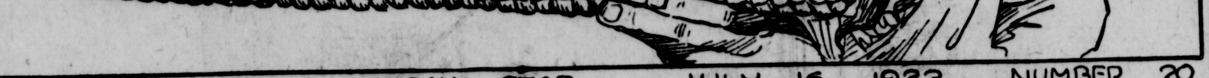

Monday Evening Dates.

Monday evening dates were momentous affairs in those days, to witness this note to a girl upon whom some man desired to call. This had been preceded by an elaborate communication to her father upon the same subject.

"Miss: I hope I shall stand excused in venturing to make known to your honored father the great desire I have to be thought worthy of a relation to him. As he has not discouraged me in the hopes I have entertained, that I may possibly be not unacceptable to him, and to all your worthy family, I propose to do myself the honor of a visit to you next Monday. Though he has been so good as to promise to introduce

Vacant Lot in Lincoln Business Section Transformed into Beauty Spot by Axis Club

Part of Vision of Lincoln Girl to Make City Beautiful by Chain of Small Parks Similar to Scheme Used in Washington, D. C.

CITIZENS CONTRIBUTE MATERIAL AND LABOR

Plot on N Street Turned Into Grassy Nook With Vine-grown Lattice Tall Shady Trees and Flower Gardens by Public-Spirited Citizens.

BY JESSIE WATSON

In the heart of Lincoln's business section is a beautiful spot which few persons pass without pausing to take a second look—a cool little grassy nook with vine-grown lattice and tall, shady trees in the background, a clump of shrubbery at the right and neatly kept flower gardens in the foreground. It is into this park that the Axis club has transformed the vacant lot on N street between Twelfth and Thirteenth.

The little park itself is no mean accomplishment, but lying back of it is a vision of much greater things for the city, and as "great oaks from little acorns grow" so may a city-wide little-park movement be the outgrowth of this one.

The vision of Lincoln beautiful through a system of little parks originated with Miss Bernice Branson, a Lincoln artist who spent several years in Washington, D. C., employed in the section of illustration of the agricultural department. A University Place girl, Miss Edna Mae Whitehorn, who is a friend of Miss Branson, was in the section of illustration of the landscape gardening at the same time. Through her Miss Branson became interested in a bulletin entitled "Beautifying the Farmstead." This bulletin showed sketches of a number of farm homes as they actually were and as they might be. Miss Whitehorn's work was to make these sketches and through the contrast show the possibilities for beautifying the particular places she sketched.

Pattern For Future

Often two ideas linked together make an inspiration, and that is exactly what took place in Miss Branson's mind. Scattered through the city of Washington are many beautiful little parks. They are mostly triangular, formed at the intersections of the streets. Each one is a work of art, with its grass, flowers, shrubbery and trees. Attractive benches invite the passerby to stop and rest for a few minutes.

Miss Branson enjoyed these parks very much and thought, "How nice it would be if Lincoln could have a system of little parks!" With this thought she connected the idea of sketching the plot of ground as it is and as it might be.

Now the landscape gardening department of the national department of agriculture has done considerable work to encourage the development of beautiful landscape in the east and the south. But Miss Branson felt that beautiful parks were just as necessary here as in the east. So in a modest way she laid the foundation for a big movement.

Plans to Beautify Grounds

Arriving home in September, 1921, Miss Branson began to make her plans for Lincoln. Last spring she made water color sketches of two plots of ground as they were and as they might be—the vacant lot across the street west from the city library and the one on N street that is now so beautiful.

The Thirteen club, made up of employes of George Brothers, whose place of business adjoins the lot between Twelfth and Thirteenth streets, had done some work on that lot the year before. It was cluttered up with a lot of rubbish and the club had put up a trellis in front of the rubbish, several feet back from the street, and planted vines and flowers to hide the sordidness behind the trellis. This was a decided improvement over the confused appearance the lot had presented, but Miss Branson foresaw even greater possibilities if a larger organization would take charge.

So Miss Branson made the two sketches of each lot and took them to various clubs to interest them in the movement. She took her sketches to the city planning department of the Chamber of Commerce and presented her idea. She also took up the matter with the Woman's club, the Axis club and the Business Women's league. All were very much interested in the movement. The Business Women's league agreed to take charge of the lot across from the library and the Axis club promised to take the other lot. Then word was received that it would not be worth while to begin work on the lot across from the library because it would probably be sold; so the Business Women's league had to give it up.

Axis Club Lends Hand

Miss Kate Field, president of the Axis club, appointed Miss Margaret Lewis general chairman in charge of the work on the lot and later on Mrs. C. L. Miles was made a joint chairman. They lost no time in starting things moving. A number of Axis club girls signed up to work on the lot, but of course there was a great deal of heavy work that had to be done by men.

The plan was to make a little park extending back from the walk a hundred feet. Miss Lewis asked City Commissioner Charles Bryan to cooperate, and he sent men with teams and wagons from his department to clean up the ground. They hauled away stones and rubbish and leveled up the ground. Burt George of George Brothers had the company's janitor do quite a bit of the rough work. George Brothers also had the trellis built. Burt George of George Brothers donating the lath. Philip Edinborough, city park superintendent, mixed the grass seed and furnished it. He also contributed a few bulbs and some shrubbery from the city parks. Chapin Brothers and the Lincoln Floral company contributed plants and bulbs, and Bert George, D. H. Truell and Kent Wassung gave a number from their private gardens. A large bed of foliage and geraniums came from the State University.

The only expense the Axis club had was about $10 to put the plumbing in order so that hose could be used to water the ground, as expense of hose, posts, paint, vines and incidentals were taken care of by George Bros.

Citizens Help in Work

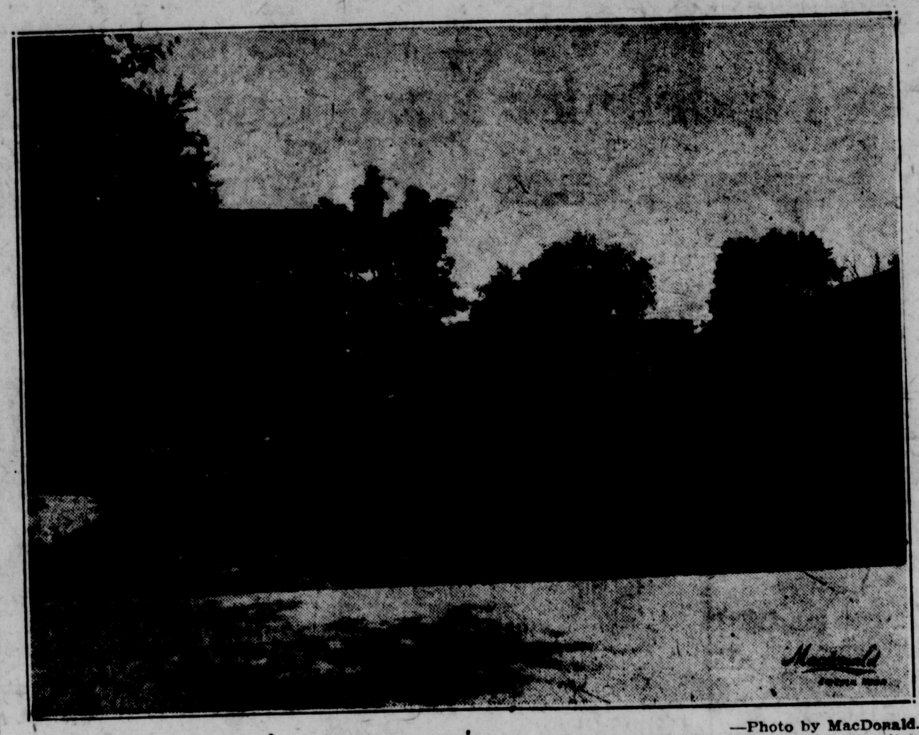

When it was time to plant the seed a great deal of work was needed to prepare the ground. Miss Ruth Dassenbrock, Miss Ann Gerdes and Miss Anna McCray of the Axis club did part of this work. Among the men who did the heavier part of the work are Bert George, W. A. Miles, J. H. Biddle and Dr. L. C. Patterson. Dr. Patterson is intensely interested in the garden and has worked in it almost every evening.

This summer Axis club girls have taken turns watering the garden and pulling weeds, and Henry Hahn, George Brothers' janitor, works in it a part of each day.

No attempt has been made to make the lot an elaborate park, but it is refreshing to see a neat little spot of green right off the pavement in the business part of town. And what an improvement it is over a junk heap!

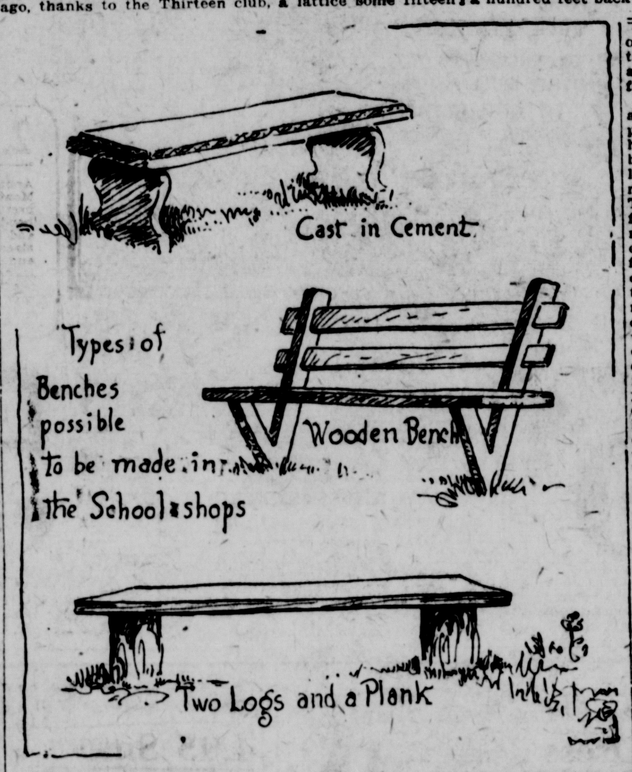

There is still one thing lacking, and Miss Branson has her plans for that. She is hoping that the school children will make benches so that people can not only pause and look but can stop in the park and rest.

This little park is the beginning of a big plan, and Miss Branson does not mean to let that plan drop. She is enthusiastically backed by the girls in the Washington club, who are all very enthusiastic about the little triangular parks in Washington. Perhaps the strongest argument that could be made in favor of a system of little parks is the successful realization of this one.

This picture shows the vacant lot on the south side of N street, between Twelfth and Thirteenth streets, as it appears this season. It represents the second stage in the development of a little park from a junk heap. Two years ago the lot was covered with rubbish. One year ago, thanks to the Thirteen club, a lattice some fifteen feet back from the walk with vines growing over it and flowers in front hid the rubbish from the passerby. This year through the initiative of Miss Bernice Branson and the work of the Axis club with the co-operation of Lincoln citizens and city officials a little park extending a hundred feet back from the walk has been developed.

What's the use of having a nice little park if you can't sit in it? Admitted that a little beauty spot for people to look at as they pass along the street serves a very good purposes, still a park would be about twice as valuable if it had a few seats. The above drawings were made by Miss Bernice Branson, the artist who drew the plan for the little park developed by the Axis club. Many adult citizens have contributed to the Axis club project, and here is an opportunity for Lincoln's younger citizens to do their part.

LOVE LETTERS OF EARLY SIXTIES

me, and I make no doubt has acquainted you with it, I nevertheless give you the trouble of these lines, that I might not appear wanting in any outward demonstration of that inviolable respect with which I am, dear Miss,

Your Devoted Humble Servant."

A Youngster's View.

Precocious youngsters are so common as to excite little comment in this day and age, but the precocity displayed by the writer of the following letter, away at boarding school, would excite more alarm than admiration in the average modern home:

"Dear Charles, Little Master Billy Thompson is going in tomorrow in the stage, and I have sent this by him to you. We are all well at school, and I have got as far as Ovid; I have likewise got through the rules of practice, of which I shall give you a better account when I come to town on the fourth of July. Dear brother, give my duty to papa and mama, and tell them I long to see them; I pray for them and you every day; and I have read over the Complete Duty of Man, which my mamma gave me. I spend an hour every day in reading Dr. Goldsmith's Roman History. Pray Charles, send me some books, for I am very fond of reading; and a neat red pocket book, and I shall do more for you when I leave school.

I am your loving Brother."

Daughter to Mother.

The following young lady had been accused of levity in her letters by her mother—how unfortunate that some present day specimens were not open to her perusal—which she called upon her daughter to recognize as one of the things not being done by the elect. Daughter must have agreed, as her letter so freely confesses:

"Honored Mother: I am so much affected by the perusal of your kind parental advice, that I can scarcely hold the pen to write and answer; but duty to the best of parents obliges me to make you easy in your mind before I take any rest myself. That levity, so conspicuous in my former letters, is too true to be denied; nor do I desire to draw a veil over my own folly. No, madam, I freely confess it, but, with great sincerity, I must at same time declare, that they were written in a careless manner, without considering the character of the person to whom they were addressed; I am fully sensible of my error, and, on all future occasions shall endeavor to avoid giving the least offense. The advice you sent me in your letter needs no encomium; all that I desire, is, to have it engraven on my heart. My dear madam, I love religion, I love virtue, and I hope no consideration will ever lead me from those duties, in which alone I expect future happiness. Let me beg to hear from you often, and I hope that my whole future conduct will convince the best of parents that I am what she wishes me to be. Your affectionate and dutiful daughter."

Auburn Couple Celebrates Golden Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Cranmer of Auburn, a prominent pioneer couple of Nemaha county, celebrated their golden wedding Sunday, July 9. A double celebration was held on that day for it was also the seventy-second birthday anniversary of Mr. Cranmer.

The wedding party consisting of the bride and groom of fifty years ago and their three daughters and their families, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hanniford and son, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Codington, son and two daughters, and Mr. and Mrs. William Humphrey and daughter, and a few friends drove to Brownville, where through the courtesy of R. Ponn, son of an old boyhood friend of Mr. Cranmer, and Mrs. Ponn, who own the cottage where fifty years ago Mr. and Mrs. Cranmer were united in marriage, the marriage vows were renewed amid the strains of wedding music and with the bride and groom standing in the same room and on the same spot as they did fifty years ago.

Afterward there was a wedding dinner at the Cranmer home prepared by the daughters, assisted by the bride. A large wedding cake lighted with fifty candles adorned the center of the table while at the head of the table before Mr. Cranmer's place was a birthday cake with seventy-two candles. Sweet peas and ferns were used in the attractive decorations of the home.

Although ill health and business prevented the five brothers and sisters of Mr. and Mrs. Cranmer from attending the golden wedding they remembered the occasion with a gift of gold and the couple was presented with a purse of fifty dollars in gold and a beautiful gold and white embroidered lunch cloth.

Mrs. Cranmer was born at Carthage, Ill., Dec. 12, 1857, and came with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. W. T. Tannar to Watson, Mo., when five years of age. At the age of fifteen she came to Brownville to attend school, making her home with Judge Jarvis S. Church, her uncle, and it was there she met and married Mr. Cranmer.

Mr. Cranmer was born in Holt county, Mo., July 9, 1850. He came with his parents to Brownville in the spring of 1865 and was married July 9, 1872 to Bettie C. Tannar by Reverend Rippetoe at the home of Judge Church.

The month following their marriage they left for a homestead in Harlan county near Alma. The trip of course was made overland and required two weeks. There they lived for ten years among the Indians and wild buffalo and for the greater part of that time with the nearest railroad fifty miles away. The first home was a dug out and in that they lived while Mr. Cranmer was building a log house of one room with one door and window. Five years later Mr. Cranmer built a two room frame house with real windows and doors.

The first four years' crops were destroyed by grasshoppers which came as a dark cloud hanging over the crops but when the cloud lifted all that was left were the stalks perfectly stripped of their blades. They experienced the terrible Easter storm of 1873 which took as its toll many lives and hundreds of cattle and stock. A family of four who were spending the day at the Cranmer home, the Cranmer family and the chickens and calves which it was necessary to bring into the house in order to save their lives were imprisoned for four days in the one room house. The horses in the barn survived but the cattle in the valley perished. Many hardships were suffered especially during the years of the drouth when at times there was no food in the house but there were many pleasures along with it all and many true and lasting friendships were formed during these early years. There were buffalo hunts and visits to Buffalo Bill's camp which in 1874 was located only a short distance from their home. Years afterward when Mr. Cranmer with his family visited the World's Fair in Chicago the old friendship was renewed with Buffalo Bill.

Mr. and Mrs. Cranmer returned to Nemaha county in 1883, locating on a farm near there where they remained for only a short time as Mr. Cranmer soon entered the mercantile business in Brownville. Twenty-five years ago he moved to Auburn to engage in the clothing business. He retired from active business ten years ago.

Six children, four daughters and two sons, were born to th ecouple. Three of the daughters live in Auburn.

WESLEYAN NOTES.

E. E. Edling, '16, has writen from Malanje, Portugueza, Africa, that he and Mrs. Edling are enjoying their work and are building some needed residence. "Our school house is over crowded. Our church is filled every Sunday sometimes to overflowing." They plan to return to the United States at the end of five years residence abroad.

MOVIE ACTRESSES AND THEIR HAIR

Did it ever occur to you that every movie actress you have seen has lovely hair, while the most popular count their curls as their chief beauty? In fact, many are leading ladies just because of their attractive looks. Inquiry among them discloses the fact that they bring out all the natural beauty of their hair by careful shampooing, not with any soap or makeship, but with a simple mixture by putting a teaspoonful of canthrox (which they get from the druggist) in a cup of water and applying this instead of soap. This full cup of shampoo liquid is enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. After its use, the hair dries rapidly with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. The hair is so fluffy that it looks much heavier than it is, its luster and softness are delightful.—Advertisement.

Lincoln Women Can See the City's Needs With Eyes of Understanding and Sympathy Buildings, Parks, Playgrounds, Philanthropy are Included in the List of What Lincoln Needs Most.

AN AWAKENED CONSCIOUSNESS

Lincoln Women Show Interest in Public Questions from Auto Parking to Care of the Public Health.

BY LULU MAE COE

Th motor drew up at the entrance with a flourish. The chauffeur popped from his seat with unusual alacrity to open the door.

From the car stepped two persons, a man and a woman. If her hat bore the label of Georgette, if her gown brought thoughts of the Rue de la Paix or the Avenue de l'Opera, if her complexion had received its lessons in Primrose house, if his accessories and the very smart luggage at his feet had come over the water from Bond street, it was nevertheless clear from the softened look in their eyes, the alert decisiveness of their gait as they crossed the porch, and the evident enjoyment of their surroundings that this modern Lincoln house of brick and stucco was Home.

Once inside the door, gazing upon the familiar surroundings of the living room, the man turned and said:

"Everything as we left it, my dear Not a thing changed."

She scrutinized the "neglected inches," the corner of a pillow that had been unsewed before the months' absence, but had not been mended, furniture coverings that were faded and out of date seen with the eyes of unfamiliarity, a lamp shade, once prized, but worn now from sunlight carelessly allowed to shine upon it, answered:

"But not because change was unnecessary."

Coming to Lincoln after an absence of years the returned wanderer can feel that Lincoln has progressed, slowly perhaps and not beyond a point where there is little left to be done, but some distance at least, toward the goal its best people have set for it. The possible slowness of this change has not been "because change was unnecessary."

Lincoln's hope lies in the fact that it recognizes that all has not been attained and several devices are necessary before the top is reached, which is one very long step toward the elimination of deficiencies.

Lincoln Women Plan

During the past week, a number of women, prominent in their various niches in the club and philanthropic life of the city, were asked if they considered that Lincoln were in need of any improvement, material or aesthetic, and, if so, what were the needs. It was agreed that Lincoln, if it were to grow and to retain its eminence a sthe capital city of the state, did need certain improvements. That each one did not see its needs in the same light was but natural, for different ones would but see them in individual lights, and that they were as varied as they were proves that the city is waiting for several things to leaven its inanimation of growth.

The things suggested were not mere women-things, that the business man with his eye fastened on the financial expenditures would brand as impractical or visionary. Some of the suggestions were intangible, ones that it would be impossible to say "here" and "there" that shall be done, but none the less worth while for that, some dealt with very pressing problems in the city, and some were of things that a man would not see, which at the same time would affect his welfare or pleasure.

Probably the need which Mrs. T. F. A. Williams sees is the one that will attract the most widespread attention from the man in the office, whether he be employer or employe. From the war days, when giving became so popular, we have become legitees of many drives. Each organization has its own tag day or contribution drive, which takes the workers into the offices, distracting the workers from the labors and which levies its funds from the same people over and over again. According to Mrs. Williams, there is much duplication of effort in several of these agencies, and the same purpose is served twice. To eliminate this rather undesirable feature, Mrs. Williams made her suggestions as follows:

"I believe Lincoln should have a better co-ordination of philanthropic work. There are a great number of social agencies for the care of the mal-adjusted, both curative and preventative agencies, each one working without a knowledge of what the others are doing or of the widespread need of the community."

Lacking Co-Operation

"The spirit is excellent, but there are too many organizations not lacking good will but lacking co-operation. The business men feel it during the drives, and a small number of them are giving a great deal. In addition to the organic co-ordination between them, we need the elimination of some or the adjustment of their work. If it were to be investigated, I feel certain that some health work is not being done at all, while other is being done twice; there are gaps that need to be filled. This would add to the comfort of the business man and the welfare of the community."

"We need a council of social agencies, which would oversee the social service work of the city, and, while it could not prevent new organizations from being formed, it could make it harder because some central organization would know of the work being done."

"We do not need less philanthropy but we need it more wisely directed through knowing what the community needs and the work that is being done to alleviate the trouble."

Mrs. Williams is likewise in favor of having block playgrounds in the city, where the children under eight years of age can have their good times under the mother's eye. By closing the alleys in the residence districts, many of them unnecessary, she would make it possible for the center of each block to be equipped with playground apparatus, and arranged for the use of the tiny children.

Another person in favor of playgrounds for children is Mrs. G. H. Wentz, president of the Lincoln council of Mothers' clubs and Parent-Teachers associations, who believes that the school grounds could be used by the children in the summer as playgrounds. She would have them supervised, as all good playplaces are, and have them open all day for the boys and girls, so that they would not need to play on the streets.

Parks Improved

Mrs. Wentz sees need outside of her own particular line of interest, and in seeing them recognizes one of the problems that are of paramount interest in the city at present.

"I believe that the parking system of Lincoln should be improved. In other cities in which I have been, cars are only allowed to park during the busy hours of the day for limited periods in certain restricted zones. When I come into the city—my home is quite a way out—I have to park several blocks from down town, and there are many people who have the same difficulty. This could be avoided if machines in the business section were only permitted to stay there for a certain number of hours."

"In the evening, it would be of great benefit if the restriction on the white lines, except near fire hydrants was removed, as the lines are long and a number more cars could be accommodated in this way."

"I have another parking need in she continued. "Lincoln could be vastly improved if small parks, only a block square, if necessary, were built in the different residential portions of the city. The city parks are so far from some people that it is almost impossible for them to ever enjoy their pleasures, so very pleasant in hot weather. If small parks were situated so that they could be easily reached, it would be a great benefit to the people in many sections of the city."

Speaking from the point of view of the modern woman, who has achieved much, but who is not yet awake to the opportunities for service at her hand, Mrs. Annis Chaiken Sorenson feels that one of Lincoln's greatest needs is a vitalized consciousness on the part of many of its women. Rather intangible, that, but as she talks one can only feel that such an awakening would go a good way to lessen Lincoln's present needs.

Arouse Women's Interest

Mrs. Sorenson says: "Lincoln needs an aroused interest on the part of a large number of its women. We are fortunately situated here, having, as Lincoln does, a proportionately larger number of college women than other cities of the state, who are well equipped for public service. But the young people of the city do not seem awake to their opportunities."

"In New York, the teachers and other employed women of the city, made a house to house canvass to determine the sentiment of the residents for suffrage. New York had suffrage before Nebraska—and the men lay its victory to the active interest of the women, both young and old. At the time of the primaries, they go out to urge people to come to the polls, the young women do."

In continuing her thought, Mrs. Sorenson, who is publicity chairman for the state League of Women Voters, said that the conspicuous figures in the national organization of that body are young women, that the chairman of the Child Welfare committee is a girl just a few years out of college.

"I feel that this lack of interest is due to the advantages of Lincoln. There are good schools here, social agencies, and many other things, without many of the streets' problems of other places, and the young woman becomes apathetic to public service, especially when compared with other cities of its size."

"Something is needed that will awaken a certain inherent faculty in all. That inherent faculty for service is limited at present to narrow spheres, and women, young women particularly, are not yet aroused to the realization of their latent ability for public service and the opportunity Lincoln affords for this service. Lincoln women are receptive."

Nebraska Has Given Much

"Young women need to realize that Nebraska has given them much, and they should question, 'What can I do in return?' As the center of learning in the state, the people have a certain obligation. Lincoln needs more to give out than to take in."

"I feel that a woman's club building is needed also in the city, so that the different organizations may become acquainted with each other and their activities co-ordinated. The building should be large enough to house all the activities of all the woman's organizations, so that Lincoln may have the knowledge that these different groups do exist and that they have much in common."

In the mind of Mrs. L. M. Raymond Jr., one of Lincoln's greatest needs is a contagious building at the new city hospital, where illnesses that can not be taken care of in the usual way can be taken and assured of good care. In telling of this Mrs. Raymond said:

"It seems to me that, without doubt, we should have a contagious building at the city hospital. Here we have a university of several thousand students without an infirmary, and no place to take a student if he is ill. We also need such a place for the maids in our homes and for others who cannot have the proper care in their own homes."

To provide a play place for people, so that they need not all go to one spot for outdoor entertainment, Mrs. Raymond suggested that the city secure all of the wooded tract lying between Lincoln park and the penitentiary. This tract, according to her plans, would remain as far as possible in its natural state, so that the trees need not be destroyed but golf links, tennis courts, and play grounds would be planned and equipped for the benefit of those going to the park.

To Mrs. Raymond, the last great need for the city is the securing for the Detention home a new site. She feels that the present one is outgrown and that the children there need more grounds and more comfortable quarters if the home is to realize its best purpose.

"An opportunity for people past their childhood to play" is the necessity which Mrs. Carl B. Newlon would secure for Lincoln people.

Need For Self Expression

"Of course, they have athletics, which develop them physically but I see that they need to be able to express themselves, and dramatic art allows this freedom of expression. If we had community players, which gave those desiring such expression an opportunity to take part in plays, I believe that one of the city's needs would be filled."

"We cannot hope for many traveling companies to appear, and while the University Players give excellent productions once a month, and the 'movies' are good, there is still a need to allow the person interested in this line o fendeavor to be creative."

"I would like to see a community playhouse erected, too, but that can only be a hope until we are assured of an audience to fill it to capacity every time that a play would be presented. That will come with time, after we have filled the creative need, which is more pressing."

Civic pride is the keynote of the thoughts of Miss Grace Trott, who is to guide the Business Women's league during the coming year. Mentioning a vacant lot at Twelfth and G streets, which has become the permanent residing place of old lumber, tin cans broken tree limbs, trash, and any other refuse of a city, she said:

"That place is one of the most unsightly in the city, although it is not alone in its appearance, and I feel that we need more prde in our city. I would not advocate going around to all the vacant lots and making bowers of them, but I do think it would be possible to at least grass over some of the worst of them, and create a more attractive Lincoln."

"Why could not the inmates of the city jail, in place of morning calisthenics, cut the weeds, pile up the lumber, and generally clean up the place?"

"Where one tourist reads the advertisements of the beauties of Lincoln, a hundred will see these disreputable corners and that is the impressions that they will carry to their homes with them. Nothing advertises a city to advantage like a neat, well kept appearance and this city certainly needs to straighten out a few of its uninhabited lots."

Buildings, parks, playgrounds, pride, better managed philanthropy, awakened consciousness—a formidable list, not one of which is nonessential in the conduct of a city. A thoughtful list, made by women who have a large and far seeing vision, but a list that makes Lincoln realize that there are several steps ahead before it can look down on others striving but rather must it look up to others that are succeeding, after striving.

All courses are double periods as planned for the second term. A student may carry two courses or six hours credit. Classes will begin at 7:20 a. m. No classes are listed for the afternoon. Prof. R. W. Deal will give a course on the history of education. Prof. E. T. Engle has scheduled a course in general biology and one in educational theory. TAX-EATERS.

There has sprung up in this country in the last twenty or thirty years, a new occupation which is assiduously followed by persons who may be aply called "tax-eaters." They are the useless hordes for which countless commissions, boards and bureaus are created that the former may become attached to the public treasury and used, if necessary, as political helpers in time of need. Time was when America could boast of the small percentage of her citizens who were in the employ of the government instead of in some productive occupation, but nowadays the proportion of men working for the government as compared with those in gainful occupations is alarming. A government job at the best is a menace to prosperity, but when we create artificial duties in order to make more government jobs, prosperity becomes actually impaired.

The question of high taxes is but another method of scrutinizing the evils resulting from too much bureaucracy. Taxes cannot be reduced until government expenditures are reduced and this, in turn, cannot be accomplished until thousands of persons now in the employ of the government, federal, state and county, are taken off the government payroll.

Senator Borah, in a recent verbal explosion concerning the United States shipping board, gave the taxpayer something to think about. Said Mr. Borah:

"There are now seven members of the United States shipping board. They enjoy a salary of $12,000 each. After reading the hearings on the merchant marine bill one would readily conclude that there is no possible excuse for having seven high salaried commissioners. If this were a business institution instead of a republic there would likely be one commissioner and that would be plenty. To pay seven men $12,000 each to preside over the decrepit days, according to their own showing, of this moribund and money losing, money squandering affair is sheer waste of the taxpayers' money. We are told daily that we must get rid of these ships even if we have to pay a large bonus to have some one take them. Why not get rid of some commissioners—not that any one has a personal objection to them, but solely in the interest of economy? But the shipping board is only an illustration of the situation in Washington. I venture to say thot $1,000,000 could be saved annually by cutting out commissions and bureaus and unnecessary offices. Not only would we save money, but we would have more efficiency and more responsible public service. I invite the budget commissioner to investigate these overloaded commissions and these sinecures."

But it is not necessary to go to Washington to find glaring examples of wasteful methods in government. Our own state government reveals a sickening extravagance and a brazen assault upon the people's money. Governmental expenditures for the first six months this year reached a total of nearly seven million dollars, or more than a million dollars a month. To be exact, it costs the Nebraska state government $1,132,937.50 per month to carry on its business. Four years ago the state government was operated at a figure scarcely larger than is now spent in three months.

The overburdened taxpayer, demanding the reason for this, may be told either one of two things. He may be told that the war and the present period of high prices has boosted government costs, or he may be told to glance at the greatly inflated list of employes now working for the state government. There is perhaps an atom of truth in the first reason, though the farmer will wonder where the high prices are as he disposes of a load of grain. But the chief cause is the long list of employes now drawing pay from the government. The cost of the operation of the code law, itself, is sufficient cause for a large share of the increased government expenditure.

It is well to face the situation squarely. The voters of the nation, between the primaries and the November elections, if they are concerned with their high taxes, should look for the causes. No matter who is elected, the high cost of government will continue unless the army of tax-eaters is taken off the public pay-roll. It is futile to talk about lower taxes if those with the authority lack the back-bone and stamina to literally fire about ten thousand office-holders.

The Boy Scouts of America are sending five of their adult officials to the international conference of scout officials in Paris the last of the month. This is the first conference of its kind in the history of Scouting and will no doubt go a great way toward extending the principles of citizenship as exemplified in the Boy Scout movement to all parts of the globe. The success of the Boy Scout movement in this country has been remarkable. Although there is a certain amount of criticism and scorn directed toward any plan which tends to make artificial pastimes for boys naturally endowed with a gift for play it is only when viewed erroneously that the Boy Scout movement can be criticised. If one holds the view that any boys' organization is simply to lessen the responsibility of the parent, then one is right in condemning the organization. But the Boy Scout movement is not to lessen parental duties and no Boy Scout champion will countenance any shirking of parental duty. On the contrary, it is the hope and aim of the movement to bring the parents in closer understanding with their offspring.

THE SMALL AND LARGE COLLEGE.

When President Harding stopped off at Muskingham college, Ohio, recently, he praised his alma mater as any good alumnus under the circumstances would do. And in the course of his remarks he declared that "the smaller colleges through more intimate contact, develop character and the will to forge ahead." To quote his words further:

"I like your institution also because it is very close to my ideal of the American educational institution. I have full pride, I have every reverence for the great universities of our country. I suppose I should be as unhappy as you if we did not have them, but if I were to choose, I would rather have an America made up of those who are educated at our less conspicuous and less largely attended universities."

Mr. Harding raised no new question. The relative rank of a large college and a small college has been the subject of debate for many years. If it is more pronounced now than before, it is simply because the trend toward larger colleges and the latter are now crowded more than capacity. Mr. Harding's own college, Muskingham, has since the executive's school days, combined with Central Ohio college. The whole state of Ohio is proud of its great state university and is alert to increase the facilities of that institution. The question arises, was Mr. Harding simply speaking sympathetically of a friend, or is he speaking the voice of an influential grou pof American citizens who will attempt to bring the small college back to its own?

There are many obvious virtues to be found about a small college. The student comes in direct contact with his professors and there is that invaluable opportunity to form attachments with his elder counsellor. Many a successful man today gives much credit for his success to the splendid character of some small college professor. Furthermore, the students all know each other and friendships of the broadest character are formed in such institutions.

On the other hand, the larger college offers its attractions. It can afford to hire the very best trained men in science and art. It can afford equipment which is impossible in the smaller institution. There is also the desire of many young men and women to receive their diplomas from schools that are nationally rather than locally known.

But more important than the superiority of the large or small college is the need for more colleges. Generally speaking, there are no colleges in the United States today which are not crowded for room and short of equipment.

ASSISTING NATURE.

Elsewhere in this newspaper today is an article which tells of numerous successful experiments that have been made in the state by children as well as farmers in growing "dasheen," a tuberous plant which the Chinese use extensively in place of potatoes. The advantages of "dasheen" are that the plant is easily grown, not being affected by bugs and diseases which ruin the ordinary potato plant, and also, the tuber grows to a great size, often weighing more than six pounds.

The development of the "dasheen" in this country, to replace the ordinary spud, would not be a surprising thing at all. Many of our common vegetables, grains and grasses are the result of transplanting. It is to admire the progress of civilization to review the evolution in plant and animal life which has taken place even in the last two or three hundred years. It has been only a few centuries since thoroughbred cattle and horses were developed from mixed strains or since the potato, the tomato, alfalfa and sudan grass were developed from plants in wild form.

While life in its larger sense is a battle against the destructive forces of nature, we are compelled to recognize the progress which has been made in specific ways through assisting nature.

Hale Clark, golf professional at Antelope park, went to Omaha last week to see the Trans-Mississippi golf tournament. Clark, being a professional, was not eligible to enter the tourney, but one morning, just to keep in trim, he knocked the pill around the course, scoring three below par. The same day, George Von Elm, the present champion, and Rudy Knepper, Sioux City wizard, played and failed to equal Clark's score. Antelope park golf fans who are thoroughly appreciative of Clark's ability to teach them the game will also be glad to know that his playing is the equal of his instructing.

After reading the political advertisements, one shudders at the thought of picking the best from so many admittedly excellent candidates.

A news item says that Soldier Burke, a heavyweight boxer, is going to take a rest, or, to be more exact, he is joining the Jess Willard training camp.

China may not have invented civil war, but she is certainly perpetuating it for posterity.

And then, there are the mosquitos who are also in favor of short skirts, rolled hose and other flapper styles.

Comment by the Press

CABINET MEMBERS IN CONGRESS.

Few congresses pass without the introduction of bills to admit cabinet members to either chamber for the purpose of being questioned and of giving information on the affairs of their departments, and this congress is not an exception.

But the atmosphere about the proposition is greatly changing. President Harding's cabinet is understood to be favorably disposed. The feeling in congress appears to be much less obstructive than formerly. President Wilson's revival of the Washington and Adams practice of appearing in person to deliver his messages has been a large factor to this end, and in the same connection is to be mentioned President Harding's admission of the vice president, as president of the senate, to a seat in the cabinet.

The establishment of a budget system, however, is a strong force in giving life and urgency to the proposal. For the best results, congress, in making appropriations conformably to the budget estimates, should be able to know the why of each estimate. The presence of the head of each department affected would facilitate the operation and aid in preserving the integrity of the budget as against the raids of district interests.

The current issue of the Budget, a monthly magazine published by the National Budget Committee, headed by John T. Pratt of New York, gives up much of its space to this matter and performs a public service in printing the favorable report of the Pendleton committee of 1881. That report said the last word on the constitutionality of the proposal. It held that as long as cabinet members are not allowed a vote, their admission to seats in congress would no more make them members of congress, contrary to the constitution, than to answer questions at long range as at present makes them members. Of the policy of question and answer face to face with congress as far preferable the Pendleton commietee held no uncertain opinion.—New York World.

More Truth than Poetry

ALL TO THE GOOD.

Things aren't always going wrong,
They turn out often as they should;
Not all the wicked men are strong,
And there are strong men who are good;
Sometimes our plans are not upset;
Some picnic parties don't get wet.

Some men, though married, have been glad,
Some wives are truly satisfied;
We open more good eggs than bad,
Worth isn't always pushed aside;
The girls don't always answer no,
And there are fountain pens that flow.

Art is not always fed on crusts,
The doctors pull some patients through;
He is not always duped who trusts,
And often honest hopes come true;
Faith shames the devil and his works;
There are some civil ticket clerks.

We do not always wait in vain
For promises to be fulfilled;
There's laughter still, despite the pain;
Sometimes the beans remain unspilled;
Smoke has not ruined womanhood,
And canteloupes sometimes are good.

Not all is wrong, and much is right;
The false has not crushed out the true;
Love still prevails in spite of spite,
The rogues who win respect are few;
The prospects frequently are fair,
And twins continue to be rare.

Close Tie Between Britons and Friends Across The Atlantic

BY SIR PHILIP GIBBS.

LONDON, July 15.—Whether people like it or not, and some I suppose do not, it is undeniable that a new close, solid friendship is growing apace between the United States and Great Britain. This is based, if my observations are sound, on more than sentimental platitudes delivered at at banquets on more even than the stronger sentiment which exists and always will exist between Americans of the old British stock and what was once to them the mother country.

Americans not of British stock—with some exceptions no doubt in groups of foreign strains not yet amalgamated—are friendly and sympathetic to British folk while not abating by any jot their own merican outlook. All signs point to fair weather ahead between our two English-speaking peoples—due a good deal to the Washington conference at which we cooperated successfully for the peace of the world by a general acknowledgment on both sides the tlantic that on broad issues apart from minor conflicting interests, our trend of thought, our desires for the future of the world, and our way of looking at things, was very similar.

I think the praise for this drawing together must go very largely to men of my own profession, well known journalists, men of letters of America and Britain who have done honor to the press, with certain lamentable exceptions, by their friendly interpretation and generous idealism. The click of their type-writers has been good music to those who are sick to death of the cheap sneers, the raucous shouts of the hundred per cent patriots who can see no good in any country but their own.

Cause For Friendliness.

One cause of the increasing friendliness, and the best, is increasing knowledge. England has been favored by the presence of many distinguished Americans—Taft was one of those most recently on this side—and they have done much in private intercourse and public speech to enable the English people to understand American character and thought. Bankers and business men of all kinds have lately visited England; most of them had an opportunity of putting forward American views very clearly without reservation. One cannot go to any important dinner party without meeting Americans of standing who generally give the attitude of the United States as far as they know it to world affairs, and what they say spreads in groups and circles and has its effect. Also magazines and periodicals of the United States, which fairly invade England, are read each week by clerks and shop girls, middle class folks as we call them, so life in the United States, humor, adventure, social customs, are no longer unfamiliar.

Sinclair Lewis recently declared that American fiction does not interest British readers, but the plain truth is that English writers feel a little hipped because so many American stories appear in the popular magazines on this side and the bookstalls are crowded with American novels, not so solid as "Main Street," of the sentimental type, but such as they are, American in background and character. All that is good, because it breaks down the barrier of ignorance and creates a sense of intimacy with the smaller ways of life without which no two peoples can really have friendship.

Praise For Harvey.

In a political way, not in the narrow sense of the words, but in the larger aspect, the American ambassador to London, George Harvey, is quite a powerful influence in creating social good will and understanding. He certainly made a success of his job, which must be surprising to many of his critics. I cannot pretend to be ignorant of the violent objections raised a Harvey's appointment in certain American circles, and without having met the man was strongly prejudiced against his personality, his methods of journalism, his type of mind, as they were interpreted to me by distinguished Americans who feared he would "let down" the reputation of the United States and make a hideous and humiliating failure a the court of St. James.

Everything I hear, however, seems to show that the American ambassador in London has won a good deal of confidence and is very generally liked by all who come in contact with him. He has won his position in spite of his early speeches, which raised the hair on some English heads or, if they hadn't any hair, gave a draughy sensation to their scalps. They were aggressively American, being hostile not in intention but in fact, to the sensibilities of quite a number of good friends of America, and seemed to bar the way to any prospect of American cooperation in Europe. Since then Harvey has mellowed. He loves America no less, but he likes Europe more and understand England with what I should say is a prety shrewd though friendly judgment. I think his ideals have broadened; he is out for the peace of the world, reconstruction of the nations not in a visionary way, but by means of common sense, facing up the facts, getting hostile views to agree on compromise and arbitration.

What has won him his place London, and it is a difficult job to fill, is I believe, his great sense of humor, his straightforward simplicity of approach. He does not wrap himself round with portentous dignity and solemnity, but is apt to break down portentousness in others.

Man of Great Tact.

I saw him preside at a dinner party to which I had the honor of an invitation, which was quite a test of tact. Around the table in the dining room at the American Embassy were crowded an enormously distinguished and varied company, representing, I should say, the violent contrasts in thought and policy of English society. I sat next to a diehard duke and on the other side of Harvey was the German Ambassador, and all round the table were men of famous names in politics, science and public life.

There was informal discussion of Russia, Germany and the attitude of the United States world to problems. Not an easy company to handle nor subjects without extreme differences of opinion, but Harvey in an admirable way led the discussion, made comments, and in a perfectly easy way drew out the best thought among the guests. Few men would have been so good, so humorous, so much at ease. He is not helped by his presence, for he was not born beautiful. His face has positive peculiarities which I find fascinating. But illumined with comicality of expression he is curiously attractive, and he tells American stories with a drawl that gives their full flavor.

Lady Astor, "Our Nancy," as it is understood she was called in the United States, is a great ambassadress without official credentials but one of the best friends of America who ever came to England, one of the best friends of England who ever went to America. Her house in St. James's Square is Liberty Hall where one may always be sure of meeting a mixed crowd of Americans and English who get to know each other, partly because the hostess puts them together with introducions so gay and gracious that there is no resisting a friendly chat. Lady Astor plays her part in English life with a splendid prodigality of energy, wit, laughter and idealism. Though American, she reminds me of one of Shakespeare's ladies, like Beatrice as we may imagine her after her marriage with Benedick, quick and nimble of wit, but very womanly.

Another American hostess who is gathering great companies of the two nations at her house is Mrs. Glasgow, whose reception the other night was one of the big things of the London season.

Society Plays Big Part.

All that may seem no better than society gossip in a world full of nant trade and potentialities of new wars and race hatreds. But in a way it is important and influential. It helps create good feeling, leads to an exchange of ideas. It would of course be more important if peopie of the poorer classes could get together in the same way to exchange ideas, but that can only be done through the press. It is being done more than ever before, as I have pointed out, and if no reaction, no new poison is distilled by evil chance or evil minds, the English-speaking peoples of the world should be established in such security and good will that they at least may put aside all possibility of enmity and so liberate an act of cooperation for world peace.

That is the great chance of the future. Without indulging in pessimism one must admit there are still signs of anarchy and strife in Europe and elsewhere which are rather disconcerting to one's hopes. Germany has not yet decided what road she shall take. Anarchy there would check all progress. Russia has not solved the riddle. It will need great wisdom, sure guidance, close fellowship on the part of the most stable nations of the world to avert new disasters to the human family. Together Britain and the United States and the free English-speaking dominions would form a life belt around the world for the preservation of peace and things better even than peace which are in the code of decent, law abiding citizens.

University Notes

Professor Nels Bengston, head of the department of geography of the university, who is now in South America, has written from Ecuador, where he is engaged in oil geology. He states:

"Our passage from Cristobal to Guayaquil lasted from 11 a. m. Tuesday, June 5, to 11 a. m. Saturday June 10, and we made no intervening stop at that. The trip through the Canal took seven hours, every minute of which was full of interest. We were at lunch when we pulled into the first, or lowest, lock of Gatun, but a Spanish meal was not sufficient inducement to cause me to fmiss seeing the complete operation of the locks. We were towed into the lock by two powerful electric engineers, one on each side of us, and then the great gates behind us swung shot. That accomplished, the water was let in and the great compartment filled at the rate of one foot in ten seconds, yet without noise or much apparent motion. When the water in the first compartment reached the level of that in the second the gates ahead of us opened with watch like smoothness and then the engineers towed us ahead a short distance to the second lock where the operation was repeated. The danger of a vessel ramming into the gates is averted by means of great chains fore and aft across the channel so if by any chance engine control should be faulty, damage to the works will be avoided.

It is a sensation almost indescribable to sit on a big liner and have it lifted without apparent effort and at the rate of one foot in ten seconds. When we entered the locks, we passed into what appeared to be a concrete lined canyon. Then as wated was let in we slowly rose and gradually were lifted to a splendid view of a tropical landscape made beautiful by carefully planned landcape work. The whole trip is one of scenic beauty and the canal is of course, in construction and operation, one of the wonders of the world.

Announcement has been made of the birth of a son, Robert, to Mr. and Mrs. Leland Payne. Mr. Payne was a former student of the university, and also worked for the university in the deparment of soil survey and was assistant in the department of geography. Mrs. Payne was formerly Miss Margaret Hermann, and is a member of Delta Zeta.

Coach Henry F. Schulte, assistant director of athletic, left last week for Michigan, where he will spend the last few weeks of the summer fishing, camping, etc. Coach Schulte has been instructing in the football and track courses during the first session.

A radio fan was informed that, in tuning, the filament of the tube should not be heated until after the signal is tuned in. However, the way to tune in a station is as follows: First, heat the filament of the tube, second, set the primary inductance switch on a given contact and vary the condenser in the antenna circuit very slowly throughout its range. If the desired station does not come in set the primary inductance switch on another contact and vary the condenser as before. Third, after the station comes in set the condenser at the point where it can be heard the loudest. They vary the tickler coil on variometer until the signal comes in with suitable loudness.

Where honey-comb coils are used first heat the filament and place the honey comb coils which give the desired range of waves in the coil mounting. Set the movable coils at about 30 or 40 degrees with the fixed coil. Second, vary the antenna condenser slightly and then the secondary condenser throughout its range. If the desired station does not come in vary the antenna condenser more and the secondary condenser through its range as before.

Detector tubes do not operate on all "B" battery voltages equally well. Tubes of the same make do not all operate best on the same value of "B" battery voltage. After the best "B" battery voltage is found it is not necessary to change it often. The detector tube is very critical and its filament should be heated to the proper temperature to give best results. It is well to use a vernier rheostat for the detector so that very fine adjustment can be made. The amplifier tubes are not so critical and it will be found that the tube will operate just as well with its filament not heated to the highest temperature. It is well to keep the temperature down so that the life of the tube may be prolonged.

The amplifying transformers must be connected properly or the tubes will not amplify. The outside of the secondary winding should always be connected to the grid of the tube and the inside of the primary winding to the plate of the tube before. Some transformers have their terminals marked, but others do not. The above rule holds in all cases, however.

Answer to Questions.

Q. 1.—Would you please send what you consid r the best mounting and connections for a variocoupler, two variometers, and a forty-three plate condenser?

Q. 2—What working range should this cover with one bulb?

Q. 3—What other additions would you recommend for better results, other than an amplifer? My cabinet is 15 3-4 inches long and 5½ inches high.—D. H. L.

Ans. 1.—A very good hook-up, using the apparatus you have listed, is the two circuit hook-up which uses the rotor of the variocoupler as a secondary and the variometers in the grid and plate circuits respectively. The mounting is arbitrary. The variocoupler may be placed between the two variometers or the variometers can be placed adjacent to one another. Manufacturers build sets both ways.

Ans. 2—150 to 300 miles during this time of the year.

Ans. 3—None.

A PLAIN ECONOMICAL STUCCO HOUSE

Stucco, when put on metal lath, makes one of the most durable and substantial houses that can be built today. The design shown above is a house that the prospective home builder would do well to consider for it not only is attractive in appearance but it is an economical model as well. In design, this home is plain, no money being wasted on furbelows or foolish decoration, but its simplicity and charm, particularly if the owner sees to it that the stucco is set off by rose or clematis entwined trellises, make it a house that instantly attracts the eye.

The floor plans are conveniently arranged and all the rooms are good sized and sunny. In the living room there is a large fireplace with built-in book shelves at one side and off from the this room is the sun porch. Other notable features are the pantry between the dining room and kitchen, the breakfast nook, and built in refrigerator which can be iced from the rear porch. There is one central chimney for the fireplace. Upstairs there are four bed rooms with closets, a sleeping porch, bath and brush balcony off of small chamber. An attic, meant for storage, keeps the upstairs from being suffocatingly hot in summer nights. Two or more rooms here may be finished if so desired. An attractive feature of the first floor lies in the fact that the stair hall opens with French doors into the living room and there are also French doors from living room to sun porch. The first story is finished in hardwood and the second story is finished in pine, enameled. Floors throughout are of oak and birch.

Of frame construction, this house is finished with stucco on metal lath. The size of the main house is thirty-seven feet wide by twenty-nine feet six inches deep. The basement is seven feet, six inches high, first story is nine feet high and second story, eight feet six inches high. There are also a laundry, heating room, fuel and store rooms in the basement thus making this one of the most complete and up-to-date houses being built in this section of the country.

Central City Park A Nebraska Beauty Spot

BY ROBERT RICE.

iverside park, a wooded tract of roximately sixty acres, is located Parker Island in the Platte river miles due south of Central City. is owned and operated by the rside Park association, an or- ization of 125 stockholders, as a sure grounds for the benefit of people of the community and tors from near and far. This is on-profit sharing institution, the receipts being expended in their irety for the carrying forward of program of greater improvement. park is of special interest to people of Nebraska because of historical association and be- se it is unexcelled for natural ic beauty.

or years it remained as the one t upon which the advancing rch of civilization had made no oads. Then some of the prog- sive and public spirited citizens an to consider seriously its pre- vation for future generations. An ortunity to purchase this land did present itself, however, until the ter of 1920, when it was sold ettle the estate of George Howell. stockholders at the time of pur- se numbered 41. Work upon a inite program of improvement begun during the spring of 1.

Shade In Abundance.

sh, oak, elm, locust and cedar s abound in almost unlimited nber, shading the velvet carpet of grass. For the benefit of the e people, visitors and loitering rists there is a swimming pool suring 75x300 feet with bath se for the men and women, and open air pavilion dance floor of crete construction, measuring 100 feet. Through volunteer la- in the main, all underbrush has n cleared away, many young trees e been replanted and the older given better opportunity for wth. A driveway, which is to be veled, has been constructed ough the park on the plan of a se shoe, and 2,500 cars were ded the evening of July 4th hout accident. A fill was con- ted linking the island with the nland to the north, and this has n widened and surfaced this sum- r, so that autos can pass at any nt without difficulty.

n attractive home has been pro- ed for E. J. Jones, custodian of park, a new gate keeper's of- erected, electric and power ser- lines have been constructed, a up of new cottages built fronting river and twenty-five more lots ed for this purpose. Concessions the year have been contracted, and permanent buildings provided therefor.

The next feature on the program of improvement will be the construction of a lake for boating and fishing, all natural conditions being favorable for this understaking. This the second summer of the park's history finds it one of the most popular in Nebraska, and the program for permanent improvements is only well launched. Today the investment of the stockholders totals approximately $10,000.

Riverside park was a portion of the homestead of Edward Parker, a prominent character in the early days in Merrick county. It was the scene of the old time camp grounds, where open air religious services were held. It is not far from the monument marking the former location of the original "Lone Tree," by which name Central City was known for many years.

Running parallel with the park and a short distance to the north is the old California Gold trail, which in the days of '49 traversed an open prairie country with but one lone tree relieving the monotony of the landscape. Today many tourists making the coast to to coast trip over the Lincoln Highway are stopping for afew days rest and recreation, and many more will avail themselves of this opportunity when they became aware of the beautiful surroundings and the spirit of welcome.

The officers of the Riverside Park association: are: President, Geo. A. Agnew; vice president Dr. E. E. Boyd; secretary, M. G. Scudder; treasurer, J. W. Vieregg; directors, J. Machamer, Heber Hord, George A. Agnew, Dr. E. E. Boyd, M. G. Scudder, H. E. Glatfelter and J. W. Vieregg.

BEAUTIFUL RIVERSIDE PARK, NEAR CENTRAL CITY.

These views give some idea of the natural scenery and attractions at the new pleasure resort which enterprising citizens of Central City have recently developed on what was formerly a wooded island in the Platte river. The scenes are:

1.—Driveway entrance to the park.

2.—Cleared space with seats, suitable for campers and picnic parties.

3.—Open air dancing, pavilion with concrete floor finished as smooth as marble.

4.—Bathing pool, into which fresh, warm water constantly seeps through the sand, with constant drainage from the lower end. Water varies in depth from a few inches to 12 feet.

5.—View of Platte river and opposite shore, from Riverside drive.

Gardening has been exceedingly popular since the war, but even during the war there probably was not many a little girl four years old raising her own garden. That is what Katherine Smith, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Smith, 2947 Dudley street, is doing this year. She will not be five till the 19th of November.

Katherine's brother, Claude, who is seven years old, brought packages of seeds home from school last spring to make his school garden. One evening Katherine was watching him make his garden and she decided that she wanted to make one of her own. Claude gave her the seeds he had left and she was at once busy digging up the ground with her little hoe and planting the seeds—radishes, beets and sweet corn. She spaded the ground with a little hoe that her father had bent out straight so that she could put her foot on it to press it into the ground. Of courst she just spaded the spots where she planted the seed. When she had finished she had a garden about 5 feet square.

The thing for which Katherine deserves more credit is that with unflagging interest she has weeded and watered her garden through the summer. The little spot of radishes furnished five lots for family use. They are all gone now. The beets are thriving and the sweet corn is far above Katherine's head.

One day when Miss Minnie Burk, school garden supervisor, was inspecting Claude's garden she noticed Katherine's and become interested in it. When Mrs. Smith told her that the family had used radishes from this garden Miss Burk suggested that she pay Katherine for the radishes so that she could be registered in the school garden project. So now Katherine has a school garden.

Two Lincoln Families Find Thompson Lake At Fremont Ideal Vacation Spot

BY LYNNELLE GREER.

East, west, home's best," thinks lter E. DeButts, Lincoln insurance n, when he hears the calculations his friends concerning vacations, sees their elaborate preparations motor trips and mountain out- s. Mr. DeButts thinks there is no ce like Nebraska, the home state, ideal recreation.

And to prove that he really means at he says, we'll tell you about the raisie summer home that he owns, ether with Earl V. Austin, at ompson Island in Thompson lake, t two and one-half miles south of emont.

"Cedar Isle" is the name of the me, and it thoroughly deserves it's me, for there is a perfect avenue tall cedars through which one st drive before reaching "Cedar e."

At first, in the distance, you won- r if you have been transported to lorado in some mystic fashion, the lars would almost have you be- ve they were pines, and the air ws cooler, that is when you are aring the lake. You drive on and then a turn in the road, a rustic te, and there before you lies "Cedar e," one of the prettiest bits of na- re's handicraft one could see any- ere.

Is a Beauty Spot

Thompson island is approximately ree acres, not square or round or ything, just three acres, for the and is long and narrow in some ts and high and wide in others. Directly back of the island is a ff that rises close to three hundred t in the air, banked with cedars d tangles of wild herbage that try hard to hide the treasures of oseberries, wild plums, strawber- s and thickets of hazelnuts. These things, too, are found on the and proper, together with wild wers of every description. There birds galore that sing and sing if this little treasure isle were all eir's and had not been trodden by ankind.

Perhaps in their ecstasy of just ing alive and unmolested, they ve overlooked the little cottage wn at the water's edge. Not such little cottage either, as summer cot- ges go, for it is 24 feet by 24. The ing room is 12 feet by 12 feet, ch of the two bed rooms are the me size as the living room. There a kitchen and a screened in porch at measures 8 feet by 24 feet. here are fluffy curtains at the win- ws, cottage is furnished complete, d there is no water to be carried r it is piped into the house from well that is twenty-two feet deep. Far from the least interesting thing out the island is the water sur- unding it. It is not deep enough r a launch, but one can row on it. own towards the bottom of the e is a tangled net of tree roots, d branches and the like that make a perfect haven for bass and several other kinds of fish.

Near Platte River

There are no trout to be sure, but, thinks Walter DeButts, fishing is fishing, and it isn't the fish you catch that counts, it's the pleasure in catching them, be it trout, bass or ordinary catfish.

Then, too, not far away, in fact so close that it takes just a very few minutes to get there, is the Platte river, where bathing and swimming facilities are unequalled, according to Mr. DeButts. In fact "Cedar Isle" is as delightful a summer home as one could wish, and another feature that is worth considering is it's proximity to Lincoln. During the summer the families make their headquarters at the cottage, and Mr. DeButts and Mr. Austin go up over the week-ends, sometimes forgetting when the week really does end, and stay until Thursday or Friday of the next week.

The Austin and DeButts families began making weekly excursions to Cedar Isle early in April. It is a matter of about fifty-two miles, and with good roads and favorable weather conditions, these may be covered in two hours. It is close to home, easy to reach, and there is everything there to afford a pleasant vacation, so why go out of the state?

Mr. DeButts' business has caused him to travel a great deal and has taken him to practically every state in the union. He has spent many summers at various summer resorts, and is thoroughly satisfied that Nebraskans need not leave their own state for beautiful scenery and will find ample recreation there if they will take advantage of the opportunities the state offers. He says that there are many others places in Nebraska that are as beautiful as the one he has chosen if people would but look for them.

1.—Sunrise on the Platte river.

2.—A glimpse of Thompson Island, showing the steep bluff that rises directly back of the island.

3.—A partial view of the pretty summer cottage.

These are just three little views showing a very small part of the beauty of Thompson Island, located two and one-half miles south of Fremont, Neb. These are just three of the many reasons why Walter E. DeButts thinks it isn't at all necessary for Nebraskans to leave their own state for summer outings. And that isn't all, Mr. DeButts says that it is so close and convenient to home, that he has even thought of having skating parties there in the winter time. Sometimes there are as many as 600 people skating on Thompson lake. Mr. DeButts states that the cottage is equipped with stoves and cooking utensils so there would be no trouble at all in keeping warm and having something to eat.

COMMENCEMENT AT NEB. WESLEYAN

Midsummer Graduation Will Be Held at Methodist School Friday Morning.

Midsummer commencement will be held at Nebraska Wesleyan university Friday, July 21. The exercises will begin promptly at 10:00 a. m. and will take place in the First Methodist Episcopal church of University Place. Dean B. E. McProud, who has served as administrative officer of the summer session, will preside. The dean met candidates for diplomas and certificates Wednesday and arranged details of the program. Rev. J. S. Wilkinson, the new pastor of the Grace Methodist church of Lincoln, will be the commencement speaker. Dean and Mrs. Parvin Witte will sing.

The registrar reports that there will be the following number of candidates: For the degree of A. B. fifteen; master of arts, one; school of expression, one; academy, two; university state certificate, five; first grade certificate, thirty; second grade certificate, twenty-four.

At the conclusion of the first summer term at Wesleyan the faculty will for the most part scatter for rest and study. Several are working for advanced degrees in the line of their specialties. A number are engaged upon manuscripts for publication or for class room lectures.

Professor J. C. Jensen will be busy directing the erection of the new physics annex which was begun this summer. It is expected that this will be finished in time for use in the fall. Dean F A. Alabaster will complete his field trip in a few weeks and take a vacation at Pelican Lakes. Dean B. E. McProud has not completed his plans but has been engaged to teach in an institute in Indiana late in the summer. Dean and Mrs. Parvin Witte will spend several weeks in Idaho.

University Notes

eight hundred and fourteen students had been registered in the second term of the summer session by Wednesday night and the total attendance is expected to top the 1,000 mark. Only 715 were in attendance at the same term last year.

No fees were charged students of the first term who enrolled in the second term. Those in residence the first term, who remained for the second, registered in advance, thereby leaving the new students an open field for assistance in registration by the faculty. This method proved especially satisfactory, because it removed every possible element of congestion.

A new record for summer school attendance was set in the first term of this year, according to figures from the registrar's office, 2,085 students being enrolled for the first six weeks classes, a considerable increase over the mark of 1,100 established in 1921. The total registration for both semesters of summer school this year will approximately double that of last year, the previous high mark.

The student activities office has undergone a change in location. It has been moved from its old site in the basement of administration hall to the second floor of the armory across the hall from the athletic department offices. The student activities office has grown considerably in the past few years, and with the increase in the volume of business, larger quarters became imperative.

Neil T. Chadderdon, who has been in charge of this office, will be succeeded August 1 by J. K. Selleck, assistant purchasing agent. Mr. Chadderdon has resigned in order to accept a position wtih a bank at Winner, South Dakota.

S. S. S. Fills Out Hollow Cheeks, Thin Limbs!

Men and women.—whether you will ever build yourself up to your normal, just-right weight depends on the number of blood-cells in your blood. That's all there is to it. It's a scientific fact. If your blood-cell factory isn't working right, you will be run-down, thin, your blood will be in disorder, and perhaps your face will be broken out with pimples, blackheads and eruptions. S. S. S. keeps your blood-cell factory working full time. It helps build new blood-cells. That's why S. S. S. builds up thin, run-down people, it puts firm flesh on your bones, it rounds out your face, arms neck, limbs, the whole body. It puts the "pink" in your cheeks. It takes the hollowness from the eyes, and it fools Father Time by smoothing out wrinkles in men and women by "plumping" them up. S. S. S. is a remarkable blood-purifier. While you are getting plump, your skin eruptions, pimples, blackheads, acne, rheumatism, rash, tetter, blotches are being removed. The medicinal ingredients of S. S. S. are guaranteed purely vegetable. S. S. S. is sold at all drug stores, in two sizes. The larger size is the more economical.

MISS MILDRED HULLINGER

Miss Vivian Hanson, beautiful and popular university girl, has been selected by a poll of faculty and students as the most representative University of Nebraska girl. Her picture will adorn the cover of the new waltz sweetheart song "Cornhusker Rose" composed by Howard Adamson, sophomore last year. The contest was conducted by the Summer Nebraskan and Mr. Adamson, and a heavy vote was cast. The selection was made on the basis of character, scholarship and personality.

The song has been played at Antelope park, Capital Beach and the Country club, and it was sung at Antelope park on the Fourth of July. It will be out in about two weeks. Mr. Adamson will present autographed copies to the twenty girls receiving the highest number of votes in the contest.

The six highest, in order of the number of votes they received are: Vivian Hanson, Mildred Hullinger, Ruth Kadel Seacrest, Margaret Stidworthy, Ruth Fickes and Mildred Taylor.

The rest of the first twenty girls, listed in alphabetical order, are: Adelheit Dettman, Belle Farman, Lillian Hanson, Marguerite Holloway, Helen Kummer, Marjorie Martin, Mary McCoy, Hazel Muzzy, Dorothy Posson, Edith Replogle, Elizabeth Scribner, Dorothy Shallenberger, Florence Sherman, Sara Smeaton, Frances Westering.

All girls who attended the university during the regular school year, 1921-1922, or who attended during this summer session were eligible to enter the contest. The twenty coeds receiving the highest number of votes were very close in the contest.

Miss Hanson received her degree from the school of fine arts in June. She is a member of Alpha Chi Omega sorority, of Valkyrie, senior girls' honorary society, of Golden Fleece, of the Art club and a number of other organizations. She is one of the six girls selected in the Cornhusker beauty contest.

The five girls ranking immediately after Miss Hanson in the poll for the most representative girl are affiliated with the following sororities: Miss Hullinger, Alpha Omicron Pi; Mrs. Seacrest, Kappa Kappa Gamma; Miss Stidworthy, Alpha Phi; Miss Fickes, Delta Zeta; Miss Taylor, Delta Gamma. All the twenty girls have been prominent in university activities.

Mr. Adamson, the composer of the song, has written for the Kosmet club productions the past few years. He worked with Wilbur Chenoweth in composing a number of lyrics.

Advice to the Bridegroom

June, the month of weddings, is over. It is now July and happy brides and bridegrooms are returning from delightful honeymoons, they are coming down to earth ready to settle down and start life in real earnest. The bride has been feted, loved, fussed over and advised. She has been told in at least a thousand ways how to please a husband, but the poor bridegroom, he has been completely ignored. He does not even count for anything at his own wedding-he is merely an excuse for the wedding with its bevy of pretty, fluffy bridesmaids, cunning flower girls, music, flowers, guests, presents and general fuss and flummery.

Though he has been terribly in the way and a great trial, he does deserve some consideration as you will realize as you recall the expression on his face as he came marching away from the altar with the bit of white rulle and white satin hanging on his arm. So, some kind friend, not us, you understand, for not having been a bride nor neither a bridegroom do we feel confident to undertake the task of offering advice about how to play the matrimonial game, offers the following suggestions to the ignored bridegroom who would avoid the many pit falls along the road of married life:

Begin, son, by letting her down easy. During the time you have been courting her, you have been feeding her on sugar plums. You have spent your life telling her how wonderful and beautiful she is, and that your only aim in life was to make her happy. Her will has been your law, and you have never been too tired, or too busy, to trot her around to any place of amusement to which she wanted to go.

Of course, real life cannot be lived on that kind of joyride schedule, but slow down gradually. Don't clamp on the emergency brake, and stop the love making with a suddenness that will jar every tooth in the poor little bride's head. Don't act as so many men do, as if your wife was a mind reader who could tell that you still loved her even if you are as dumb as an oyster; and don't make the mistake of thinking that just being married to you is fun enough for any woman. It isn't by a long shot. Marriage with even the best of men needs a lot of palliatives to make it endurable, not to say enjoyable.

My second tip is to be good to her. Especially be good to her if you have taken a girl away from her home and family and friends to a distant city in which she is a stranger among strangers. No man can realize the awfully lonliness, the heart breaking homesickness of a girl who has been a member of a busy chattering family and the center of a gay little social circle, who is torn up by the roots, and transplanted to an alien soil.

The man is away at his business all day. The forlorn little bride is left at home with nothing to do but think her own dreary thoughts, and wishing that she had stayed at home with mother and the girls. Be extra patient and tender with her, and for heaven's sake get her something to do that will occupy her mind and hands, and take her thoughts away from herself.

My third tip is get off on the right foot. Start married life right. Many men when they marry, are so much in love that they have lost the courage to tell their wives the truth about their financial condition, or to say "no" to the unreasonable demands of their brides. Because Angel Face wants an automobile, or to live in a fashionable neighborhood, or to buy period furniture, they gratify her, and go in debt, and that means ultimate ruin for that family.

Remember that the average girl, up to the time she marries has never had any experience in handling money. She has a vague notion that bills pay themselves. Therefore it is up to the man, who knows just how much he can afford to spend, to decide on the scale on which they shall live. Likewise, while the rosy glow of the honeymoon lasts, make your wife an active partner who will do her share towards making the firm of Benedick and company a success.

My fourth tip is go fifty-fifty with your wife. Don't expect her to keep the home fires burning while you roam around. It is just as much a man's business to make things cheerful and pleasant around the house as it is a woman's. Don't forget that a woman's work is the hardest and most montonous in the world and that she needs recreation to keep her going.

Don't be a tightwad. Make your wife a definite allowance for the housekeeping and another for her own personal needs, and don't ask her to give you an account of every penny she spends. It is none of your ousiness. She earned the money and is entitled to it.

My final tip is don't spare the salve. Apply it with a liberal hand. Don't fail to tell your wife how you love her and appreciate all that she does for you. Notice her new dress. Compliment her dinner when they are good. Remember that to a woman her husband is the audience to which she plays. He is her career and it is pretty discouraging to spend your life trying to please an audience which never gives you the glad hand and to strive and strive and never know whether you succeed or not.

It is easy to be a good husband because it takes so little to make a woman happy—just a little tenderness and affection a few kind words—that's all. Try them on your wife, son, and you will find it the biggest paying investment you ever made.

MARIE GORDON BECOMES BRIDE.

—Townsend Portrait.

Mrs. Harry W. Eastham, a bride of a week ago, was Miss Marie Gordon before her marriage. The ceremony was solemnized in Trinity M. E. church Saturday evening, July 8, in the presence of the immediate families and a few friends. Dr. A. A. Brooks, pastor of Trinity M. E. church, officiated. The bride wore a dark suit. The young couple left immediately for a short wedding trip after which they will make their home in Lincoln.

The bride is a graduate of the Lincoln high school and she went through the University School of Music and the Lincoln Business college. She made her home with her aunt, Miss Clara Gordon. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Eastham. He attended the Lincoln high school and the state university and spent a year in service overseas during the world war.

High Honor to Nebraska Girl

Representatives of the University of Nebraska carried off many honors at the national conventions of the Greek letter sororities which were held during June and the early part of July. Delegates returning from the national convention of Kappa Alpha Theta which was held at Lake Placid, N. Y., bear tidings of the election of one of their number, Mrs. Yale B. Huffman, formerly Miss Martha Cline, to the office of grand president. Mrs. Huffman, who is a sister of Mrs. Donald Miller of Lincoln and daughter of James A. Cline, cashier of the National Bank of Commerce, is a resident of Broken Bow.

Mrs. Huffman was graduated from the university with the class of 1906. Among the honors which she received while in college was election to membership in Black Masque, honorary organization for senior women. She has served the national organization of Kappa Alpha Theta as treasurer for eleven years and previous to that she served as a district president governing the states of Nebraska, Colorado, Kansas, Missouri and South Dakota. The election to grand president is for a term of two years.

Mrs. Huffman is the mother of two attractive children, Mary Katherine and Yale Bryant, Jr.

MISS HOGAN BRIDE-TO-BE.

Miss Catharine Elizabeth Hogan has chosen August as the month for her marriage to James A. Clark of Crete. Announcement of the engagement is made today by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Hogan.

Lincoln Women Showing Keen Interest in Golf

There is strong interest this year in women's golf at the Country club. Mrs. Ray Elliott is chairman of the golf committee and she has made an excellent record in scheduling events, in thinking up novel features, and in providing attractive prizes. In addition to the regular Wednesday morning events, an attempt has been made to arrange various progressive contests, the playing off of which will take the players through several rounds. Many new women golfers have taken up the game this year, and many of the older players have shown new interest in improving their game.

Next Wednesday morning players will qualify for another tournament in flights like that recently held for the championship of the club. The eight women making the best scores in the qualifying round will play eighteen-hole matches in the first flight. The next eight will play in the second flight, and will play either eighteen hole or thirteen hole matches, as those in the flight may decide. There will also be a flight for the contestants who prefer to play but nine holes. The matches for the tournament need not be played off on successive days, but may take a longer time, to suit the convenience of those taking part. Prizes have been offered by the club and by individual members for all three flights, for the low medal score in the qualifying round, and for consolation rounds in each flight. Among the members who have offered prizes are Mrs. W. E. Hardy, Mrs. Ray Elliott, Miss Louise Pound, Mrs. Ross P. Curtice, and Mrs. Norman Sommers.

FORMER LINCOLN GIRL IS BRIDE.

Miss Esther Maxine Abbott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Abbott, formerly of Lincoln was married to Hugh G. Armstrong, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh G. Armstrong Sr., at noon Tuesday, July 11 at the Trinity Cathedral, Omaha. Dean Stephen McGinley performed the ceremony.

The bride was simply gowned in white georgette, the only trimming being roses made of same material with yellow petals which she wore a picture hat of white georgette and carried a shower bouquet of orchids and roses. Her only attendant was her sister Grace Eleanor Abbott who wore a gown of sand colored georgette heavily beaded in crystal beads. She wore a pink garden hat and carried an armful of pink roses.

Immediately after the ceremony breakfast was served at the parish house for the immediate families and a few close friends, after which the bride and groom left for Denver and Estes Park. The bride wore a dark blue twill suit with a tan Spanish lace blouse and tan felt hat.

They will reside in Omaha.

Lincoln Pioneer Back on Visit

Mrs. Nora Green of Tacoma, Wash., formerly of Lincoln, is spending a few weeks with old Lincoln friends and relatives and is the guest during her stay of Mrs. Jennie Elliott, 2528 R street, and her sister, Mrs. J. O. Young. Mrs. Green has not made her home in Lincoln for twelve years and though a member of one of the pioneer families has only once during that time returned for a visit and that was six years ago when a few days were spent here.

Mrs. Green's father, Cyrus Carter, homesteaded in Nebraska in the early days—one could say he homesteaded in Lincoln—for the farm was located in the part of Lincoln which is now the north side of O street and east of Twenty-fourth street, in the very locality in which the home of Mrs. Elliott, where Mrs. Green is a guest, is located. The family came here in 1865 and Mrs. Green as a child attended a country school which was a small stone building on a small part of the ground which is now the university campus.

"Many times I would be so frightened as I walked from home to school," said Mrs. Green in speaking of her early days here, "for there were no houses at all along the way." The little town which consisted of only a combined store and house was called Lancaster and later changed to Lincoln. Among Mrs. Green's happiest recollections are her high school days in Lincoln.

MISS TROTT REPORTS LEAGUE CONVENTION.

Miss Grace Trott, president of the Lincoln Business Woman's League, sends word from Chattanooga, Tenn., of the opening of the national conference of the federated business and professional woman's clubs being held there from July 11 to July 17, and which she is now attending.

The historic and beautiful town in the Tennessee mountains flung open its doors with proverbial southern hospitality to the thousand and more representatives of business women's organizations in many parts of the country. Meetings have mostly centered at the Patten hotel and the Tivoli theatre, and the serious business of the session has occasionally been relieved by picturesue interludes of old plantation folk dances, plantation songs, and modern southern popular airs.

Some of the outstanding personalities of the conference who were revealed in the first two days of its meeting have been Mrs. Lena Lake Forrest, national president, whose annua address at the initial meeting outlined her ision of the ideals and purposes of the federation was received with the heartiest applause: Mrs Elizabeth Sears publicity chair man and editor of "The Independent Woman," the very successful periodical of the federation; Miss Jeanette Rankin, ex-senator, and Congressman lice Robertson, who spoke before the legislative committee of the federation. Other well-kown speakers have been Raymond Robbins, former Red Cross commissioner to Russia, who addressed the meeting Monday evening upon "The Outlawry of War," Miss Elizabeth Toombs, of the staff of "Good Housekeeping" Miss Genevieve Parkhurst of the "Pictorial Review," and Miss Marjory Shuler of the "Review of Reviews."

A most interesting report upon the condition of the national federation of business and professional women's clubs was made Tuesday by Miss Lena Madesin Philips, executive secretary and founder of the organization. Sixty-five new clubs had entered the federation since the last convention, making at present a total of 368 clubs now included in it. There are at present 29 state federations in good standing. The report of the treasurer, Paul Laddey, showed the assets of the federation fixed at $35,000, of which $15,000 is cash on hand and $20,000 the appraised value of the magazine,, "The Independent Woman."

Miss Trott expects to continue her trip after the conference has closed and will not return to Lincoln until late in ugust.

Girl Reporter Tells Experience Operating Power Machines in Lincoln Garmeut Factory

BY JESSIE WATSON

At 7:30 one nice cool morning I climbed the stairs at the Mary Jane Garment factory to begin the eighteenth undertaking in the series of "other girl's job" that I am trying out. I had made my application the day before.

Upon entering a room containing long rows of power machines and long tables piled high with material or garments I found one of the managers, Mr. Louis H. Schwier, in the front of the room, with a yardstick in hand, measuring heavy cardboard patterns. He turned me over to an employee, Miss Marie Schleiger, who taught me how to operate the power machine. By 11 o'clock I had had experience in all the work it takes to make a bungalow apron.

First of all, I learned to operate the power sewing machine by stitching scraps of material. This is the most fascinating machine of all, because it requires considerable skill on the part of the operator. Most of the other machines do all the work themselves when a lever is pushed. Learning to operate a power sewing machine is similar to learning to drive a car except that it is more difficult.

Like Driving a Car

The sewing machine is adjusted for high speed and only by very delicate control can it be made to go slowly. When one is driving a car it is easy to step on the juice and make the car leap forward at high speed; when one is operating a power sewing machine it is still easier to do this. The power is turned on or off by a pedal similar in appearance to that of an ordinary sewing machine. After placing one's foot squarely on the pedal one turns on the power by pressing down with the toe and turns it off by pressing down with the heel. An exceedingly light pressure is necessary to make the machine go slowly. At first, my chief interest was in keeping my fingers out of the way. Before I realized it I would be pressing too hard and the needle would be racing across the material. In my zeal to get my fingers out of the way I would let the material turn, and a crooked seam would result.

When I wanted to lift the foot of the machine to remove the material or turn a corner I had to press a lever with my knee instead of moving a lever with my finger as a person does in operating an ordinary sewing machine. There was nothing hard to understand but it was no easy stunt to remember to do everything at the same time. I was repeatedly touching the foot lever with my knee when I didn't intend to.

The greatest skill is required in estimating the time to push down with the heel to stop the machine. It will not stop instantly. If it is running slowly, only one or two stitches will be made after the pedal goes down; if it is running at high speed it may sew a couple of inches. I usually had to stop before I quite reached the corner and then finish by hand.

All Done by Machinery

When I had finally learned to operate the machine slowly (as that was the only way I could do the work carefully) I began to work on bungalow aprons. They were already cut and bound about the neck, sleeves, pockets and belt. I sewed on the pocket, sewed up the side seams, stitched on the belt and hemmed the apron. After doing this work on two aprons I worked at other machines and learned the other processes.

"Now I am going to have you make some buttonholes," Miss Schleiger told me.

I gasped. Then I remembered that everything is done by machinery and I drew a long breath. The places for the buttonholes were marked on the aprons. All I had to do was to put the material in place and press a lever. Presto, change! the buttonhole was made.

Sewing on buttons was still more amusing. I slipped the button in place, put the material under it and pressed a lever. It was funny to watch the intelligent little needle strike one hole of the button, then the other, in rapid succession for twenty-one stitches without making a mistake. Anyone who has ever tried to sew on a button—men included by all means—knows what a time he has to find the hole from the underneath side.

After putting the buttons and buttonholes in two aprons I took a turn at overcasting and binding done by special machines.

Some Electric Scissors

Mr. Schwier then took me over to a table where a boy was cutting out forty-eight aprons at a time. The materials were carefully arranged, one on top of another, forty-eight thick, and the top one marked. One might imagine huge scissors being used to cut forty-eight thicknesses of material, but the boy was using an electric machine which he pushed about the table and operated with a lever.

A glance at the inspection table completed my tour around the shop, but before I left I took time to measure the huge spools of thread. A spool of No. 60 thread is 6 inches high and 3½ inches in diameter. I was told that there were 12,000 yards of thread on it.

I did not get to see the most interesting part the making and adjusting of the patterns. Mr. Schwier told me that they study the pictures in the fashion books but never use purchased patterns. They cut their own patterns and then make up a garment and fit it on a girl who has a good form. They do not use a dressing form, because almost anything can be made to look all right on a form, but when a person puts it on and moves the arm and shoulders it hangs differently. If the pattern needs adjustment they make the corrections and then make up another garment. If it is all right and meets the approval of the sales department, the pattern is then used to cut out a large number of garments, care being taken to make them in different materials. The pattern is cut in all the sizes. It is graded up or down on a standard scale and no more fitting is required.

Voters Have First Opportunity to Consider Women Candidates for State Office at Primary

The candidates who have filed for consideration in the primaries next Tuesday include the names of several very able Nebraska women, and for the first time since receiving the franchise, women are seeking the responsibility of state office. The following is a brief sketch concerning the women candidates:

Miss E. Ruth Pyrtle.

Miss E. Ruth Pyrtle, first woman candidate for superintendent of public instruction, was informed the other day at a luncheon, by a prominent business man that "Tuesday is ironing day." "Now there is more in that statement than appears on the surface and all of the women should watch themselves on that day," said Miss Pyrtle: "But women are learning to take an interest the same as men do."

Miss Pyrtle is principal of the McKinley school in Lincoln and holds her bachelor and master's degrees from the University of Nebraska, with credits sufficient to insure a Ph. D. from Columbia. She is prominent in the club work of the city and did Y. W. C A work during the war. She regularly attends N. E. A. meetings and for several years has taught in city and county institutes over the state and in Iowa, Colorado and Kansas Teachers in twenty-five counties have listened to her teaching and gained enthusiasm and strength from her instruction

In summing up the questionnaire sent out by the League of Women Voters, Miss Pyrtle says:

"Nebraska's children are entitled to equal opportunities, better rural schools, better educational returns for money now spent on schools, economy in school administration.

As a teacher of citizenship and lecturer on this topic Miss Pyrtle is counted fine and is called upon from all parts of the state. In her travels up and down she remarked how pleasant it is to find many faces in her audiences that she once looked at as they sat in a seat behind a schoolroom desk.

Miss Sarah T. Muir.

Miss Sarah T. Muir, head of the English department in the Lincoln high school is seeking the nomination as state representative.

Miss Muir is a graduate of state university and holds an A. B. and A. M. degree from that institution, and is well and favorably known in educational work throughout the state. She was president and is now director of the Nebraska chapter of the National Council of Teachers of English and was president for two terms of the American association of University Women. She is director of the Nebraska League of Women Voters in the second district and is active in many other organizations.

Miss Martha Powell.

Miss Martha Powell of Omaha, has an educational record of forty years, and declares that she wishes to stand or fall on this record. She is a graduate of the Illinois State Normal and is principal of the Long school. Miss Powell has passed thirty-seven years of her teaching career in Omaha and she says as she goes about the streets of that city, she cannot only name many of her former pupils that she meets but she can see them in the seats they once occupied in the class room.

Dr. Freeda M. Clark.

Dr Freeda M. Clark, democratic candidate for nomination as state representative says: "If elected I shall study the pardon law to see if there is not some way to remedy the present conditions under which desperate criminals are paroled indiscriminately."

Dr. Clark declares that the lowering of taxes, bettering of agricultural conditions by legislation, and the securing of better conditions favoring child welfare, are issues upon which she is making her campaign.

Dr. Edith Saunders Spence.

Dr. Edith Saunders Spence of Grand Island, has filed for the nomination of state representative from the sixty-seventh district.

Dr. Clark would like to see the following things accomplished in the state if she is elected:

Refering of all basic and fundamental law to the people for a state or national referendum, and prohibiting a court from declaring a law unconstitutional without a referendum.

Securing a law that will curb the evil of social disease.

Securing the passage of a constitutional amendment extending the rate making powers of the legislature or the railway commission, so that they may legally fix rates for private owned public utilities.

Reduction of taxes. The elimination of politics in the transaction of state business and toward this end would elimiate the party circle from the ballot.

Dr. Anna Hanlon Paul.

Mrs. Anna Hanlon Paul of Harvard, Neb. filed as a candidate for secretary of state on the Progressive ticket.

She is a graduate or the state university and was a successful teacher for several years. She was one of the signers of the agreement to form the progressive party and she states that she is in full accord with every plank in the platform.

Mrs. Blanche McKelvey.

Mrs. Blanche McKelvey, candidate for the legislature from the seventeeth Dougls county district was formerly a well known Omaha newspaper woman.

Reduction of the present excessive taxation, establishment of shorter hours and better working conditions for women and the enactment of the strong child labor laws are the three chief planks in the platform on which Mrs. McKelvey is making her campaign, she declares.

Mrs. Buell.

Mrs. Buell of Ashland is seeking the candidacy as democratic representative in congress from the fourth district.

She says. "I believe women should inform themselves on the question of banking laws, the soldiers' bonus and taxes in general as there are matters that affect the home."

Dasheen, Chinese Tuberous Plant, Finds Soil in Cornhusker State to its Liking

Dasheen, a tuberous plant which has been grown for years in China, where it occupies the place that the potato occupies in America, has made its entrance into a large number of Nebraska gardens this summer. George Stauss, a 9-year-old Lincoln boy who lives at 1928 J street, is growing one of these plants in his school garden, and his sister, Elfrieda 14, also has one in her garden. The plants are now about 8 inches high and are growing rapidly.

The tubers were distributed in Nebraska by the circulation department of the Lincoln Freie Presse last spring. The Strauss family took three of these. Each of the children, George, Hildegard and Elfrieda, who is only 7 years old has a very fine school garden for such a little girl ,but she was unforunate with the dasheen. It failed to grow. Hildegard is not registered among the school gardeners as she is in the tenth grade, but she is very much interested in her garden. The neighbors are watching the growth of the two plants, and Miss Minnie Burk, school garden supervisor, who occasionally calls to inspect George's and Elfrieda's gardens, is noticing the dasheen.

A number of farmers out in the state ordered dasheen tubers last spring to try out in their gardens and they report that they are growing nicely. Whether they will prove of any practical value remains to be seen later in the season.

Raised in All Parts

Dasheen has been grown in various parts of Europe and Asia and in certain parts of South America as well as in China, and in the last few years it has come to North America.

The tubers can be used in almost any way that Irish potatoes or swect potatoes can be used. They can be evaporated and ground into meal or flour, and for that purpose they are claimed to be superior to the potato, as they are drier. The flour mixed with wheat or rye flour is used for griddle cakes, biscuits and bread.

Another use for the plant is as greens. The stems when grown under a box or barrel so as to be bleached, are similar to asparagus. The department of agriculture says: "The shoots are very tender and have a delicate flavor suggestive of mushrooms. There are probably few plants so well suited for forcing purposes as the dasheen." Several cutting of the shoots can be harvested.

One hill in good, rich soil is said to produce 6 or 8 pounds of tubers, and one tuber sometimes weighs as much as 6 pounds or more. The United States department of agriculture reports 1,400 bushels from less than 5 acres in Flordia. Several crops have been grown successfully in northern Ohio.

Easy to Care For

Among the advantages claimed for dasheen is that in growing it there are no disease or insect enemies to contend with as in growing potatoes —no potato bugs to be poisoned; no rot, scabs, blight, mildew or other trouble. As yet the plants raised by George and Hildegard Strauss have not been troubled by disease or insects

The plants seem to thrive on wet ground, but it is claimed that they will also thrive on dry ground.

There may be a big future for dasheen in Nebraska, and it may never be more than a novelty and an ornament. More will be known about it at harvest time this fall.

The dasheen' plant raised by Hildegard Stauss was photographed on July 13. This plant could well be used for decorative purposes; it resembles "elephant's ear." The one grown by George Stauss is slightly larger.

Who's Who in Lincoln

MISS MINNIE MORRELL

Miss Minnie Morrell, the assistant superintendent of Rudge & Guenzel Company, is filling a place which is a comparatively new field of business for women.

The major portion of her time is spent interviewing applicants for positions and looking up their references, thus enabling her to recommend those who seem suitable when vacancies occur. These same new employes must be instructed in the system and policies of the store and this also belongs to Miss Morrell's daily program. The training and checking errors of all employes with an effort to increase efficiency of the store service receives her daily attention also. She has charge of the preparation and checking of time cards each week for the payroll, keeps an individual record of each salesman and figures the semi-annual bonus which each draws as commissions on goods sold.

She has charge of the insurance and assists the superintendent in the regular routine connected with the general maintenance of the store.

There are very few of these positions in the west, though they are becoming numerous in the east where a few training schools are located.

Miss Morrell is a graduate of the University of Nebraska and the Lincoln Business college. She has been engaged in advertising, salesmanship and commercial law. As a stenographer in various offices for several years and as a teacher of commercial subjects in high schools and business colleges for the past ten years, she has had an opportunity to gain a general knowledge of business and to use her own words: "I believe the work of educational director or employment manager in a retail store offers a very fine future for business women. The work is interesting and fascinating with some new problems constantly coming up to keep one wide awake and on the job."

Buy Your Drinks at Pillers' Pharmacy.

Just the very word drink sounds good these hot days, and especially after you have tasted some of the goodies that they serve at Pillers'. One just wonders how they think of so many good things. Those long, tall drinks with crushed ice and straws n' everything are certainly good. Stop at Pillers' and see if you don't think so too.

Novelty Sport Hats For Fall.

A novelty is shown for the early fall in the use of sports satin with velvet as well as the combination of moire. Velours are being introduced large drooping hat is made of black velvet with soft brim and still softer flange that hangs like a ruffle, and the facing made of bright blue moire. Velours are geing introduced in London and it is thought they will be a practical item here for the new season.

Metallic Designs.

The metallic shades so much sought at present, are also seen in these beaded bags. One sees a square bag of steel or jade beads, or a little flat purse of silver beads decorated merely with a Greek key design in black pearls.

Purses and bags at present come in a certain clearly defined shape. Suspended by a flat ribbon from the wrist, they are square, lozenge saaped, octagonal or circular, with a silk tassel finishing them. They are made of moire, satin moire, dull faille, decorated with little figurings, white elephants, dancing girls, sometime soutlined in white.

Many of these little bags hang from the finger by an ivory ring, through which runs a white satin ribbon finished with black tassel. An ultra smart hand bag should have its two surfaces flat, charming ones are shown with Japanese decoration.

Black Chantilly lace is effectively combined with silver cloth and black chiffon with white lace. One of the most interesting costumes was a straight pleated frock of black chiffon, finished in a deep applique of ecru lace over a slip bordered in purple chiffon, the colored chiffon seen again in a single sleeve draping over the left arm.

One of the prettiest of the white cotton crepe models is striped lengthwise by rows of narrow Valenciennes dyed red, and between the rows, flowers embroidered in red cotton.

Black for Formal Modes.

Black for evening wear, always in demand for the formal dress wardrobe, is taken note of in a most detailed fashion. Black lace over silver and gold foundations, black chiffon with appliqued festoons of narrow lace and rosebud centers are but few of the many treatments. In these black dresses, the bouffant hipline has been accentuated with folds of the chiffon.

In most every dress there is a sleeve, or an illusion of a sleeve in a cap effect or a band of lace. A few models have been made up with the plain shoulder strap but the majority adhere to the tiny sleeve. The dinner dress type of frock has been put forth with long pointed flowing sleeve that are more than wrist length. The sleeves in general are pointed, either very long or very short in a piquant cap effect.

The colors shown by this house are sunburst yellow, turquoise blue, jade, white, black, brown, in all shades, from caramel to very dark brown, aurora, poppy and orchid. This house develops white forcks both for regular evening wear and for the bridesmaid's dress. Brown bids fair to be a color best for the dinner dress, admitting of cocoa brown laces, with metallic underskirts in gold.

One particularly good model is developed in pale green chiffon over silver cloth. Many uneven panels hanging below the hemline are bounded with matching ostrich. The bouffant line through the hips is further emphasized by this feathery trimming.

Circular Skirt.

Another feature of the fall line is the development of the circular skirt in the party frock type of dress developed in a series of long panels that are cut in a wide circle.

One dress illustrating the circular skirt development is made up in sunburst yellow chiffon over a silver cloth skirt. The circular shaped panels, picot edged in silver, are accentuated by a cascare of pastel shaded grapes that follow the outline of the waist down to the hem on the right side. The bodice has a panel of chiffon slightly fulled and veiling a band of silver lace. This frock will be made up in other shades of the season.

An unusual development of changeable satin is made up in the poppy shade of red, its skirt completely covered with two inch flaps of the satin picot edged in silver. The mere semblance of a sleeve is made with flaps that fasten to the shoulder line. This dress is trimmed at the waist with a bunch of silver grapes that heighten the rich tones of the satin.

Brushed Wool Used Extensively.

Brushed wool is used for scarfs, almost to the exclusion of anything else, but sometimes rall versions of There is a slight preponderance of vertical over cross stripes, but the main feature is the softness of the coloring used, and the very attractively blended combinations. Matching hats are featured in many of the scarf groups.

It is in sweaters that most uncertainty lies, and it is here that we find most diversity of type. Brushed wool and mohair, the latter sometimes mixed with silk, are outstanding, and some very attractive variations of usual types are offered both in open and in slip-on styles.

The mannish collarless model is preferred among the former, though cross-over models and other coat types are full of interest. Vertical openings are in evidence among the slip-ons, varying considerably in depth and collars are quite independent in shape. Both figures of the Egyptian type, and stripes are included in most collections.

Jordan Medal Given to J. D. Edwards, Stromsburg Veteran, Member of Masonic Lodge for 67 Years

The presentation ceremony, bestowing the Jordan medal upon J. D. Edwards of Stromsburg as the oldest member of the Masonic lodge in years of affiliation, in the state of Nebraska. The ceremony was performed in the evening, before a large number of interested friends and townspeople.

BY CHATTIE COLEMAN WESTENIUS.

The Jordan medal, Masonic emblem bestowed upon the oldest Mason in the state, was presented to J D. Edwards of Stromsburg, who has been a member of that order for sixty-seven out of his ninety-two years, on Saturday evening, July 8, with appropriate public exercises. Grand Master Wellman assisted by Grand Custodian French of the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons of Nebraska, presented the medal to the honored veteran.

This medal was designed in memory of Mr. Jordan, who was the first grand master of the Nebraska jurisdiction of the Masonic order, and is presented to the oldest Mason in Nebraska, not in years, but in years that he had been a member of the order and is held in his possession during his life time.

When the former holder died a couple of weeks ago, a claim was put in for the medal by another member of the order, but after a thorough investigation of the records of the order, it was proven without a doubt that Mr. Edwards was entitled to the medal, and as soon as this question had been settled a message was received from the grand lodge that the officers would be here on Saturday and that the presentation would take place that day. As this order came on Wednesday the officers and members of the local lodge got busy, and that a creditable effort was made to make the event a memorable one was amply proven in the manner that the program was carried out.

Elaborate Program.

A platform had been erected in front of the new band stand with sufficient seating capacity for the public provided. The Masonic pillars and altar, and the master's and warden's chairs had been placed on the platform, and due east from the platform a tent had been placed and to this the man in whose honor the exercises were to be held, was escorted and left with a guard of honor. The band met the grand officers and the officers and members of the Masonic order at the entrance to the hall, and the procession marched from there to the platform in the park where the officers were seated, the members of the lodge being seated on both sides of the walk leading to the platform. Following this a bugle call was sounded, three rockets fired the flag lowered and J. D. Edwards was escorted by the drums and a guard of honor consisting of three soldiers of world war, one carrying the flag, the senior and junior masters of the local lodge and the two grand officers of the order marching to the platform where he was given a seat of honor. On the platform besides the Masonic brothers were his old soldier comrades, members of the city council, his only daughter and granddaughter.

The presentation of the medal was conducted by Grand Master Wellman and Grand Custodian Bob French. The grand master delivered a forceful address fitting the occasion, and "Uncle" Bob, as he is familiarly called by the Masonic fraternity, gave a history of the origin and purpose of the Jordan medal and gave a glowing tribute to Brother Edwards. The ceremonies of presenting the medal were closed by the singing of the chorus, "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground" and "The Old Ooken Bucket."

Following this a program was rendered, E. E. Stanton being the master of ceremonies. He spoke in his usual happy vein, and afterwards introduced Mrs. Hattie M. Scott, past grand matron of the Order of the Eastern Star. She delivered a splendid eulogy to the honored old gentleman, and she was followed by Rev. W. M. Rose, who delivered a forceful address. Another noteworthy part of the program was a solo by Mrs. C. F. Moore. The exercises closed by singing the first verse of "America."

Old in Years Not in Spirit.

The grand old man who was the center of attraction of this prominent event is still "some boy" for his age, being ninety-two years old. Old in years but young in heart and mental caliber and while he does not step as lively as he did in the sixties, when he went to war for his country, he is in good physical condition and it is hoped that he may have the pleasuer of being the possessor of the only medal of that kind in the whole United States, or perhaps in the world, for many years, at least his many friends entertain that wish.

Mr. Edwards has a fine army record, and his Masonic record is not often approached by members of that order. His Masonic record is as follows: He became a member of Clinton Lodge, No. 15, Fairfield, Iowa. Was initiated April 2, 1855; passed April 30, and raised August 27 in the same year. He was regularly demitted from Clinton Lodge and affiliated with Oliver Lodge No. 38 of Seward, Neb. Was demitted from that lodge and became a charter member of the Stromsburg Lodge No. 126. He was the first master of Stromsburg Lodge and served as master 1884 to 1888 and from 1892 to 1894 and 1900 to 1903. Served as secretary on two different occasions, and has served as secretary continuously from 1906 to 1922. He was reelected secretary this year, but declined to accept as the work was becoming somewhat of a burden. He has always been a power of strength to the lodge, and is yet today consulted on matters of importance to the fraternity. He had been a Mason for sixty-seven years when the Jordan Medal was awarded to him.

Civil War Record.

His army record is as follows: He was born and resided in Huntington, Pa., until he was twenty years of age, when he moved to Jefferson county, Iowa. At the beginning of the civil war he enlisted in the 14th regiment Iowa, Vol. Infantry, on the 15th day of October, 1861, and was mustered into the United States service as a private for a period of three years. October 24, that same year he was transferred to Co. 6 41st Iowa Vol. September 18, 1862, was again transferred to Co. M, 7th Iowa Vol., Cavalry. April 25, 1863, re-enlisted and remustered as a veteran February 29, 1864. Was transferred to Co. M, 7th Iowa Cavalry and was mustered out of service June 2nd, 1866. He was in continuous service four years, eight months and seven days. His first march was five hundred miles.

Mr. Edwards was born March 9, 1831, and came to Nebraska in 1874, making his home in Seward remaining there eight years. He moved to Lincoln residing there one year and a half, when he located in Stromsburg early in 1883 and here he has since resided. By occupation he was a contractor and builder, beginning to learn his trade at the age of nineteen. He has served as mayor of Stromsburg one term, and several terms as justice of the peace and police judge.

Much credit for the success of the meeting was due to the present master of the lodge, W. W. Ilgenfritz and other members of the Masonic order whose untiring efforts made the gathering a success.

Movement To Save Historic Country Club Building

The lower picture is of the Country club building which was erected by Nebraska's first governor, David Butler, and twenty years ago was remodeled for use as a club house. Delightfully located as this building is, on an elevation and partially surrounded by trees, one can readily understand the feeling among Lincoln people that this place ought to be kept for public use.

An historic old building that stands as a relic handed down to posterity from the pioneer days of Nebraska when political feuds rankled deep—the old Country club house in southwest Lincoln—is now headed toward destruction. The final step that has marked its doom is the letting of the contract for the erection of a new Country club building on the club's newly developed property in south Lincoln.

The old building was erected by Nebraska's first governor, David Butler, away back in the '60's, a year or two after Nebraska was admitted as a state. Governor Butler served three terms and during this time he was under fire from political enemies. While the building, which was to be the governor's home, was under construction these enemies circulated the story that he was appropriating state funds for the building of his mansion. As a result, impeachment proceedings were instituted against him in 1871.

The old Butler home occupied some sixty acres and was remarkably suitable for a club house. The members of the Country club saw this and almost twenty years ago the organization purchased it. The building was extended to its present dimensions and the wide veranda running the full length of the building on the east and across the south end was added. Spacious enough to accommodate from two to three hundred people comfortably, the building still preserved the home-like atmosphere that was instilled into it in the early days when it was a private home.

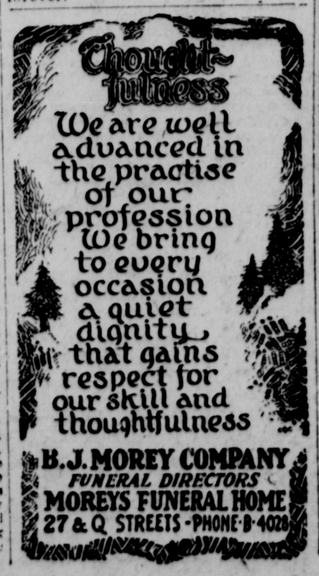

For almost twenty years the Lincoln Country club had an ideal place for its parties and outdoor activities. But the city has grown and the popularity of golf has gone forward at a tremendous rate. As a result the club has acquired a more rolling stretch of ground in south Lincoln, which is better suited for a golf course. The old property has been sold to Woods Brothers company for transformation into a residence district.

The historic building with its beautifully sloping acreage is surrounded by a halo of sentiment that makes its destruction almost sacrilege to many Lincoln people. More practical-minded citizens join in wanting the building and part of the property turned to public use, for they see opportunity for the development of a park, playground or community resort of some kind. The Woods Brothers were in sympathy with the movement and they gave an option to a committee which undertook to underwrite the transaction, hoping to assure the availability of the building and grounds for public use. But the option expired without a sufficient guaranty being obtained.

A few weeks ago the city commission voted to extend the city limit beyond the old Country club grounds. This fall the transformation of the property into a modernized residence district will begin. Woods Brothers plan to leave the area immediately surrounding the building intact till the last in the hope that something may yet be done to keep it for public use.

Unless action is taken very soon the historic old building will vanish forever.

HARDING'S HOPES TO STOP TROUBLE DASHED ON ROCKS

Efforts to Bring Peace In Coal Mine Strike Results In Failure.

Union Leaders Refuse to Accept Government Offer of Arbitration.

(International News Service.)
WASHINGTON, July 15.—The government's first great effort to end the national coal strike is on the rocks tonight, and the responsibility laid at the doors of the miners by President Harding.
The bitter realization that it has failed came to the administration tonight when John L. Lewis, speaking for the United Mine Workers of America, informed President Harding in the exectuive offices of the white house that the miners refused to accept the government's offer of arbitration.
The scene in the white house was a striking one, for instead of meeting the miners' terse refusal with expected comment expressing regret the president bowed his head and fingered with implements on his desk. He raised his head again and looked the miners' chief in the face and said:
"Gentlemen, I thank you for the efforts you have made. I hope you have fully appraised the responsibility you have assumed in declining the government's offer of a means of instant adjustment and resumption of coal mining."
The white house shortly after the miners' committe had left, issued the following statement:
"The president met the policy committee of the United Mine Workers and received the written declination to accept the voluntary plan proposed for the settlement of the dispuate which is responsible for suspended mining activity. There will be no announcement of any government plan to relieve the situation until the response of the bituminous operators is received. It is expected to have their report Monday morning."

Interprets Original Proposal.

As soon as the miners' committee spokesman, John L. Lewis, presented to President Harding the written answer of the workers, the president handed him a long document which contained the administration's official interpretations of the original proposal in response to requests made both by miners and operators during the past week that the president amplify and interpret his proposition.
The miners' committee retired from the executive offices to study the president's official interpretation of his offer. On finishing the study, Lewis said:
"Although the president has stated now at this late moment that the checkoff system should operate as before unnder his arbitration plan, I cannot see that even had this interpretation been afforded us prior to the rendering of our answer, could we have accepted it. The president's interpretation fails to cover our points."
The decision of the miners followed swiftly in the wake of a day rife with conferences among the coal miners. In addition to the policy committee meeting at which the answer to the president was framed, the anthracite committee of the miners met separately and decided unanimously to reject the proposition of the president.
The policy committee numbering among its members 250 representative district mine officials by unanimous vote, late today rejected the president's proposal.

Protest From Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 15.—The Kansas City Chamber of Commerce today telegraphed to President Harding a protest against his offer to put coal miners back to work at the 1922 scale pending a settlement of the strike. The protest was made "in the interest of industry," which, the message said, could not stand the "exorbitant wage" demanded by miners.

Officers Seize a Cargo of Wet Goods and An Automobile

Ten quarts of beer and one quart of whisky, and a big automobile were seized by Captain Walter Anderson, accompanied by Federal Prohibition Agent Tom Carroll, Officers Schneible and Yapp, at midnight Saturday, when the officers arrested a man giving the name of Henry F. Mackey, 33, living at 728 P street. Mackey was taken about a mile northwest of the city. There were four men in the car.
The officers closed in on the car and forced it into the ditch and seized the cargo and the men. The police were withholding the names of Mackey's companians. According to Caroll the car will be confiscated. Mr. Carroll said that Mackey was arrested, according to police records on March 6, 1922 and fined $100 and costs on a charge of illegal possession of liquor.
Saturday afternoon, Captain Walter Anderson and Officer Schneible visited the home of Peter Kreger, 15, living at 103 L street, where they found fifteen gallons of mash, five gallons of beer and one gallon of hooch, and a copper boiler, which according to Captain Anderson was part of a still. Kreger was taken into custody and is being held at the city jail.

Hearings Soon On Transportation Act

WASHINGTON, Juuly 15.—Hearings will be held soon by the senate interstate commerce committee to initiative revision of the transportation act and deal with problems developed by tthe present strike, Chairman Cummins stated today.
The first effort of congress, Senator Cummins said, probably would be to amend the law so as to guarantee a fair living wage to railroad workers. Later, but probably not during the present strike, he said, an effort would be made to provide penalties for violation of orders of the railway labor board.

We arrived at Balboa, the southeast end of the canal about 6 p. m. There we ate dinner while mail was being taken on and some passengers also. Then just as night was falling (for darknes comes early and quickly here), we glided out into the Pacific on the last lap of our journey southward. We stood on deck and watched the lights of Balboa fade into the distance rather feeling a bit sad because home was far away and now we were bidding adios to the last view we would have of Uncle Sam's land for some time. Looking to the south the Cruz del Sur shone respuendent.
The Pacific was calm during the entire journey and during much of the trip we were too far at seat to sight land. On the third day, however, we sailed quite close to the coast of Ecuador so we viewed the transition from jungle to desert as we approached the Gulf of Guayaquil. The desert which begins a little north of Santiago, Chile, is continuous through Peru into Ecuador where a rather abrupt change occurs and jungle becomes the characteristic. This persists unbroken until southern Mexico is reached, whence desert is again encountered.
We landed in Guavaquil Saturday, June 10 at 11 a. m. While I had read of the work instituted here by the Rockefeller Foundation, led by Dr. Connor, I did not realize how completely it began its work here. I am told, early in January, 1919, Guayaquil was then shunned as the pest hoe of the Pacific, yellow fever and bubonic plague were epidemic. essels refused to come to the harbor and business wa practically paralyzed. The clean up campaign was immediately begun and results were obtained that sound stranger than fiction.
One of the most impressive feature of our life here is to see the sun to the north at noon. Its altitude is then only about 65 per cent above the northern horizon. At Lincoln, June 22, as you know, the sun is above the southern horizon. In other words, you have more nearly vertical rays for a short period in midsummer than we have now. That may help you to understand why we find woolen blankets quite comfortable at night.
Four hundred university song books will go out this week to high schools in Nebraska. The distribution of these books promises to arouse much interest, and the students of the high schools will learn to sing the favorite Nebraska songs, so that when they come to the university, they will be able to get the Nebraska pep and spirit from the minute they set foot on the campus. It is the aim of the university that every high school student in the state be able to sing "The Cornhusker," when he comes to Nebraska.
Dr. R. J. Pool, head of the department of botany, will leave Tuesday morning for Estes Park, Colo., where he will teach in the summer school of the State Teachers' college. He intends to make the trip by automobile and will be accompanied by his family.

SAYS THAT DAVIS BASES HIS CLAIM ON PAST RECORD

Chase Says That Criticism of Campaign Methods Are Unjust.

Candidate Knew Nothing of Letters Sent to Nebraska Alumni.

Jackson B. Chase, campaign manager for Attorney-General Clarence A. Davis, who is seeking the nomination for United States Senator, Saturda yevening issued a statement in regard to Mr. Davis' campaign, in which he declared that those in charge of the activities had not asked the endorsement of any religious institution as such and that Mr. Davis knew nothing about the letter sent out to members of the Nebraska alumni. The statement in full follows:

Mr. Chase's Statement.

"We are closing the campaign of Attorney General Clarence A. Davis, candidate for the republican nomination to the United States senate.

"At all times we have earnestly endeavored to conduct the campaign in a fair and straight-forward manner, and we have studiously avoided indulging in attacks on the other candidates. In other words, Mr. Davis is seeking the republican nomination to the United States senate on his own merits, rather than by attacking and attempting to discredit the other candidates.

"Unfortunately the supporters of another candidate for the republican nomination to the United States senate have attempted to inject several foreign issues into this campaign.

"They have criticized certain members of the clergy for having openly endorsed Mr. Davis, notwithsatnding that according to our information they have sought similar endorsements for their candidate.

"It surely would not be contended that ministers should consult the press, before expressing themselves. We all know that several moral issues are involved in this campaign, and I believe that all good citizens regardless of whether or not they are members of the clergy should take an active interest in the selection of the candidate, whom they believe will be most honestly and faithfully perform their duties in public office. I can never subscribe to the doctrine that ministers should be denied this privilege which is conceded to every American citizen.

"I desire to emphasize that we have not asked for nor received the support of any religious institution as an institution, although I am glad to state that a number of prominent members of institutions of various denominations are very active in their support of Mr. Davis.

Calls It Unfair Attack.

"Certain supporters of Mr. Davis have been criticized for making use of the alumni files of the University of Nebraska in writing a letter endorsing Mr. Davis to the alumni of Nebraska. I believe this complaint was originated as pure political propaganda, particularly so for the reason that I know for a fact that this list has been heretofore used repeatedly. Mr. Davis knew nothing about this letter, as he was out of the city at the time it was written by his friends. In fact they wrote the letter without the solicitation of Mr. Davis, or anyone officially identified with his cafpaign. I consider this subject undeserving of further comment as I am certain that the people of Nebraska are too intelligent and broad-minded to be misled by such an unfair and unwarranted attack on the friends of Mr. Davis.

"Clarence A. Davis has served the people of Nebraska as their attorney general for the past four years, and it is on his official record at attorney general that he stands. All voters can easily familiarize themselves with his record and quickly determine whether he is worthy of their support, and it is needless for me to review his record as attorney general at this time, as I am confident that ihs activities as attorney general in enforcing prohibition, prosecuting the crooked bankers and stock swindlers are fresh in the memories of most Nebraska people.

Women Make Appeal.

The Davis for Senator Women's club of Lincoln gave out the following statement Saturday evening:

"We the undersigned women of Lincoln, realizing that this election means more than just the placing in nomination of candidates for various offices: that there are principles at stake more important than the men whom we elect; that we are determined the men we support must be for prohibition as a principle and not as an expedient, believe that in the candidacy of Clarence A. Davis we have one whose stand and achievement proves we can depend upon him and meets our entire approval.

"We appeal to the women of Nebraska to join us in securing the nomination of Clarence A. Davis as United States senator.

Baker Runs Amuck With A Knife And Kills Sweetheart

NEW YORK, July 15.—Paul Pulker Witz, 34, a baker tonight sctabbed to death his former fiancee, Mary Brazofsky, 27, in a pealous rage when he found the latter in the room of Joseph Zelenski in Brooklyn, according to the police.

Shortly before 8 o'clock William Larkin, a neighbor, heard a commotion in the basement of the tenement. He pushed open the door to see Zelenski's room. Zlenski was leaning against the door shouting, a knife in his side. Mary Brazoffsky's body was stretched prone on the floor of the hallway, slashed in a dozen places.

WOMEN OF OMAHA REPLY TO MULLEN

Say That Charles W. Bryan Has Always Stood For Their Cause.

Claim His Nomination Insures Success For the Democracy.

OMAHA, July 15.—The following statement was given out here this evening:

"The undersigned women approve of the following appeal to the women of Nebraska:

"The attention of the women of this state is called to the statment published in the morning papers by Mr. Arthur Mullen stating that J. N. Norton is his choice for governor.

"It should not be necessary to make further comment on that fact. The women know where Mr. Mullen has always stood upon questions in which they are interested.

"Mr. Charles W. Brayn has always been one of the foremost champions of the cause of women. He has always favored woman's suffrage, and he is the only candidate who has come out for the Sheppard-Towner bill passed by congress in the interest of women and children. His position on prohibition is known to all.

"We have absolute assurance that Mr. Bryan is not tied up with any candidate and that he is standing on his own record and reputation.

"When the women have wanted assistance in the legislature, or in congress, they have appealed to Mr. Brayn, and they have never been disappointed. H ehas given freely of his time and contriuted liberally of his money in the interest of every good cause we have favored, and he has always stood for the rights of the common people.

"The nomination of Mr. Bryan will result in bringing Mr. William Jennings Bryan and other national leaders into the campaign in this state and thereby insure the election of the democratic ticket, whic his certainly to be desired in this time of extravagance, waste and mis-rule.

"We appeal to th ewomen of this state to stand by the man who has always stood by them, and vote for Charles W. Bryan for governor.

LEGION'S REPORT IS DEFENDED BY COMMITTEEMAN

Epperson Explains Methods Used In Checking the Candidates.

Poteet Not Present When Aspirants For State Jobs Were Taken Up.

A full explanation of the means used by the American Legion political intelligence committee in gathering and listing data on candidates in the coming primary, which appeared in a condensed form in The Mid-West Veteran, together with corrections of some slight typographical errors in that article, are contained in an open letter written Saturday by Charles H. Epperson, Jr. Legion committee, to Homer L. Kyle, who made a public protest of the committee's work and repudiated it as the sentiment of the Legion's membership.

In his letter published in Saturday's Star, Mr. Kyle asserts that the report is manifestly unfair, and that at least two members of the committee are actively interested in the campaigns of two candidates for governor. Mr. Epperson gives the names and politics of the committeemen, and states that three of the members, presumably the ones referred to in Mr. Kyle's letter, were not present when the state and congressional candidates were considered.

Mr. Epperson explains that such information as was published was gathered from local posts in the candidates' home vicinities, and that in the several cases where such reports failed to reach the committee, the candidates' names were not mentioned, or such facts as were known only were included. He strongly defends the American Legion's policy of checking up candidates for political office as to their war records and sympathies and asserts that the committeemen were fair and unbiased in every way in making the report.

Mr. Epperson's letter was written following a meeting at the Legion's state headquarters in Lincoln, attended by himself, State Adjutant Frank B. O'Connell, State Vice Commander Lester L. Dunn and Marcus L. Poteet. The letter follows:

The Epperson Statement.

LINCOLN, Neb., July 15.—Mr. Homer Kyle, Lincoln Neb., Dear Sir—Your leter in the daily press has been called to the attention of the American Legion political intelligence committee, and that committee has authorized the following answer to the same:

We believe that an itnerest in the election of public servants is in keeping with the constitution of the American Legion and the purposes for which it was organized. We believe that the Legion has an especial interest in candidates from the standpoint of their war records and their support of legislation for which the Legion had stood since its organization. We believe that 100 per cent Amecianism cannot be fostered and perpetuated by electing to office those who by their conduct during the war indicated that they are not in sympathy with that ideal, or that they feared the power of others who were not.

On the other hand, we recognize as the established policy of the Legion that that organization must not be used to further the candidacy of any man for public office. That policy may not have any principle as a foundation, but the experiences of other similar organizations has proved that it is the only safe course to follow.

Names Committee.

In keeping, therefore, with both principle enunciated in the preamble of our constitution and the policy heretofore outlined, the department executive committee of the Legion for Nebraska created a committee to report on each candidate's war record, his legislative record as it affects Americanism, and other facts of similar interest. The report of that committee, stated inaccurately as we shall hereinafter show, is the report to which you refer in your letter.

This attitude of the Legion needs no defense, and no space will be taken here in defending it.

You, however, as a member of the Legion, other members of the Legion and in fact the public generally have a right to know the composition of the committee, the method by which it worked, and its possible chance of error. We will therefore outline the work we did with that end in view.

The committee is composed of Ed P. McDermott, a well known democrat of Kearney; M. L. Poteet of Lincoln; William Kavan of Omaha; and Aubrey Duxberry of Plattsmouth. I am chairman of the committee, and am identified with the republican party, but am not interested in the candidacy of any person whomsoever. Mr. Kavan is a democrat and Mr. Poteet, a republican. Mr. Duxberry was represented to us as being affiliated with the progressive party. It is possible that two of these men are identified actively with the candidacy of men now running for office. But we deny that any favoritism was shown those candidates in the report of the committee. Mr. McDermott, Mr. Duxberry and Mr. Poteet were not present at the meeting of the committee which considered the state and congressional candidates. A member of the Lincoln post, whose name is well known to you, was present with a proxy, thus making a quorum present.

Obtaining Information.

The bulk of the information was collected by means of questionnaires mailed to the local posts, and in some cases full reports are not made because the local posts did not send in these inquires in time for the consideration of the committee. That is true, for instance, in the case of Mr. Wray. Nothing is said about his war record because the committee knew nothing about it. In such cases we merely included such information as we were able to obtain from other sources.

It might be well further to remark at this time that every entry on the report of the committee was unanimous enry of the committee. If any member questioned any statement, it was omitted.

The report that you read was contained in the Mid-West Veteran, which is not the official Legion paper of the state. As you doubtless know from your experience on the Non-Partisan Leader, reporters are apt to make mistakes and headlines are sometimes misleading. The main error in this case came through paraphrasing the committee's preliminary statement. That statement was as follows, and i nthis form, went out to all local posts:

"Below is the report of the Political Intelligence Committee of the American Legion, Department of Nebraska.

"In making this report the American Legion is not promting the candidacy of any man. We believe that the members of the Legion should have the advantage of such information as we have been able to collect reflecting on the war records of candidates, and their record on legislation if they have ever been mem e of legislative bodies which had before it for consideration matters in which the American Legion was interested.

"The word 'satisfactory' as used herein refers only to the opinion of the committee making this report. Legislative record refers only to Legion legislation and Americanization measures."

Another typographical error which appeared in the report you read was that the war record of P. F. O'Gara was satisfactory. As originally written by the committee, the word was "unsatisfactory," and it was so sent to all the posts.

The Case of Norton.

You make mention of our report on J. H. Norton. His case is another in which the local post failed to respond. Our statement that he is opposed to the Reed-Norval act was gathered from the substance of an article appearing in the New State, a newspaper which is actively identified with his candidacy. Upon learning that we may have been in error, we prepared to send out supplementary reports, including the things you now give in his favor. We even purchased 2,000 post cards to aid us in correcting the error. But upon investigation we found that your statement that he had a son in the service during the war was not true. His campaign manager appeared at the state headquarters of the Legion and told us that Mr. Norton was not opposed to the Reed-Norval act. We therefore prepared a statement to that effect, but the campaign manager opposed our sending it out, citing the fact that such action would antagonize certain German elements in the state. Under the circumstances we are not inclined to alter the report as it now stands.

You complain of the shortness of time between the publication of the report and the primary election. We admit this, and deeply regret it. But you must blame the law makers who allow only one month between the time when filing for office closes and the primary election. I the committee makes a further report before election it will be published in plenty of time for all candidates to call our attention to any errors published, and in time for our correction to reach the places that the report has reached

We believe that the above properly explains to the public the system employed by our committee and the report that it turned out. We will not bother the public with any answer to pour personalities and foolish epithets at this time.

At the beginning of your letter you state that the public is entitled to know who compose our committee. In frankness we have told the names of the members of the committee and with whom they are affiliated. Now we believe that it is only fair that you tell the public the political parties and factions with whom you are now affiliated. The public is entitled to know the source of the opposition to the report of this committee. Yours truly, (Signed) CHAS. H. EPPERSON, Jr., Chairman.

Many People at Gage County Life Saving Institute

(Special to The Star.)

BEATRICE, Neb., July 15.—Captain Chauncey A. Hyatt, Red Cross national expert in swimming and life saving Friday evening closed his demonstrations and lectures at Beatrice, held under the auspices of the Beatrice Y. M. C. A. and the Gage county Red Cross. It was the first Southeastern Nebraska Life Saving Institute. He will go from Beatrice to Columbus, Sidney and Fremont, respectively at w hich places he will demonstrate life saving methods and give lectures.

The big attraction during Captain Hyatt's stay in Beaetrice was the free demonstration at the Canoe club pier Thursday evening, where about 500 people gathered to witness life saving methods and swimming feats. Captain Hyatt also lectured on the proper methods of boat handling and resuscitation. At the close of the hour Captain Hyatt demonstrated how by knowing the method, even a boy can rescue a big, heavy man in the water. The captain let J. Austin, a Beatrice boy, tow him to the shore. Austin succeeded in doing it, although the current of the Blue river was strong and Hyatt weighs 215 pounds, while Austin weighs only 128. Austin had had only four lessons previously.

Captain Hyatt gave lectures to the firemen who gathered in a body under the command of Chief Whiteside. He als oaddressed the Rotarians, Y. W. C. A. girls, boy scouts, business college students and employes of different manufacturing companies.

The speaker showed his audience exactly what should be done when people are asphyxiated, how to revive drowning people, and how to break the "death grasp" of a drowning person and take them to shore. He also gave first-aid-to-the-injured pointers.

As a result of the life saving institute, ninety-nine Beatrice youths were presented with certificates of proficiency in swimming, at a special ceremony at 4 p. m. Friday. Each of the certificate winners had to pass certain tests in life saving and swimming.

Friday afternoon, Captain Hyatt was at Wymore where he gave a lecture and demonstration at Fink's park. He goes to Columbus from Beatrice.

Attempt Made to Ditch Fast Train On Eastern Road

BOSTON, Mass., July 15.—Two attempts to wreck trains of the Boston & Maine railroad caused officials of that road tonight to issue to its engineers and other employes orders to take extreme caution.

Near Somerworth, N. H., Engineer Michael of the White Mountain express, discovered a pile of ties on the rails. At Winchester, Mass., rocks had been placed on the tracks.

FREMONT OPPOSED TO LAW BREAKING

Union Leaders Say They Do Not Favor Use of Violence.

Unable To Control Actions of Certain Radical Ones.

(Special to The Star.)

FREMONT, Neb., July 15.—Fremont is quiet again tonight, after Saturday's development in the strike situation. Mayor Green from the Commercial club and from other sources, has received promise of support in any measures to preserve order.

It developed at the heated session of the club directors Saturday morning, when committees of railroad officials and strikers aired their differences, that there is marked sympathy in Fremont for the striking men, but no countenance whatever for lawless demonstrations against men, local or otherwise, who want to work.

Union Leaders Frown on Violence.

Leaders among the union men declared that they were unable to entirely suppress the tendencies of "certain youthful, radical fellows" but that they did not approve the "manhandling" of the ten men who were taken off of a train.

Strong objection is made by the railroad officials to the picketing system that is in use by the strikers.

Toles Winteresteen, former deputy sheriff and candidate for sheriff before the republican primaries, explained his presence with the strikers by declaring that he went along for the purpose of seeing that no harm was done the men who were abducted. He explained the injured condition of his hand by asserting that he was forced to engage in a personal encounter with one of the strangers who called him names.

The complaint filed by Special Agent Ready of the Northwestern against the strikers who are alleged to have abducted ten Northwestern employes Friday forenoon gives the names of the abducted men as follows: Fred Smith, A. M. Carmichael, W. Sternes, James Davis, G. Randolph, Clarence Burless, W. D. Crawford, L. A. Peck, Henry Lester, James Brown and A. Baska.

DENISON, TEXAS, BECOMES QUIET

Presence of Ranger Captain Seems to Put Fear Into Rioters' Hearts.

(International News Service.)

DENISON, Tex., July 15.—The presence of Adjutant General Thomas D. Barton and Tom Hickman, captain of the Texas rangers, brought quiet to this city today.

Both were here to investigate the rioting of the past few days in which strikebreakers have been beaten and carried out of the city in motor cars.

Adjutant Barton and Captain Hickman conferred with city officials this morning and at 10 o'clock met a committee of striking shopmen of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railroad shops. They declined to comment upon the situation, but stated they would return to Dallas where they would report to Gov. Pat. M. Neff, who is said to be expected in Dallas tonight.

The coming of Tom Hickman, head of the rangers, seemingly gave the strikers more concern than reports that the Texas national guard or companies of United States regulars would be sent here and gave rise to rumors that the rangers would be ordered here to preserve order.

Guards Not Needed.

DALLAS, Texas., July 15.—"There is no necessity demanded by the present strike ituation in Texas for calling out troops," declared Gov. Pat M. Neff tonight.

FRED BROWN MAY HAVE TRIAL SOON

Consider Drawing Special Venire to Try Manacle Man.

OMAHA, July 15. — Fred Brown, the manacle sphinx, regained his conversational powers this morning.

Dr. Julius Johnson, county jail physician, went to Brown's cell to treat him.

"How are you, Fred?" he asked, entering.

"Better."

"Have a bad night?" the physician then asked.

"Not very."

Other questions regarding Brown's health were answered by the prisoner with nods or shakes of the head.

District Judge Leslie favors drawing a special panel of veniremen for jury duty in August and in that desire lies hope for an early trial for Brown. Otherwise the trial would be delayed at least a month later.

In the meanwhile A. V. Shotwell, county attorney, is suspicious of a move to have Brown's bond reduced from $63,000, which he announced today he would fight bitterly.

Will Case Must Go to The Jury, Justice Rules

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 15.—Holding that while he did not consider there had been sufficient evidence to show Mathew P. Burns, late shoe merchant, had suffered from delusions that would affect his will, but that there was evidence of general insanity prior to death, Probate Judge Rives today denied a motion that the jury in the Burns will case be instructed to return a verdict in favor of the defense.

Judge Rives held that the jury should pass upon the insanity question and determine whether the $100,000 estate should go to the widow, Mrs. Adelaine Lou Burns, mother of Gloria Swanson, noted film beauty, or whether other relatives should be given a share of the property.

The case was continued until 3 p. m. Monday, at which time final arguments of opposing attorneys are to be started.

Deny Reports of Trouble In Mine Area of Kentucky

KNOXVILLE, Ky., July 15.—Officials of the Appalachian Coal Operators' association late tonight denied that there had been any trouble at Benham Ky., where according to persistent rumors, one was killed and ten injured in a battle between miners and guards.

The reports were made that more than two hundred shots were fired and that feeling was running high.

County officials at Benham and Lynch refused to confirm or deny the rumors.

Efforts to locate wounded men reported having been brought to Knoxville hospitals were no avail.

Crack Michigan Flyer Wrecked

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., July 15. The westbound Wolverine flyer, the Michigan Central's finest train, went over loosened tracks, two miles east of Battle Creek at noon today and five rear coaches were derailed while the main line track was torn up for about a quarter of a mile. Two persons were slightly injured. All cars remained connected and upright.

SCORES ATTITUDE OF LIQUOR PARTY

Flying Squadron Speaker Urges People to Stand Firm For Prohibition.

Oliver W. Stewart Declares Return of Liquor Means Fall of Nation.

In the closing address of a three day series of meetings by the Flying Squadron, Saturday night at the St. Paul M. E. church, Oliver W. Stewart, president of the organization told of the danger of the return of the saloon and the disastrous effects of such a nevent upon the country.

Mr. Stewart developed the idea that the government established by the fathers, whose work was highly commended, was based upon the constitution of the United States, which William E Gladstone said was the greatest document ever struck off by the mined and purpose of man at a given hour in human history.

Mr. Stewart declared that if the wets succeeded in doing the thing they say they intend to do by the method which they are employing and which they say they will continue to do by the method which they are employing and which they say they will continue to employ, this democracy—the world's last great governmental hope—must fail. He charged that the wets are engaged in a movement to restore the drink traffic without repealing the prohibition national amendment and he pointedly asserted that to do so—as the wets say they can—by electing a congress to repeal the Volstead act and thus leave the national prohibition amendment with no means for its enforcement, is to make perjurers of the congressmen who do the bidding of the liquorites. That alone the speaker said would be sufficient to overthrow this democratic government.

He further charged that the wet attack means the breakdown of the federal constitution since they propose to restore the liquor traffic by overriding the national prohibition amendment. This government, the speaker said, is based on the constitution, deriving its power therefrom. When the constitution goes down, the government goes with it.

In detail he showed how the wet attack is to be met by the Flying Squadron and promised the people that he will take the organization into districts far and wide where congressional fights are on. No dry congressman is to be deserted to be overwhelmed at primaries or election without help.

He told the people that this is the 292nd city into which the organization has gone and that it is to be heard finally in every strategic center in the United States.

At Critical Juncture.

In the afternoon Miss Norma C. Brown, who was the first woman chaplain of the Illinois senate, spoke a St. Paul's church. "We stand at the critical juncture of one of the greatest reforms the world has ever seen," declared Rev. Brown. "Our government itself is in danger. The principal question before the American people today is: Shall the constitution be maintained, or shall it go down?"

The speaker asserted that violence and disrespect for aw are rampant, a condition not compatible with constitutional government.. That the people in breaking the eighteenth amendment will soon grow into the frame of mind where no laws are to be obeyed. Law observance, with and in connection with the strict enforcement of the dry laws, she declared is the greatest issue of today.

Miss Brown spoke of her tour of the country, during which she has appeared in almost 300 cities, where she has found sentiment strongly in favor of prohibition, even capital and labor uniting on this question. She urged her hearers to support by their ballots the candidates pledged to support the Volstead act, and defeat the well financed campaign which is being waged by the liquor interests to break down the eighteenth amendment and nullify the prohibition laws.

BOY BADLY HURT IN A JAIL BREAK

Youth Leaves Trail of Blood From Fremont to Bennington.

OMAHA, July 15. — Omaha police have been asked to seek two boys, each 15 years old, who escaped from Dodge county jail in Fremont, early Saturday morning, stole an automobile in Fremont and sped towards Omaha, leaving a trail of blood from Fremont to Bennington.

One of the boys was badly cut in his break to liberty. A large pool of blood, a blood-stained towel and lavatory in the jail and a trail of blood from Fremont to Bennington, where a blood-stained automobile was found turned over, indicate that the pair attempted to drive to Omaha.

The boys are George Kelley, wanted by Lansing, Mich., authorities on charge of auto stealing, and Floyd Faust, Kansas City boy, held on charge of breaking and entering several Fremont homes. Police say he was captured in one of the homes he was burglarizing last week.

The escape was made through a wire-enclosed window. The car they fled from Fremont in belongs to a Fremont doctor. It as found wrecked between Elk City and Bennington.

Alleged "Stone Age" Slayer Admits She Is Clara Phillips

TUCSON, Ariz., July 15.—Mrs. Clara Phillips who since her arrest here on a charge of beating Mrs. Alberta Meadows to death with a hammer has insisted her name was "Clara McGuire", tonight confessed her identity to Sheriff Traeger and John L. Vanbuskird, representing her attorney.

Mrs. Phillips also permitted Sheriff Traeger to examine the bandaged finger of her left hand which showed bruises. Mrs. Sarah Hattrick, county jail matron, who examined Mrs. Phillips, said she had scratches on her legs and on the backs of her hands.

With a face like a graven image, she read a note from her husband in which he urged her to return to Los Angeles. She did not change her expression or make any comment.

Every musician in Nebraska will be welcome and will be urged to attend. Watch for the date, and attend the meeting to arrange the picnic and make suggestions. It is hoped that the picnic can take place sometime the middle of August.

Madame de Vilmar will sing at the 11 o'clock service at the Trinity M. E. church. Her number will be Gounoud's "O Divine Redeemer."

"That in such a great country as the United States, a country of unlimited wealth, splendid achievements and tremendous possibilities, the government does not take a serious interest in the promotion of arts is a matter of surprise to many foreign artists who come here," said Josef Lhevinne in an article in the last issue of the Musical Courier.

"Generally, when I speak of this to Americans they listen courteously but with little apparent interest," continued the great pianist. "Why is this so? I believe it is because the aims and accomplishments of a national conservatory are not understood. And also because it is feared that such an institution, subsidized by the government would fall under political control, with the result that its usefulness would be nullified.

"As for the political danger that seems too light to be given serious consideration."

Mr. Lhevinne spoke of the national conservatories of Europe for every large European country has a national conservatory, and some a number of them. These conservatories set a standard of musicianship of so high and inflevible a quality and this standard is so universally recognized, that no musician can succeed in Europe who has not attained it.

The national conservatory of Russia was established in 1863 with Anton Rubenstein as director. Later a second conservatory was opened in Moscow. When the one at Petrograd was opened there were few great musicians in Russia, and therefore few capable of being teachers. So, in order to have an adequate staff it was ecessary to appoint foreigners. In this way the Russians began slowly to obtain the best musical education. After about twenty-five years a large porportion of the conservatory staff was composed of native teachers, though it has never been the policy to appoint a teacher simply because he was a Russian.

Every student before entering the master classes is obliged to pass through a most difficult technical examination. The course includes, in addition to the regular lessons in whatever branch of the art the student is specializing, two years of ear training and theory; then two years of harmony; and for all but those expecting to become composers, one year of counterpoint and orchestration. For composers this one year is increased to three. The conservatory course is nine years for pupils intending to become professional pianists, violinists or cellists; eight for teachrs; and five for singers and wind instrument players.

The fees are so moderate that the student can quietly develop his art without the drawback of financial anxiety. For those unable to pay a fee scholarships are provided by wealthy citizens.

Mr. Lhevinne believes that if the United States had a national conservatory it would not only assure to the country an increase, year by year, of competent musicians, but it would do away with the abnormal custom of Americans going to Europe to study.

Fred Shannon of Fairbury, a song writer, has written a new song, "When Love Will Live Anew," which with the permission of the first lady of the state will be dedicated to her. Copies of the song will soon be in circulation. This is only one of many songs which are being written by the "Song Writers of the United States," to be dedicated to the first ladies of the states and the state selling the greatest number of copies will rank its lady above all others. Mr. Shannon will turn over a percent of the sale of his song to the American Legion.

New York's professional and amateur musicians are asked to offer their services to further a plan to hold concerts regularly in the municipal hospitals this summer. These concerts will be given under the direction of the music committee of the New York City visiting committee of the State Charities Aid association.

The committee calls attention to the fact that during the war the therapeutic value of music became well recognized and quotes Dr. Alexander Lambert of Bellevue Hospital as saying that he had found music of the greatest value in breaking the long tedium of the day.

The New York City visiting committee, of which the music committee is a part, consists of 200 citizens of means who have legal rights of entrance to the hospitals and almshouse of New York to aid the work of the authorities for the well-being of the patients.

It is not only as submarine chasers that men with musical ears and training excel, according to Henry T. Fink in the New York Evening Post. Ex-President Eliot of Harvard says that "music, rightly taught is the best mind trainer on the list." We should have more of the practical subjects like music and drawing and less grammar and arithmetic."

To prove that music really is a fine mind trainer, T. P. Giddings of Minneapolis, in an article on "Instrumental Music in Schools," relates that Prof. Henneman of St. Louis has received a letter from an old friend in England who is at the head of the music department of Magdalen College, Oxford university: "All the music of Oxford university is taught in this college, which is very old and wealthy, and many prizzes and scholarships are offered to its stuqents. Of these a few are in music, but most in other branches. This letter contained the following proof of President Eliot's statement quoted above: 'Ten per cent of the students of Magdalen college take music. Ninety per cent do not. The ten per cent taking music also take 75 per cent of all those prizes and scholarships; in all departments, mind you. The 90 per cent who do not take music are contented with, the remaining 25 per cent of the prizes and scholarships. This rather amazing record has been the average for the last thirty years."

Hear! Hear! ye musical supervisors of the schools of this country, who have been coming into so much prominence of late. That Magdalen college argument, or, rather, those Magdalen college facts, are of unspeakable importance to you when you want to convince skeptics of the practical value of music in schools. Mind training is the object of education in schools, and if music is the best mind trainer, it ought to be honored as such and much more time ought to be given to it than is now allowed.

"Just a Matter of Business" Says Jack Payne Who Dives 110 Feet Into Small, Shallow Tank

BY JESSIE WATSON

"No, I don't get any thrill," said Capt. Jack Payne, dare-devil diver who has been doing a sensational act at Capital Beach diving 110 feet, through a brilliant explosion of fireworks and blazing gasoline, into a tank twelve feet in diameter and four feet deep.

This statement was made in an interview given at the office of the Lincoln Star. A man of quiet and unassuming appearance—one would hardly imagine that this could be the one who does the daring feats that thrill thousands. He is of medium height and sturdy, muscular build. Idol of the multitudes that he is, his appearance is in striking contrast to the matinee idol type. He is 28 years old and looks neither older or younger. He presents a wholesome, healthy appearance and his clear brown eyes bespeaks a stadiness of purpose that could not found in the person who lives on the excitement of the hour.

"What are your sensations when you make your dive," Captain Payne was asked.

"I don't get any sensation out of it," he replied. "It is all a matter of business with me. You see, these dare-devils who do such feats as climbing high buildings or doing high diving have an entirely different feeling from the person who rides in a roller coaster. When a person rides in a roller coaster he is keyed up to a high nervous tension and gets his pleasure from the excitement. It would not do for a dare-devil to be nervous. He is always calm and does his feats in a clear-headed, business-like way."

Suffer from Injuries

"Don't you ever get rather unnerved at times when you are not doing your feats but are thinking about them?"

"No, I don't," he replied simply, and the words rang genuine in face of the fact that in the past ten years Captain Payne has fractured one arm one wrist, one collar bone and once his backbone, and has had his hair singed.

"What do you think about on your way down when you are making a dive?"

"I do my thinking when I am ready to leave the ladder because all depends on the way I leave the ladder." A variation of 1 inch at the starting point would throw the diver off 5 feet by the time he reached the tank. Thus a 1-inch miscalculation when he were aiming to strike the center of the tank would take him 5 feet from the center or at the very edge. It might make him strike the edge of the tank. The tank itself is filled with water but there is burning gasoline all round the edge and the blaze completely covers the tank. Captain Payne turns one somersault while going through the air and another the moment he strikes the water. The manner in which he strikes the water prevents him from hitting the bottom of the tank.

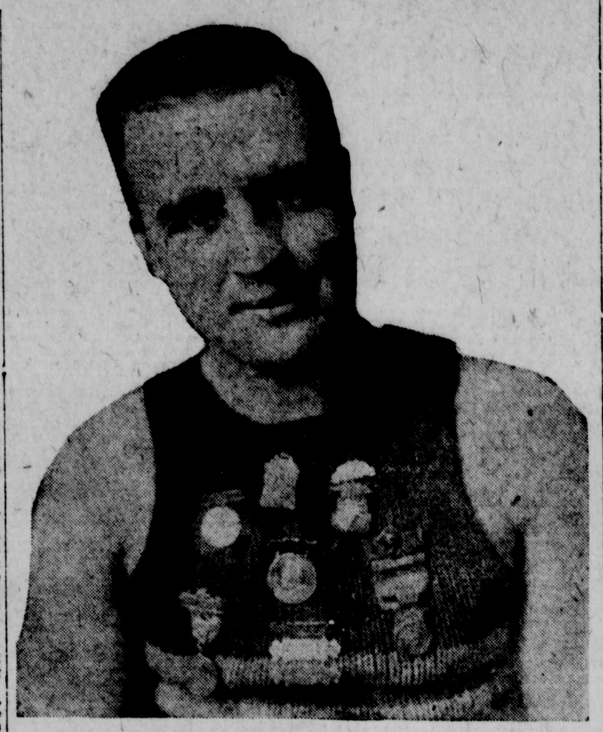

Dive is Exacting

A trained eye and a trained mind that at a guess can calculate distance with mathematical accuracy and muscles trained to act accordingly are required for this feat. A further complication is the wind. While going through the air a distance of 110 feet a diver could easily be carried wide of his mark by a hard wind. Captain Payne does not stop for wind but he estimates how far the wind will carry him and dives toward it accordingly. He often starts out a half an inch to an inch in the direction of the wind so that when it carries him back in the other direction it will not take him beyond the edge of the tank.

Captain Payne's career began when as a boy he won prizes for amateur swimming feats. He always had been interested in out-of-door sports and he spent a great deal of time in the water. When on duty as life guard at Clear Lake, Minn., his high diving attracted the attention of the manager of the Rice and Dore's Great Water Circus. As a result he signed a contract with that company. He went with the water circus for three years and in that time travelled through thirty states. Then he started out with an act of his own, and for the past seven years he has been appearing at large parks, fairs and celebrations.

In 1914 he made the most sensational dive that had ever been successfully made from a bridge. This was at Niagara Falls from the upmost girder of Niagara bridge. He made a head foremost dive of 142 feet into Niagara river. In 1916 from the Smithfield bridge at Pittsburgh he did a front, one and a half dive feet. In the same year at Wheeling, W. Va., he maue the highest back somersault dive on record, a jump of 126 feet.

Captain Payne usually spends his winter months in California and Florida. Next winter he will go to Santo Domingo and to Havana Cuba.

Captain Jack Payne, the dare-devil diver, who thrilled hundreds of spectators at Capital Beach on the Fourth of July and since then by taking his life in his hands in a 110 feet plunge through fireworks and blazing gasoline into a tank of water 4 feet deep. This 28-year-old dare-devil, who says that his act is a calm matter of business to him, has won a large number of important medals.

Soldier Who Lost Foot in Accident Now Fitting Self For a New Trade

Running a passenger elevator in one of Lincoln's large buildings is a sturdy young chap named Verne Miller. In addition to carrying people up and down through long, hot hours each day, he is taking a course in schooling which will ultimately fit him for a responsible position in life. He is a veteran of the world war, with a creditable record and served in France. He has only one foot. The story of Miller taking up educational work here is a credit to him and a remarkable example of the spirit of helpfulness and cooperation actuating several important Nebraska agencies.

When Miller was honorably discharged from the army, he was in perfect physical condition. His people live at Tyron, and he returned there and took up his old life on the ranch. A short time later, while breaking a vicious broncho, he was thrown and his ankle broken. Either the fracture was not properly cared for or for some other reason, infection set in, and the foot had to be amputated.

Used to outdoor activities all his life, with only an ordinary education and no aptitude for a business career, it seemed as though his usefulness was ended just when it appeared most promising. He was badly discouraged.

It was at this time his friends stirred themselves into action in his behalf. A drastic change in Verne's mode of living was necessary.

No Aid From U. S.

Officers of the Tyron post of the American legion of which Miller is a member, wrote to the war department at Washington. They were turned down. They took it up with influential friends, but the government officials firmly stood by their position, that since Miller had been discharged in good health the government could not be held responsible for later accidents.

The local Red Cross took up the fight. They communicated with their national officers at the national capital, but they, too, ran into the same stone wall in dealing with the Veterans Bureau.

But clear off in Washington the Red Cross officials knew of something else which the McPherson county people had forgotten, or had not clearly understood. This was that the state of Nebraska had appropriated a fund and established an agency for just such cases. They communicated with the state board of vocational education.

Director C. A. Fulmer wrote to Verne Miller and found that he was anxious and willing to rehabilitate himself, to fit himself for a new trade in life. But the statutes require that a person starting out in such a course must finish it. This must be assured before the appropriation is available.

Y. M. C. A. Plays Part

Here the Lincoln Y. M. C. A. entered the case. Appealed to by Dr. Fulmer, the "Y" officers readily undertook to establish beyond a doubt that Miller fully intended to stick to his schooling until he completed his course. This they did through the Tyron Legion and Red Cross branch.

In Lincoln Miller was established in the association building, with his tuition and school expenses paid and only his personal expenses to worry about. He was found to be willing and capable of light work, and the elevator job was found for him.

Last week General Secretary Luke received two checks from Tyron for the same amount. Together they cover the cost of Miller's first months' living expenses. They were from his home town American legion post and Red Cross. They have insisted that his maintenance shall be paid by his own friends and people, so that he can have what he earns for outside expenses and the little luxuries so necessary to a young man in school.

WONDERFUL ALMA RUBENS IN "FIND THE WOMAN" AT THE RIALTO

What chance has a lovely woman in a battle with New York—its white lights, its police, and its cold world of high society? "Find the Woman," a new Cosmopolitan Paramount Production, is undoubtedly the most baffling mystery picture ever produced because up to almost the last foot of film the real murderer, who has been sought for weeks by the police, is not known to the spectators. Thrill succeeds thrill as the finger of suspicion is pointed now at this girl, now at that. You will grip the sides of your seat through the fast moving drama that Arthur Somers Roche wrote. Not only are there startling adventures, daring escapes and extraordinary complications in "Find the Woman," but the picture also presents two delightful love stories. Miss Alma Rubens is supported by Harrison Ford and a splendid cast of players; "Mile a Minute Mary" a dandy comedy that will make your heart beat faster; Pathe News, Topics and Travelogue and the added attraction, C. C. Wiles, presenting "Hammers of Harmony and Syncopation." Music by Conductor Jean L. Schaefer and his Symphony Players and Wilber R. Chenowith, organist.

Coming the last half of the week, Lois Weber's tremendous production, "The Blot," a great American drama that will open the door to your conscience.

JACK HOLT AND BEBE DANIELS IN "NORTH OF THE RIO GRANDE," COLONIAL

Love with a price on its head—love riding like the wind over burning sands and fighting through to happiness amid the western hills—a two-star romance with 100 exhilirating thrills. Do you want to take one hour and do down to Arizona and live a glorious, care free life among people of the open spaces? Yes, a rollicking, reckless life with the cows and horses and bad men? Such an opportunity will be yours this week at the Colonial, when the Paramount picture, "North of the Rio Grande," will receive its initial presentation at this theatre. Jack Holt and Bebe Daniels co-star in the picture and they give mighty pleasing performances. The story is dramatic and the settings are the superlative in picturesqueness. We recommend this photoplay to you as one of the finest epics of the west to be screened at this theatre, and we are sure you will find it attractive. "Gymnasium Jim" a new Sennett comedy, filled with thrills and loaded with laughs. "A Day in the Wilds," a new Bob and Bill adventure and the Colonial News Weekly.

WILLIAM FARNUM IN "SHACKLES OF GOLD."

William Farnum puts up a terrific fight for love and revenge in his latest William Fox picture, "Shackles of Gold," which will be at the Strand theatre Monday for a three days run.

"Shackles of Gold" is based on Henri Bernstin's great stage success, "Samson." In the picture Farnum rises from the position of dock laborer to that of millionaire and weds a girl whose parents—social climbers—need his money. The girl, however, refuses to carry out her contract, telling him flatly that she married him only because of her parents. After persistently spurning him as her husband, she arouses his deadly ire by going secretly to a party with another man. Farnum in his wrath breaks the stock market in order to break the man who had tempted his wife—and he breaks himself in addition; but in the end he achieves what he fought for—a return of his love.

Answers to Movie Fans

Dear Movie Editor—This is the first time I have written to you, although I take great interest in your columns. It must be quite romantic to know all you do about the different stars and to also have their pictures.

Now I am going to bother you with questions you've probably answered hundreds of times. I've heard that Dick Barthelmess lisps. Is that really so? How long has Dick been married?

Could you please give me the cast of "The Man from Home?" I thought that was a wonderful production.

Thanking you for your trouble, BETTY.

I have never heard Dick lisp. He has been married to Mary Hay about two years.

Following is the "Man From Home" cast: "Daniel Forbes Pike," James Kirkwood; "Genevieve Granger Simpson," Anne Q. Nilsson; "Horace Granger-Simpson," Geoffrey Kerr; "Prince Giovanni Chairmonte," Norman Kerry; "Princess Sabina Chairmonte," Dorothy Cuming; "Ribiere," Jose Rubens; "Fauvina Ribiere," Annette Bensen; "The King," John Miltern; "Secretary to the King," Clifford Grey.

Dear Movie Editor—Just received the pictures this noon, and wish to thank you very much, for they are just what I needed for my new movie book. Couldn't you tell me some new way to make a new movie book, or doesn't that come in your line of work? I hope it does, for I don't know any way to make one, except a plain scrap book one. Will you please tell me the addresses of the following: Dorothy Dalton, Mary MacLaren and Rodolph Valentino? Thanking you for all the trouble I have caused you, I remain, THE BOBBED HAIR GIRL, Fairbury, Neb.

You might be interested in a clever little book of motion picture stars that one girl I know made. She took an old album and cut the pictures down to fit the places that are made for photographs, and then wrote a description of the star, her address, and every thing else that she knew of interest about her, under the picture. Perhaps some of the other girls who have books of motion picture stars, might like to write in and tell us how they have fixed their books.

Address Dorothy Dalton in care of Famous Players-Lasky, Hollywood, Cal..; Mary MacLean at 127 No. Manhatten Place, Los Angeles, and Rodolph at 7139 Hollywood Blvd., Los Angeles, Cal.

Dear Movie Editor—What is Rodolph Valentino's address? I think he is just wonderful. Dorothy Dalton is a good leading lady for him. Perhaps some of the other fans think I am mistaken, but that is only my decision. When will "Blood and Sand" be released? I can hardly wait until it comes to Lincoln. One thing I don't like about Dorothy Dalton is her bobbed hair. I think she made a mistake. What is her next picture and who will play opposite her?

How old is Marion Davies? Is she married and if so to whom? What is her next picture and who will play with her. If you have any pictures of her I would be very glad to have one. M. H. R.

Address Mr. Valentino at 7139 Hollywood Blvd., Los Angeles. "Blood and Sand" will not be released until September 11, so it will probably be some time before we see it here. Dorothy Dalton's next picture is "On the High Seas," and Jack Holt will be featured with her. She certainly isn't the type that bobbed hair was designed for, but her bobbed hair makes her more fitted for the sea roles that she has been playing, I think.

Marion Davies was born in 1898, and is still single. She is making "When Knighthood was in Flower" with Forrest Stanley as the gallant knight. I have mailed you a picture of the young lady.

Dear Movie Editor—To settle a bet, I have turned to you. Please tell me the cast of "The Conquering Power" and "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." If you can not give me the entire cast, please tell me the leading lady's name. Rodolph Valentino was the leading man. Thank you, A NEW FAN.

"The Conquering Power" cast is: "Eugenie Grandet," Alice Terry; "Charles Grandet," Rodolph Valentino; "Victor Grandet," Eric Mayne; "Pere Grandet," Ralph Lewis; "His wife," Edna Demaury; "Notary Crouchot," Edward Connelly; "His Son," Geoge Atkinson; "The Abbe," Willard Lee Hall; "M. Des Grassins," Mark Fenton; "Nanon," Mary Hearn; "Adolph," Ward Wing.

The principal characters in "The Four Horsemen" were: "Huho Desnoyers," Rodolph Valentino; "Marguerite Laurier," Alice Terry; "Marcelo Des Noyers," Joseph Swickard; "Karl Von Hartrott," Alan Hale; "Elena," Mable Van Buren; "Tchernoff," Nigel De Brulier; "Laurier," John Sainpolis; "Chichi," Virginia Warwick; "Capt. Von Hartrott," Stuart Holmes; "Prof. Von Hartrott," Henry Klaus; "Georgette," Kathleen Key; "Lieut. Col. Von Richthoffen," Wallace Beery; "French Butcher," Bull Montana; "Dancer," Beatrice Dominquez.

Dear Movie Editor—I have seen "Moran of the Lady Letty." I think it was just wonderful. Could you please give me some information concerning Dorothy Dalton? Have you any pictures of her, for I would be glad to have one in my movie book that I am making. Also one of Mabel Normand. What is Dorothy Dalton's address? Will the stars send pictures out? I have written to some, but have received no answer or pictures either. AN OLD FAN.

Dorothy was born in Chicago and educated there at Sacred Heart Convent. She began her stage career in support of Virginia Harned in stock. She played in vaudeville on the Keith Circuit for some time and made her screen debut in "The Disciple." She is five feet three inches tall and has dark hair and gray eyes. Address her at Famous Players-Lasky studio, Hollywood, Cal.

Not all of the stars mail their photographs out, but the majority of them do. Did you remember to send sufficient postage to cover mailing expenses when you wrote? You will be much more apt to receive the pictures.

Dear Movie Editor — Will you please tell me the addresses, color of eyes and hair, and if married and to whom of Gloria Swanson, Thomas Meighan, Kathryn MacDonald, Lois Wilson, Wallace Reid and Rodolph Valentino? Have you a picture of Kathryn MacDonald? If so, I would appreciate very much to have one. I received a picture you sent me and thank you ever so many times.

Will you please give me the cast of "Fool's Paradise?" Also some information concerning Marion Davies. How is May McAvoy's name pronounced? Is the "A" long or short, and is the first syllable brought out stronger than the last or not. Thanking you in advance, I remain, BILLIE.

Address Gloria Swanson, Lois Wilson, Thomas Meighan and Wallace Reid all at the Lasky studio, Hollywood, Cal. Gloria has brown hair and blue eyes. She is married, or was married, to Herbert Sanborn.

Mr. Meighan has black hair and eyes and is the husband of Frances Ring. Wallace Reid's hair is black and he has blue eyes. Dorothy Davenport is Mrs. Wallace Reid. Lois Wilson is single and has brown hair and hazel eyes. Kathryn MacDonald has been married, but is single at the present writing. She has blond hair and blue eyes and lives at 904 Girard St, Los Angeles, Cal. Rodolph Valentino is married to Winifred Hudnut, and also to Jean Acker until next January, and has dark I have no pictures of Miss MacDonald.

The cast of "Fool's Paradise" is: "Poll Patchoull," Dorothy Dalton; "Rosa Duchene," Mildred Harris; "Arthur Phelps," Conrad Nagel; "John Roderiquez," Theodore Kosloff; "Prince Talaat-Noi," John Davidson; "Samaran," His Chief wife; "Julia Fay; "Manuel," Clarence Burton; "Briggs," Guy Oliver; "Kay," Kamuela Searles; "Girda," Jacqueline Logan.

Marion Davies was born in Brooklyn, N. Y. and attended the convent of the Sacred Heart, at Hastings-on-the-Hudson. Her first appearance on the stage was in "Chin-Chin" where her beauty attracted the attention of Howard Chandler Christy and he painted her as "Morning." She also posed for Harrison Fisher, Penrhyn Stanlaws, Montgomery Flagg, and Hamilton King. She made her screen debut in "Runaway Romany," for which she also wrote the scenario and titles. She has golden hair and blue eyes and is an accomplished sportwoman.

Pronouce McAvoy with a short "a" and accent on the first syllable.

Dear Movie Editor—Can you please give me the cast for "Worlds Apart" featuring Eugene O'Brien? What part did Rodolph Valentino take in it? I heard to-day that he had a minor part in it. Thanks very much, LUCILLE.

The P. A. for Selznick pictures says: "Rodolph Valenting appeared in support of Eugene O'Brien in "Worlds Apart," a Selznick production, made two years ago." He does not, however, appear in the cast of the picture, so his role was evidently a small one. If you ever see the picture you will no doubt recognize the popular leading man. The cast for "Worlds Apart" is: "Huga Ledyard," Eugen O'Brien; "Elinor Ashe," Olive Tell; "Peter Lester," William H. Tooker; "Marcia Marshall," Florence Billings; "Hartley Marshall," Arthur Housman; "Phyllis Leigh," Louise Prussing; "Ten Eyck," Warren Cook.

Dear Movie Editor—May I have a little space in your interesting column for some questions, please? Will you give me the addresses of the following: Betty Compson, Anita Stewart, Owen Moore, Mae Murray, Madge Kennedy, Mary Miles Minter, Billie Burke, Corinne Griffith and Elaine Hammerstein? These are my favorites. Would you send me their pictures, one or two of them? I am movie crazy. How can one join the movies and get a good place if one has a liking and talent for acting. I am a blonde and am as good-looking as some of the stars. Thanking you for the space I have taken up, I remain, BOBBED HAIRED BLONDE. University Place.

Address Betty Compson and Mary Miles Minter in care of the Famous Players-Lasky, Hollywood, Cal.; Billie Burke and Mae Murray in care of Famous Players-Lasky, New York City; Elaine Hammerstein and Owen Moore in care of Selznick Pictures Corp. New York City; Anita Stewart in care of her own company, at either Los Angeles or New York; Corinne Griffith in care of Vitagraph, Brooklyn, N. Y. and Madge Kennedy at the Kenma Corporation studio, New York City.

According to Miss Bijou Fernandez, special studio representative for Goldwyn, the following are some of the rules which she follows in her search for "new faces" for the screen.

"For women, the primary requisites are Height—not over five feet five inches. Weight—Slimness is essential, because the screen has a tendency to make a person appear plumper than is really the case. Ankles and wrists—it is important for women particularly to have small well shaped ankles and wrists. It is absolutely necessary to be able to walk gracefully. Features — Should be well-shaped, of course, and a round face with no prominent boney structure is best. Eyes—very light blue or gray eyes are an almost unsurmountable barrier to success on the screen. Dark eyes should be widely spaced. Teeth—Good teeth are essential. Hair—The color is not so important to success. Red and black both photograph black. Blonde hair is best for ingenues. It is taken for granted that the profile and full face is good. A bad profile is hopeless."

Miss Fernandez says, however, that personality and intelligence are the two biggest assets, and twenty-five is the limit so far as age is concerned. Out of over two thousand men and women whom Miss Fernandez has examined for Goldwyn during the fast six months, there were very few who came any where near up to specifications. So there you are. You may be talented and ambitious, but it isn't the easiest thing in the world just now to get into the movies. There are so many girls, whose friends tell them they are prettier than the movie stars, and who probably are in some respects, who want to get into the movies that the market is overflooded.

GRETCHEN, Clay Center, Neb.—I have no smaller pictures than those I sent you. They all come the same size.

WAITING EAGERLY—You neglected to send your address. If you will send it together with a stamp to cover postage, I will send you pictures of Wallace Reid and Rodolph Valentino as soon as I get some.

EDITH, Humboldt, Neb.—I mailed you pictures of Lila Lee and Wallace Reid. The others I did not have, but you may address Mary Miles Minter in care of Famous Players-Lasky, Hollywood, Cal.; Dorothy Gish, Griffith studio, Namaroneck, N. Y.; Richard Barthelmess, Lambs Club, New York City, and Douglas Fairbanks at his own studio, Hollywood, Cal.

Screen Siftings

Jack Giddings has been engaged to play the part of Slade in Rodolph Valentino's new Paramount Picture, "The Young Rajah," and one of the little things he will have to do will be a fall of forty-feet from a window.

The little girls can all look forward to having a Mary Pickford for next Christmas, since Mary has gone into the doll business to manufacture toy replicas of herself. It is $500,000 will be invested in the business and that every effort will be made to have the new dolls ready for the Christmas market.

Jackie Coogan is to have a new director for his fifth starring picture. He is E. Mason Hopper, formerly with Goldwyn Film Corporation. The title of Jackie's latest "effort" has not been announced, but the picture is an original story. Jackie's "Oliver Twist" will be released in September.

Mayme Kelso, well-known character woman of the films has been added to the cast of "Clarence," a William De Mille production in which Wallace Reid, Agnes Ayres and May McAvoy play the leading roles.

Falling down snow-covered mountains, climbing peaks, driving dog teams and walking miles in knee deep snow are some of the things Alma Ruebens did for the sake of her art during the six weeks she spent up north in Canada while filming scenes for "The Valley of Silent Men."

The work of editing more than seventy reels of material for "Lorna Done" has been completed for "Lorna picture has been cut to eight reels. The screen version of the historical classic was filmed under the direction of Maurice Tourneur and the cast is headed by Madge Bellamy, John Bowers and Frank Keenan. The scenes of the picture were taken an and around the Ince studios, a complete Devon Village having been constructed in a valley in the Hills around Culver City for the Exmoor Doone Village scenes.

Work was started on "The Voice From the Minaret," by Robert Hichens which Norma Talmadge is making with Eugene O'Brien and Edwin Stevens as members of her supporting cast. Among the sets that are being constructed are some representing Bombay, Damascus and London. Frank Lloyd is directing "The Voice From the Minaret."

"Whiskers," a wire-haired fox terrier and the bride of Charles Ray's life, won a first prize, two seconds and a fourth prize at the second annual dog show of the Los Angeles Kennel club.

Does it take any of the thrill out of the movies for you to know how some of the scenes are made? A complete cross section of a modern ocean liner was built at the Paramount studio for the fire and sinking scenes in "On the High Seas" in which Dorothy Dalton is playing the heroine. The ship structure was so arranged that it would list to one side and ship water, as if about to sink. It was equipped with cabins, life boats and other deck features. In a haze of smoke the panicky passengers were put into the lifeboats and lowered to the water in the immense studio tank.

Florence Roberts, well-known stage star, and her husband, Frederick Vogeding, noted Dutch actor, have been added to the cast of "Gimme," which Rupert Hughes is now directing for Goldwyn. The story was written by Mr. and Mrs. Hughes, and Helene Chadwick and Gaston Glass are the featured players.

Pola Negri, the European star who played in "Passion," "Gypsy Blood" and other imported pictures, is coming to this country next month to make a picture for Paramount, according to a statement made by Jesse L. Lasky of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Two three-year old actresses have important roles in William Farnum's forthcoming picture, "Moonshine Valley." One is little Dawn O'Day, and the other is Jeannie, a young collie. The two are great pals.

"Exit the Vamp" is all wrong. Theda Bara is going to make a picture for Seiznick.

The Novak sisters will appear on the screen together for the first time in "The Rock of Ages," which Jane will star in following the completion of "Thelma" upon which she is now working. Eva, Jane's young sister has been especially engaged to appear as her sister's chief support.

Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler Oakman are building a new Colonial home in the fashionable Beverly Hills district near Los Angeles, Cal. Mrs. Oakman is known professionally as Priscilla Dean.

Blanche Sweet has been chosen for the leading role in Metro's "Quincy Adams Sawyer," which Clarence Badger will direct. This is Miss Sweet's first work before the camera since her marriage to Marshal Neilan.

Katherine MacDonald says that the report of her engagement to Jack Morrill, a wealthy young clubman, is just another press agent story.

House Peters has been signed by Goldwyn to play the role of Captain Blackbird in the picture that R. A. Walsh is making for that company from Carey Wilson's story. Other members of the cast are Antonio Moreno, Rosemary Theby, William V. Mong, George Siegmann and Myrtle Lind.

Everybody is wondering in just what kind of a role Theda Bara will return to the motion picture public. Will she or will she not endeavor to "vamp" her way back? Myron Selznick, however, is silent as to what kind of a role he intends to have his new star play.

Max Lindler has gone to France where he expects to devote a year to film a picture at his new studios at Nice, France. Mr. Linder's last picture made here was "The Three Must Get Theirs," a burlesque on the Fairbanks "Three Musketeers."

The latest report is that Jack Pickford and Marilynn Miller are to be married August 1 and that Miss Miller will cross the continent to California where the wedding will take place at the Pickford home.

Oliver Morosco is contemplating a modernized version of "Sis Hopkins" set to music.

Pauline Garon, who played lead with Richard Barthelmess in "Sonny," is now in Canada at work on an Ernest Shipman production.

Virginia Valli and Reginald Denny will appear in Universal's production of Jack London's celebrated prize fighting story, "The Abysmal Brute."

"The Men of Zanzibar," William Russell's latest picture for William Fox, was the first work of fiction produced by Richard Harding Davis, to be adapted to the screen since his death four years ago.

According to a recent announcement, Sessue Hayakawa will be starred in a stage play next season by the Shuberts. Fred De Gressac is writing the play.

John Gilbert is playing his first dual role in "Minor First,' a screen adaptation of George Gibbs' "The Splendid Outcast."

Red La Rocque, popular leading man on the screen, has just completed work in "What's Wrong With the Woman " under the direction of R. William Neill.

The Modern Crusoe

Practically all the beaches of southern California have provided scenes for Universal's great chapter play based on Robinson Crusoe's career. Harry Myers, the star, has, however, discovered very many more than one man's footprints in the sand and some not of the mascular gender.

On With the Dance

There's a new Constance Talmadge fox-trot.

But the old gavotte is good enough for Norma—at least in "The Eternal Flame," adapted from Balzac's "Duchess of Langeais." One ballroom scene reproduces the ballroom of the Versailles palace. Eight hundred costumes were made for gavoteers in this one scene.

"Any old duds and any old place will do for my fox-trot," says Constance.

Father Hillaire—Alec B. Francis.
John Hannon, Val's father—Will R. Walling.

On the immense ranch of Col. Haddington, there is feasting in celebration of the twin racers, Comet and Meteor. At Santa Dolores, nearby where Father Hilliare ministers to his small flock, several outlaws raid the village on the pretense of collecting back taxes. Father Hillaire sends to Col. Haddington for help, and Bob responds at once at the head of a troop of merry cowboys.

In their absence, two masked riders appear at the Haddington ranch, and attempt to steal the twin horses. Col. Haddington resists and is shot down just as Bob returns to the ranch. The thieves escape with Meteor, despite Bob's efforts to capture them. The Colonel dies and Bob swears vengeance upon his assassin. The southern authorities confiscate Bob's property and he becomes a law unto himself.

He rides Comet in search of Meteor. Under the name of Bob Veltastrie, he wars upon injustice of every kind.

In Arizona, news comes to Santa Leandra that the "Black Rustler" is running off cattle through Blind Trail pass. Bob is suspected of being the rustler. At Father Hillaire's mission, Val Hannon, daughter of John Hannon, a rancher, meets Bob. The two become interested in each other and Bob goes to Arizona as ranchers meet at Hannon's to discuss ways and means of capturing the Black Rustler.

But the excitement is far from over for Bob. He cleans out a saloon and wins a girl who he immediately releases, and finds himself in a peck of trouble for being suspected as the Black Rustler, but Val sticks to him through thick and thin, and in the end, the two of them go through some mighty deep water before things are cleared for Bob.

"FIND THE WOMAN"
Sophie Carey—Alma Rubens.
Clancy Deane—Eileen Huban.
Judge Walbrough—George MacQuarrie.
Phillip Vandevent—Harrison Ford.
Don Carey—Henry Sedley.
Fay Weber—Ethel Duray.
Marc Weber—Norman Kerry.
Morris Beiner—Arthur Donaldson.
Detective Spofford—Sydney Deane.

Sophie Carey the popular concert singer, is aghast to learn that her friendly letters to Judge Walbrough have been stolen by a blackmailer. Sophie is married and she fears, that though innocent the letters might be, they would possible cause trouble and place her in a very peculiar situation.

Judge Walbrough tells her about the letters at a dinner party at the hotel one evening. In the same dining room is Clancy Deane, a country girl in New York who is trying to make her way on the stage. Clancy is with Marc and Fay Weber, new friends. As they are eating, the Webers are called to the lobby where they are met by Max Breiner, a theatrical man, who tells them that he has the letters and that he wants them to help him get money from Sophie and Judge Walbrough. They refuse and a fight follows and Marc and Fay escape in a taxi.

A waiter presents the check to the waiting Clancy, who does not have enough money to pay it. Assistant District Attorney Vandevent, comes to the rescue, lends her the money and gives her his card.

The next day Clancy goes to Breiner's office to see if he can place her in a production. She gives the name that she has chosen for the stage, that of Florine Ladue, and gives the name of the hotel at which she and the Webers are staying. Breiner thinks that she is a spy for the Webers, and locking the door starts after her. He trips over a desk, hits his head and falls unconscious. Clancy starts out of the door, but hearing someone approach, she climbs out on the fire escape and gets away.

The next day she learns to her horror that Breiner was stabbed to death, and that the authorities are looking for a woman. She goes to Vandevent's office to tell him what she knows of the affair. When she reaches the place she finds Sophie there and hears Vandevent telling her about the crime, showing her a piece of a woman's dress that was found. Sophie recognizes the torn material as part of one of her frocks and she faints.

Clancy helps Sophie home, and the two become good friends, Sophie inviting Clancy to remain as her companion. Sophie's husband, Don Carey, a good-for-nothing drunkard her been away from home for some time, presumably on a spree.

Sophie gives a party and lends Clancy a dress for it. A detective who is employed to untangle the Breiner mystery, sees Clancy in the dress, and also sees that it matches the torn piece that was found in Briener's hand. The detective chases Clancy who gets away.

This is not the end of the story by any means, a great many exciting things happen before the close of one of the foremost pictures on the screen today, incidentally the love affair between Vandevent and Clancy progresses, but Vandevent is the prosecuting attorney and must do his duty in spite of love.

"THE BLOT"
Professor Griggs — Philip Hubbard.
His wife—Margaret McWade.
His daughter—Claire Windsor.
His pupil—Louis Calhern.
The other girl—Marie Walcamp.

The story opens in the class room of a big college. Prof. Griggs cannot help showing his discouragement over the attitude of some of the members of his class numbered among which are three rich men's sons, Phil West, Bert Gareth and Walter Lucas.

At their years these three boys are confirmed "Rounders" and followers of the path of least resistance. To them a pretty girl and a bottle of wine means much more than a text book and an examination paper. At the opening of the picture these three are are seen distracting the attention of others in the class and are engaging in distrubing foolery while the professor endeavors to continue his work.

The professor's appeal for courtesy in his classes so impresses one of the members, Phil West, that he urges his other two companions after the class to listen and pay attention to the professor's plea, but they decline to listen, and take Phil to a room that has been fixed up for a party, and show him some illicit liquor that has cost more per bottle than Grigg's salary for a whole week.

The scene shifts to the home of Professor Grigg. Mrs. Grigg is seen sitting at a window watching Gus Olsen, a foreign-born shoe maker and their next door neighbor, drive proudly up to his home in a new automobile. Olsen is a shoemaker, who, Mrs. Griggs says, makes $100 a week manufacturing shoes that ruin the feet of every woman who wears them.

Mrs. Olsen, wife of Gus, is frankly hostile to Mrs. Griggs, calling the family "stuck up" and all that but delights in tormenting Mrs. Griggs preparing meager meals in her kitchen, by placing in her own kitchen window delicacies which she has prepared for her own family.

Amelia, the daughter of the Grigg's household, is a clerk in the public library. Phil West has long been an admirer of Amelia's, but has made no progress because he is the son of a very rich man.

But Phil's time comes, and in the meanwhile, the story grows intensely interesting.

Younger Set to Raise Scale of Movie Scenarios

The younger generation—made up of youngsters who cannot remember of the first motion picture they saw—will be showing the world new things in pictures before many years have passes, according to Sam Wood, director of Paramount pictures.

I will prophesy that within five years we will have young men—and women, too—in the industry who will conveive their plots, ideas, develop the scenario, supervise the building of sets and act as the guiding mind for the directors. Many of them will be sole directors of their plays from the first germ of the idea to the last cutting in the projection room. And these people the picture industry will say, 'The world is yours.' It wont be able to say anything else because after all, the genius of story telling is the very heart and soul of motion pictures.

"I am looking to the younger generation to give us exactly that sort of story creation. There are youngsters now in this ages-old game of writing who can't remember the first picture they saw. Pictures have always been a part of their lives, and story telling by pictures is going to be such a normal state of affairs that they will do it instinctively.

Need New Ideas.

"The writers who will formulate their ideas for stories and translate them into picture form will save us thousands of dollars. It will be only good business judgment to pay them a good share of the money they save. "Take as an example the picture which Gloria Swanson has just finished, 'Her Gilded Cage,' based on a play by Anna Nichols. When Miss Nichols took her play to a manager it was in shape for production, but when it came to us the work had been simply well begun.

"We are buying almost invariably, nothing but good beginnings—the fundamental idea and plot for a picture. In that case, a play in three scenes became a picture of six hundred scenes. Elmer Harris, an accomplished dramatist who has given his entire attention in recent years to pictures, spent weeks making the adaption. Percy Heath worked with him to build up the continuity, and then a dozen others had to study the play intensively to carry on Miss Nichols' idea into the new medium of pictures."

Dorothy Gish's Latest

The much heralded city flapper will have to look to her laurels, for Dorothy Gish, of the famous Gish sisters, has now blossomed forth into a real "Country Flapper," that is to say, she has completed a photo-drama under that title, and she is to be presented to the public in this new vehicle by the Dorothy Gish Productions Company.

Movie Gossip

BY DAISY DEAN

Claire Windsor, one of the leading beauties of the screen, who has sprung into prominence in the past year, is prouder of her four-year-old son, Billy, than she is of her fame as a screen actress. Billy seems to feel the same way about the matter. He is prouder of his beautiful mother than he is of her fame.

Miss Windsor, who has one of the leading roles in the forthcoming feature, "One Clear Call," played in Claire Windsor and her young son, Billy.

"Too Wise Wives," "What's Worth While," "To Please One Woman," and "What Do Men Want?" She gained some publicity not long ago when her name was coupled with that of Chaplin. Since that time, however, Chaplin has been rumored engaged to every girl in pictures, but some people still persist in whispering about Claire and Charlie. Billy, as a dutiful son, will have nothing to say in the matter.

Are They Engaged?

Undenied rumors have it that Virginia Fox, erstwhile leading woman for Buster Keaton, is to wed Billy Joy, brother of Leatrice Joy. Neither of the two concerned says, "Sure, it's a fact," when questioned, but simply evade an affirmation by smiling. It looks as if it were a case of silence gives consent. Anyway, Virginia is to be featured in a series of two-reel comedies which Billy Joy is sponsering.

For women who are "no good at figures" Miss Teddie Gerard has a formula which is simple and interesting. She lays particular stress, however, on the fact that she is speaking of the biological and not the mathematical conception of the word 'figure.'

Teddie Gerard.

Women who spend thousands of dollars yearly in beauty parlors and health gymnasiums striving to lose a few pounds of superfluous fat are on the wrong track, according to Miss Gerard. She advocates the use of exercise taken in the home with a simple apparatus.

"It's a long, thin, wand-like piece of wood with a thatch of straw at the lower end," Miss Teddie explains. "The exercise consists of moving it somewhat briskly backward and forward over the floor with the windows opened to let in plenty of fresh air. Of course, some people call it a broom for short, but regardless of its name it is the greatest reducer and figure preserver I have ever known, and I use it."

Miss Gerard acquired the broom habit when she succeeded Gaby Deslys as the dancing partner of Harry Pilcer in Paris. She found the housewifely exercise kept her supple and limber. She also kept in trim for the vigorous stunts she had to perform in her newest picture, "The Cave Girl," by the same means.

Gossipy Bits.

Dustin Farnum, William Russell and Jack Gilbert are to start starring pictures at the Fox studios real soon. Their leading ladies will be, respectively, Doris Pawn, Ruth Renick and Renee Adoree.

Harry Garson, producer, is to direct Clara K. Young in a new story.

Shirley Mason sends this new photograph of herself with the note that she designed the riding habit herself and "do we like it?" We pass the little Fox star's idea on to any who wish to copy it. The breeches and boots are all that Miss Mason adopted of the conventional riding outfit. The breeches are of shepherd check. The blouse is of checked gingham with a round collar. Over this the original miss wears a sleeveless green broadcloth jacket embroidered with yellow wool. To top her bobbed locks a panama hat banded in yellow crepe is her choice.

Miss Mason, who can easily play the part of a girl of thirteen, and get away with it, is the staid and home-loving wife of Rupert Durning a Fox director. She recently made a tour of personal appearances throughout the southern states but she cut the trip short to hasten back to the coast and her handsome husband.

Shirley Mason ready to go a-riding.

Russian Film Star

Theodore Kosloff is a Russian by birth and he learned to act in the Imperial School at Moscow. He practices the intense and thoroughly realistic form of dramatic art as Betty Compson learned in a narrow escape she had from being stabbed in a scene of her recent picture, "The Green Temptation."

Kosloff, as the jilted Apache, was to attempt revenge upon the pretty Betty by hurling a knife at her. Kosloff's aim—practiced perhaps by his knife throwing scene in "Fool's Paradise" — was so good that Miss Compson was sayed only by the quick work of Mahdon Hamilton, the leading man who jerked her aside, the knife penetrating the sleeve of the coat he was wearing.

"There will be no doubt about the realism of that scene when it is shown on the screen," said Miss Compson. "I had no trouble in registering fright, for really thought I was stabbed. Theodore certainly knows how to handle a knife."

Vacation Schedule

Shirley Mason the Fox star, is taking a brief vacation down in Southern California between pictures.

How They Started

Margaret Landis is the sister of Cullen Landis and the wife of Bertram Bracken, famous director. She got into pictures through her ability as a dancer.

Thomas Holding made his debut in pictures in Rome, playing the lead with Pauline Frederick in "The Eternal City." He returned to America with the company and has never since returned to his native land, England.

Englishman to Play Mark Sabre

William Fox announces the selection of Percy Marmont, the English actor who has been prominently identified with the Ben Greet Players at Drury Lane and as leading man on the screen for Geraldine Farrar, Alice Joyce and Elsie Ferguson, for the portrayal of Mark Sabre, the hero character of "If Winter Comes," which the Fox corporation will film in the near future.

One hears a lot about the forty-year-old actresses who look but twenty-two but it is not always given so much attention when a young man of thirty has the ability to make himself look any age from ninety down. Cecil Holland, a good looking young American actor, is particularly marvelous in his ability to make himself look like an aged man, a foreigner or any other character desired b ythe casting directors at the Paramount studios.

His ability to change his face as desired on short notice has landed him many a contract with picture companies. He is shown here as himself and as a ninety-year-old sheik. Some of the pictures in which he has appeared are "A Wise Fool," "The Great Impersonation," "The Adventure."

Persia Comes to Hollywood.

Naishapur, Persia's golden town, has been brought to Hollywood, transplanted in all its georgeous coloring, with its winding streets packed with human flotsam and dignitaries, flanked by dwellings where dwell Omar, Shireen, the Iman and all the other personages in this colorful tale of Omar, the Tentmaker," and towering over all, the Temple of Zoroaster and the Palace of the Great Shah.

The reason for this is Richard Walton Tully's new film production, "Omar, the Tentmaker," in which Guy Bates Post will star as he did in the stage play.

MINERVA'S MAIL

Take Your Troubles to Minerva

House On Wheels?

Dear Minerva: We are planning a trip to California and other western points next month and wonder if any of your readers could advise us how a house-on-wheels works out on such a trip. There are five of us in the family, three small children, and it looks to me that the shelter which such a house would afford would be a convenience. But I'd like to know how it works out in practice. Has anyone tried it?—JOHN.

Through Seventeen States.

Dear Minerva: I have made two trips by automobile to West Palm Beach, Florida, and if I can give any information will gladly do so. I will give you my phone number, also address, which you may pass on if requested. On our first trip we toured across seventeen states and traveled 4,000 miles. We took a boat at Cleveland, O., and crossed over to Buffalo, N. Y. Spent one-half day at the Falls. I will not comment about the falls. They can only be appreciated when seen. From Buffalo we went to Albany, down the east side of the Hudson river to New York city, then Philadelphia and all the cities and points of interest and on to Washington. Visited Mt. Vernon and government and historical points in and around Washington. We camped all the way and found it delightful.

There are many annoyances in camp life that some people could not endure, but if one has the wanderlust and small capital you can sacrifice many comforts for the sake of travel and touring by auto is the only way to see the country. I would advise parties inquiring for best roads to Jacksonville, Fla., to go east and avoid the mountains of Kentucky and Tennessee. For if they are not improved since this time last year they are almost impassable. The highway is blasted out of solid rock and the climb is rather steep and jagged. "Never again." We enjoyed the trip through this section for its beauty and the many historical places. Lookout mountain is paved to the summit and the different tablets describing the civil war at this point are interesting. Cumberland and Signal mountains are so rough and jagged it is a nightmare. We enjoyed the caves, one at the foot of Cumberland mountain, called Wonder cave. Farther north were Mammoth cave, Crystal cave and Onyx cave. We thought them all so beautiful except Mammoth. It's only attraction is its immensity. Anyone expecting good roads through the south will be disappointed.

On our first trip we did not find any roads as we know roads here and in the east and they are not marked. But they are all worth while for the new experiences and people we meet and the difference in growing crops. We found the tobacco cotton and the peach orchards interesting. I would advise anyone taking a trip anywhere to get the Blue Book for that locality. This gives you all necessary information, description of country, all points of interest highways, camps, towns and mileage between. There are eleven books covering the United States divided into sections. There is also a card entitling the holder to Auto club privileges. This and the A-A-A club maps make a tourist feel confidence and save worry.

We are leaving for Florida in a few weeks. Have not determined the route but it will be east and south.

For equipment carry as little as possible but do not sacrifice your rest. Have as comfortable cots as you can carry and a cover over and under. Cover small pillows with khaki. Also have enough cooking utensils to make it possible to get a good meal without too much worry. I like the gasoline stove, which is improved this year. Cook two meals. Lunch can be slighted with thermos bottle coffee. A pressure cooker will keep food hot for lunch.

We had two boxes made the entire length of the running board. These were made just as high as possible to admit th opening of the auto doors. They were made of inch (so-called) pine and two bottom. Strips of iron on the inside made it possible to fasten them securely to the running board. The top of the box or lid was hinged on the outside. A hinged brace was put on about midway. When opened out and the brace adjusted it made a table. One box we used as table and kitchen. The other was used for a carry-all. There is much more room in these boxes than you would expect by the description and they are not unsightly when painted the color of the car. Would send all the wearing apparel ahead to the destination, except enough to keep clean and it does take plenty for that. This I think the greatest handicap to traveling this way. You cannot get laundry work done without laying over. I think the knickerbockers and shirt or khaki coverall dress is the best for outside wear. You will also need a wrap at times. If one contemplates stop-overs, have dress and hat of non-crushable silk. These ideas are mostly for long trips. I found one must rest and eat rationally to keep well.

We found it convenient to carry a glass gallon jug for water. This will carry one through a sulphur water section.

Just a little personal advice to the party asking route to Jacksonville. Do not end your journey there; go south. You will find good roads and wonderful scenery. It is much more tropical south and much more beautiful. Not any large city until you reach Miami. Do not judge Florida by the country around Jacksonville. Roads are very bad from Waycross to Jacksonville unless you drive the first car through after rain. Florida roads are almost always good.—A LOVER OF FLORIDA.

(Thank you so much for your interesting letter. It will be appreciated by many readers, I know.—MINERVA.)

Not What She Seemed.

Dear Minerva: Recently while visiting relatives in a distant town I became friendly with the girl next door. She was a very nice appearing girl, dressed becomingly and was spoken of as a good girl. So one evening she asked me to go with a boy friend and she would go with her friend to a dance. I had never gone with this boy before but had been introduced to him at her home. Well we went to the dance and coming home her boy friend parked the car along the road and he was allowed such familiarities as no decent girl should allow. Now I did not approve of that and did not even allow my friend to put his arm around me and the other two jeered at me and made fun of me saying, "So you're a goody-goody." And honest Minerva, I certainly felt like crying to think my girl friend would seem like such a nice girl and then act in that manner.

Next day she was as good as pie and invited me to a party at her home the following week. I refused to go and her bunch wouldn't even look at me. My relatives thought it funny I wouldn't have anything to do with her as they thought her a fine girl. Now Minerva I surely had a dull visit since that is I knew no other young people there but this bunch. Now I'm no goody-goody girl and believe in having a ripping good time. But a young girl's reputation is all she has and believe me I think she should hang on to it. But can one do this allowing such familiarities and running with such a crowd? I never did before. Now I don't want to tell tales out of school. If I should tell my relatives how this girl acted it would give her a bad name and I'm not going to do that. Now what shall I do? My folks think I am a trouble-maker because I don't tell them why I broke off the friendship with this girl and her friends. Please help me out of this difficulty.—PATSY.

A.—You did right in dismissing all interest in this girl from your mind upon learning how unprincipled she is, and how disgusting she acted with her boy friend. I also admire you greatly for protecting the girl's name and urge you to continue to do so. It will do you no harm to be considered as a possible trouble-maker whereas the spreading of an ugly story about the girl (even when true) is going to hurt her forever. Just tell your relatives you found she isn't your style of a girl and let it go at that.

A Group of "Tabbies."

Dear Minerva: I am a business woman of twenty-four years of age, and have a friend of the opposite sex who is all of twenty-seven. We are both very fond of nature and nature studies and have delighted all spring in long Sunday tramps and rides out into the country where we studied bugs and birds, flowers and fields, also had some adventuresome boat rides, swims, tennis games and golf lessons. I prepare a lunch on Saturday night and we start very early Sunday morning and make a day of it. It is absolutely the bright spot of the week and we both love it. However we do not love each other and have not the slightest intention of marrying. In fact I am engaged to a man back home who is gathering in the shekels required by my particular parents before we marry, and the man says he never expects to marry and I doubt if he ever does. He is a fairly new acquaintance, of less than a year, but a very special friend of my father's best friend in the world, the best vouchers I could ask of any one. Besides which I would need no voucher. There is no pretense about him. He is just plain honest and good, no pretense about him.

But Minerva the landlady where I room and board called me into serious conference last week and told me that either I would have to stop my all-day Sunday "trips with that man" or move. She said I was being talked about, that I was giving her house a bad name which she was trying to save, and that I was setting a bad example for her young daughters. Minerva I was so shocked at her ultimatum, so stunned at the announcement that my affairs were being dragged into the mire of horrid gossip that I cried all one night. I was going to move out the next morning but my co-worker in business told me if I did that, the story would go out that I had been put out and I could not live it down. So I am in deep despair and in doubt. What shall I do? Shall I allow these gossip-loving, narrow-minded people to rob me of my wholesome, healthful week-end recreation? And shall I remain on in an atmosphere which I now hate, now that I have sniffed the reeking air of criticism and gossip which exists, the presence of which I had not before suspected. Should I make these sacrifices in the name of convention and stupid propriety? Or shall I not. Please advise. I am very much.—IN DOUBT.

A.—This is one time when I advise independence and defiance to what may be called by many people "the proper conventions." You and your friend are most surely of an age of discretion, you are clearly of wholesome, sensible temperaments, and your jaunts are above reproach and give no real excuse for criticism. Your rooming house keeper and associates are surely hard up for amusement to attempt to stretch a Sunday outing into the proportions of a scandal. It just can't be done successfully. Leave the rooming house and continue your pleasure jaunts fancy-and-worry-free. Your reputation isn't going to be injured any by any such group of scandalmongers.

What About Your Vacation?

Readers are invited to use Minerva's mail as a medium of exchange on vacation advice. Write me of the problems of your particular contemplated vacation, whether by motor, rail or walking. I will publish your letters asking the readers who have had experience along the road you are going to travel, or the type of outing you desire, to answer with a letter of their practical knowledge. Such letters of advice and experience are of the greatest value to the uninitiated, and I find my readers very glad to provide such information.

Today I am publishing a letter from a reader who traveled 4,000 miles on one southern automobile trip, which is rich with information and interest.

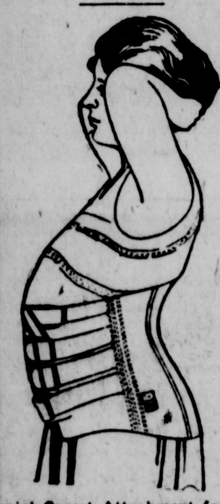

A query concerning a type of travel which seems to be more common each year is published today also. If any reader has traveled in a "house-on-wheels," the experiences of that trip will be welcomed.

The season when "vacation" fills the mind and empties the pocketbook is here. Let us help each other through this informal vacation exchange. It makes mighty good reading even for the wistful stay-at-homes.

FREE TO RUPTURED WOMEN

If You Have a Large Navel Rupture or Have Suffered Rupture After an Operation Try May Plan Free

Special Corset Attachment for Large Fleshy Women, Gives Neat Trim Figure, Holds Rupture Securely.

Miss Pearl Harrington, representing Wm. S. Rice, Inc., Adams, N. Y., has a special corset attachment that holds any rupture no matter how large. Even if the abdomen is very fleshy, it holds any rupture, with ease, comfort and security. Hundreds of women in Lincoln, and vicinity are in need of just such a support as Miss Harrington, is able to supply. Experience has shown that many women are unable to wear a corset because of large Navel Ruptures or those following operations. The special surgical corset and rupture support combined is designed to care for all such conditions.

Doubtless every woman who has been compelled to wear an ordinary truss or abdominal support knows the gouging, cutting and chafing caused by narrow bands. The weight of the abdomen must be carried by the band around the back and the pressure is sometimes very great, causing untold suffering. The special broad supporting corset attachment does away with all cutting, chafing and binding. It is light, flexible, durable, cool and fits the figure like a glove. It gives you a sense of absolute security and protection.

Miss Harrington, will be at the Lincoln Hotel, Lincoln, Neb., July 19 and 20, to demonstrate this marvelous Support free to all women. She wants to fit it on you and prove to you that it is a great blessing to all rupture afflicted women. No matter what you have tried now is your opportunity to find out just what you require, and get the benefit of a free personal application, by a competent lady expert.

Why be burdened with rupture and suffer the continual annoyance of wearing trusses if you don't have to? Why not use the Rice Method and prove to your entire satisfaction what results are possible in your case? Thousands have been able to throw away their trusses after a brief application of the Rice Method and there are thousands who are still suffering the tortures of rupture because they know not where to turn for relief. Miss Harrington, is in Lincoln, to give all such women the benefit of her experience and knowledge of hernia and invites you to her private apartments at the Lincoln Hotel. Do not fail to get this free demonstration.

Remember, Miss Harrington, will be in Lincoln, only two days, then your opportunity will be gone, so by all means don't fail to call and see this wonderful demonstration.

Daily from 9 to 12 a. m., 1 to 5 p. m. and 7 to 8 evenings. WM. S. RICE, Inc., Adams, N. Y.—Advertisement.

It isn't every little three year old lad who can sing and recite n'everything, but Gordon McCoy can, and not only can but will much to the delight of his friends.

But Gordon doesn't spend all his time singing and reciting, not by any means, he is a real boy, and gets out and plays with the fellows big or small, it doesn't make any difference to Gordon.

University Notes

Among the new instructors who will teach during the new term which started Wednesday are Superintendent A. H. Daley, of Hastings; Assistant Superintendent W. L. Curfman of the Lincolu public chools; Principal Mattie Allen Branthwaite and Miss Bigford of the Lincoln schools.

The advance registration showed great a demand for the course in school management given by Mrs. Branthwaite, that it seemed best to cancel one of her courses and make two sections of the course in school management. The large sections as shown by the advance registration were those of "Foundations of Modern Education," by Dean Sealock; "The Teaching of Reading," by Professor Reed; History 143 by Professor Cochran; "Geography of Nebraska," by Miss Anderson, and "Public School Music," by Miss Wilcox.

New System of Fat Reduction

Here's a new way for all fat people to laugh together at that old bugaboo—Obesity. The saying that "there is nothing new under the sun" does not now apply to fat people any more. Here is something new for them—a new sensation, a new pleasure, a new and graceful figure, easily found by anyone who is passing beyond the limits of slimness. Everyone has heard of the Marmola Prescription; that harmless combination of fat-defying elements perfected by one of the foremost physicians. Now—from the same high authority, there comes another idea—the idea of condensing these same, pure, harmless ingredients into a pleasant little tablet. Taken after eating and at bedtime, they help the stomach to dispose of all the fatty foods, converting them into compact, solid flesh, muscle and energy, without dieting or exercise. Marmola Prescription Tablets regulate the entire system—do for you what bodily exertion and self-denial can not do, and the fat, once routed, is gone for good. You can prove all this at a trifling cost. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists or sent postpaid by the Marmola Company, 4612 Woodward Avenue, Detroit, Mich. A case—sufficient to bring results—is but one dollar.—Advertisement.
